The exhibition of paintings loaned by North Carolinians are shown in the two rooms which are light and open in feeling with full length windows, in contrast to the somber, darkened Memorial Gallery. The works in these two rooms are in the nature of a testimonial from North Carolina collectors in appreciation of Mr. Morehead's purpose, and reveal some of the finest paintings in the state. Because of the small amount of space available, only 20 paintings from the many North Carolina Collections can be shown.

Six of the paintings in the loan exhibition are from the large collection of Katherine Pendleton Arrington who is also known for her continuous support of art activities throughout this state as well as in other states. The two earliest works loaned by Mrs. Arrington are a Praying Monk, by Zurbanon (Sp. 1598-1662); and a Belgian Nobleman by Jordaens.

Paintings from her collection in Warrenton also include a Portrait of Sir James Stirling by Sir Thomas Lawrence (1769-1830); Lady Riversdale, also by Lawrence; and a portrait of a Young Girl; a Colonial American painting, Captain Toddy by John Singleton Copley (1737-1815). Other Warrenton loans include: a portrait of General Waller Taylor, characteristic profile drawing by Saint-Memin (French American 1770-1852), given by Mrs. Mark P. Burwell; two portraits of President James J. Polk and his wife, given by Mrs. John Polk Mitchell; and a portrait of James Smith Battle, by Sully, given by Mrs. William C. Rivers.

Winston Loans

Loans from Winston-Salem include: Master William Trenchard by Sir Joshua Reynolds (1723-1792) given by Congresman and Mrs. Thurmond Chatham; a portrait by John Hopper, given by James G. Hanes; and a Sully given by Ralph Hanes. Another work by Thomas Sully is a portrait of Joseph Blount Skinner (1780-1851) which was loaned by The Reverend and Mrs. Fred B. Drane of Monroe.

Mrs. Charles Cannon, known for her support of State Art activities has loaned two paintings a landscape and a Madonna and Child by Elliott Daingerfield (1859-1932). Daingerfield lived and worked in North Carolina, and consequently is of special interest to people of the state.

The John Motley Morehead Planetarium's Zeiss projector is set up, in the words of Director Marshall, to do "everything which in my estimation of 17 year's experience is worthwhile and effective, and done with taste and understanding. We're going to do it better than anyone else . . . and that is no overstatement!"

COLLEGE SHU-FIXERY

Science, Theater Combined In Newest Campus Building

THE GIANT PROJECTOR which will throw reproductions of 9,000 stars on the dome of the Morehead Planetarium, is shown as Dr. Roy K. Marshall, (right) director of the astronomical addition to the campus, makes a last minute inspection. The intricate machine is a $75,000 Zeiss instrument. It is made up of an axis and two large projectors inset with 250 smaller projectors. Shown with Dr. Marshall is Tony Jenzano, chief technician of the planetarium.

Planetarium Is Thing of Beauty, Not Observatory

By Dr. Roy K. Marshall

One of the problems confronting those in charge of a Planetarium which opens in a new territory is to convince potential visitors that the Planetarium building is not merely an observatory containing a telescope through which the visitor may look at objects in the real heavens. Instead it is, as many in Chapel Hill are beginning to realize, an institution which combines the effects and the excitement of a theater with the precision and order of science.

Two astronomers have expressed their opinions as to what a Planetarium is far better than anyone else has succeeded in doing. Dr. Elis Stromgren, Director of the Copenhagen Observatory, said in 1925, "Never has a means of entertainment been provided which is so instructive as this, never one which is so fascinating, never one which has such general appeal. It is a school, a theater, a cinema in one; a schoolroom under the vault of heaven, a drama with the celestial bodies as actors."

A Thing of Beauty

Dr. Philip Fox, Director of the first American Planetarium in Chicago said, in 1930, "The Planetarium is not a mimic aping firmament but a thing of beauty, dispelling the mystery while retaining the majesty of the universe."

Coldly analyzed, the Planetarium instrument is a mess of electric lamps, a batch of gears and about two miles of wire, with 500 pieces of glass and a few dozen switches and rheostats thrown in. And the result is a beautiful work of art as the visitor sees a reproduction of a sky so realistic that he finds it easy to fall into an illusion that he is out of doors on a clear starlit night.

The advantage of the Planetarium sky over that of nature is that it can be controlled. No clouds can mar the sky although sometimes it is disconcerting to have a large lamp burn out and more than 4000 stars disappear in one instant! It should be quickly explained that precautions are taken to avoid this accident; it almost never occurs.

Hours may pass, the days and years may roll, forward and back, and slowly or swiftly as the narrator desires. At his console, which in the Morehead Planetarium is a beautiful combination of electrical engineering and the cabinet maker's art, he has before him the controls with which he can travel through time and space to suit the needs of the topic of the demonstration.

The Planetarium can show so very many things that in the course of a single demonstration it is quite impracticable to present more than a few of them. The topic is changed often enough to make it worthwhile for visitors to return at least once a month to see a new show and yet not too frequently that everyone who chooses to hear a particular topic discussed and to see it presented by the Planetarium will not be able to arrange to attend at his convenience.

The inaugural demonstration topic of the Morehead Planetarium will be held over for several weeks with demonstrations nightly at 8:30, and at 3:00 on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. It is called "Let There be Light" and it can be interpreted in many ways. The readings from Genesis with which the demonstration is to open will establish a mood of dignity and beauty which will continue through the succeeding story of the development of man's knowledge of the universe. From superstitious fear of the phenomena of nature, man has climbed to a condition of intelligent curiosity, the fruition of which has been his reaching for the very boundaries of a seemingly infinite universe and his wresting from the hearts of atoms the ultimate power of the universe. "Let There Be Light," as it will unfold as the first demonstration in Chapel Hill's new Planetarium will be then, a story of man's upward climb along the road of civilization through science.

The Planetarium chamber in the Morehead Building will be considered at all times a theater in which it is possible for visitors to enjoy themselves while in the process of learning new things about the universe. No other science is so fortunate as astronomy in having such a magnificent piece of demonstration equipment as the Planetarium projector, and no other University in the world can boast of having as a unit of its educational and cultural plant a similar installation.

Planetarium Is New Experience

away in the outlines of trees and buildings of the panorama of Chapel Hill as actually seen out-

In the center of the room, the Zeiss instrument towers above everything else. The instrument was built with 122 individual projectors, but Dr. Marshall has so modified it that only 75 of the originals will be in use, augmented by some 50 new ones added since the machine has been set up.

From the console, the lecturer's booth, Dr. Marshall and his assistants handle over 100 switches, push buttons and dials as the majesty of the universe is portrayed on the dome. Such events as the destruction of the world, the Star of Bethlehem, and a visit to the moon will be shown, with the topics changing monthly.

Hirsch Script Awarded Prize At Radio Meet

Program Was Used On Local Series

In the American Exhibition of Educational Radio Programs held recently at Ohio State University, Sam Hirsh's radio program on the North Carolina Education Committee received "First Award" in the Cultural Division.

The program a part of the University Hour series, was the only production to win an award in this division. No second or third place was given and only one program was awarded Honorable Mention. This was "Favorite Story" starring Ronald Coleman.

"The significance of the award is not fully appreciated until you realize that students here at the University have written and enacted radio scripts which have been selected as being superior to professional scripts," pointed out Earl Wynn, director of the Communication Center.

The University Hour programs, written and enacted by students of the three branches of the Greater University, have been heard over 33 North Carolina stations this year.

Other programs on the University Hour series have featured the University Glee Club under the direction of Paul Young, the North Carolina Symphony under the direction of Benjamin Swalin and the Chapel Hill Choral Club.

Also in the series have been adaptations of broadway plays and musicals and radio documentaries of outstanding men and women.

"The University Hour award goes to all the students who worked on the programs," Wynn said. "The Hour is their program and we hope it will continue to be theirs. We see by this award that we need not fear doing that."

The University Hour ran 26 weeks this year and was available to a larger audience in North Carolina each week than any other radio program.

Y Cabinet Picks McLeod for GM

The first meeting of the newly selected YMCA cabinet Monday night saw the cabinet elect Ed McLeod to the Graham Memorial Board of Directors for the coming year, and pass on a motion that coed activities be given two sections in the YMCA freshman handbook.

McLeod was elected to the Board of Directors to replace Sam Magill, new YMCA president.

The two sections of the handbook to be devoted to coeds, will include one on the YWCA and one on other coed activities.

Mass Meet of Seniors Set in Memorial Today

Class to Discuss Plans for Activities To Be Held During Graduation Exercises

There will be a mass meeting of the senior class today at 2 o'clock in Memorial Hall, Ed Davenport, president, has announced. All "49-ers" are urged to be present.

The purpose of the meeting, Davenport said, is to explain to the seniors the plans which have been made for their class activities. Nat Williams will present something of a social calendar for the approval of members of the class. As chairman of the social committee, Williams will annouce the plans for the senior dance, picnic, swimming party, and barefoot day.

The class picnic, which will be given the weekend of spring Germans, will feature the Bull City Night Hawks at Hogan's Lake. Seniors may sign up to attend at the end of this week.

J. M. Saunders of the University Alumni association will speak to the seniors about membership in the association.

Davenport has stressed the importance of all 49-ers attending this meeting because this will be their best opportunity to get a complete presentation of the class activity plans and learn how their funds are being used.

CP Meeting Set In GM Today

There will be a meeting of all Campus Party steering committee members, enrolled party members and members of the legislature in Roland Parker No. 3 this afternoon according to an announcement made yesterday by Vestal C. Taylor, chairman of the party.

Members of the steering committee will meet at 4:30, a general party meeting will begin at 5 P.M. and the caucus of C.P. legislators will begin at six o'clock, Taylor said.

Wallenborn Gets Award by Legion At ROTC Review

White M. Wallenborn, cadet corporal in the Air ROTC unit, was awarded the American Legion Medal Tuesday afternoon on Navy field by Col. David L. Hardee for "the cadet making the greatest progress in military proficiency during the academic year 1948-49."

In making the award, Col. Hardee congratulated Corp. Wallenborn on his record and said that the medal "is the Legion's way of saying 'thank you' for offering your services." Col. Hardee said that the medal will be presented each spring to the cadet making the greatest progress in military proficiency in the preceeding year.

After being presented the medal, Corp. Wallenborn took the review of the unit along with Col. Hardee, Cadet Commander Paul J. English and other members of the Air ROTC staff.

Special guests for the occasion included Executive Vice-Commander Wiley Pickens, North Carolina Department of the American Legion; J. H. McDade, commander of the Chapel Hill post of the Legion; Calvin Burch, adjutant, Chapel Hill post number 6; and Paul Robertson, past commander of the Chapel Hill post of the Legion.

Wallenborn, a chemistry major from Red Hill, Va., has an overall average of 93 in his scholastic work for his first two years. He is a rising junior.

Negroes Submit Application To Enter Florida University

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 9—(UP)—Six Negroes have applied for admission to the University of Florida, an all-white school, it was revealed today.

Existence of the applications was disclosed by State Sen. John E. Mathews in the text of a radio address prepared for delivery tonight in Jacksonville, Fla.

William F. Powers, secretary of the Board of Control which supervises state-owned colleges, confirmed that the applications were pending. He said the board probably would act on them next Thursday.

Powers said the Negroes had applied for several courses not offered by the state's only college for Negroes, Florida A. and M.

Mathews pointed out in his prepared address that the state needs more revenue to supply all necessary courses for Negroes at the Negro college.

The U. S. Supreme Court has ruled in cases involving other states that Negroes must be provided educational facilities equal to those furnished white students. The question, however, has never been a court test in Florida.

Florida has established a limited system of scholarships to enable Negroes to enroll outside the state for courses not offered by Florida A. and M.

The Florida legislature recently endorsed a plan whereby it would join with 13 other Southern states in setting up regional schools for both Negro and white students to provide them courses not available in their own states.

Thompson Elected Chairman Of SP

Botto Made Vice-Chairman; Jones, Oliver Get Posts; Group Picked

Fred Thompson, a rising junior from Rocky Mount, was elected chairman of the Student Party Monday night by an overwhelming vote over Walter McCraw.

Thompson succeeds Gran Childress, party chairman for the past four months who engineered the election of Student Body President Bill Mackie.

Mackie, in commenting on Thompson's election, described Thompson as "an exceedingly capable person who understands as well as anyone on campus the aim of student government. He has served in the Legislature and on the Student Council with distinction. He will provide the best leadership the SP could possibly have."

Besides holding seats in the Student Council and in the Legislature, Thompson has served as SP publicity chairman and as a member of the YM cabinet and the Westminister Foundation steering committee. He was defeated in the spring elections for reelection to the Council.

This spring, he was initiated in the Order of the Grail, second highest campus honorary organization.

Larry Botto of Bradenton, Fla., was elected Vice-Chairman by acclamation when all other nominees withdrew in his favor. He succeeds Walter McCraw.

Botto is at present in the Student Legislature in which he serves on the Appointment and Archives committees. He served as Party treasurer under Childress.

Ben Jones of Elgin, Ill., was elected treasurer, Sara Oliver was named secretary, Graham Jones of Winston-Salem was elected publicity director and Tom Boney of Wallace was named campaign chairman in other elections Monday night.

Named to the executive committee, which includes all regular officers, were Herman Seiber, Sally Osborne, Charlie Fox, Bob Evans, and Harry Sherrill.

Rings Available In Y Tomorrow

Dougald McMillan, ring committee chairman for the Grail, said yesterday that, because of popular demand, Lee H. Blackwell, Eastern Carolina representative for the L. G. Balfour Co., will be at the Y tomorrow morning from 9 to 12 to take orders for rings for the classes of '49 and '50.

McMillan said that this would be the last time that the rings would be on sale this year. All Juniors and Seniors who have not yet ordered rings and want to do so are urged to be at the Y tomorrow.

A $5.00 deposit will be required on all orders taken.

Negro Will Talk To Progressives

A Negro student at North Carolina College Law School in Durham will discuss his reasons for applying to the University Law School here, at an open meeting sponsored by the Young Progressives in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial at 8 o'clock Friday evening.

Harold T. Epps will discuss his decision and that of two of his fellow students to apply for admission here, and will also talk about conditions at North Carolina College and the reasons for some students there picketing the General Assembly in Raleigh several weeks ago to demand more funds for the school.

The meeting is open to all students, faculty members and other interested persons.

Abolishment Of Government Is Phi Subject

Student Politics Is Debated Monday

A forum type debate on the abolishment of Student Government at Carolina was conducted by the Phi Assembly Monday night in Phi Hall, New East.

Bob Coulter and Bill Duncan spoke of the evils of the present system and Charley Britt and Herman Sieber upheld Student Government.

Coulter questioned the effectiveness of the Honor System and asked if the system was really working when so many people try "to get around it." He contended that if the administration were autocratic from time to time, students would appreciate their democratic institutions more.

Duncan charged that everything corrupt in national politics "we copy." He denounced the "cliques" on campus and informed the Assembly that to get anywhere in politics a student must join the "clique."

Charley Britt said that abolishing student government would make UNC a "psuedo-liberal college." Admitting that the present system is not perfect, he maintained that the problem was one of education.

Herman Sieber compared student government to a labor union in that it gives the students a voice in their affairs. He called the self rule of Carolina students an "application of democratic principle."

Speaking from the floor, Dave Sharpe pointed out that it is much easier to "malign" politicians to do something constructive.

Another student stated that the Men's Honor Council is illegally constituted since it does not have a member from the medical school or from the pharmacy school.

Elections for the coming session of the Assembly will be held next Tuesday night.

Triple Concert Scheduled Today

In a student recital to be presented this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Hill Hall, the following program will be presented: "Two Part Invention in F Minor," "Two Part Invention in E flat major," "Two Part Invention in G major" (J. S. Bach), Wallace Zimmerman, piano; "Two Part Invention in D minor," "Two Part Invention in B flat major" (J. S. Bach), "Chopin" and "Estrella" (Schumann), Robert Looney, piano; and "Intermezzo in A minor," "Rhapsody in E flat major" (Brahms), Edward Brooks, piano.

The public is cordially invited.

IZFA Will Elect Officers Today

This afternoon's meeting of IZFA will feature the election of officers for 1949-50. The meeting takes place at 4:30 on the second floor of the "Y". Convention delegates will report on the Southern Region convention. Members of IZFA will make plans for summer and fall programming and expansion.

Professor, Red Set for Debate On Communism

Formal Talk to Be In Gerrard Tonight

A self-styled student Communist and a distinguished University professor will face each other in formal debate at 8 o'clock this evening in Gerrard Hall on "Should the Communist Party Be Outlawed?"

Dr. E. J. Woodhouse of the Political Science Department and Hans Freistadt, self-proclaimed Communist and graduate student in the Physics Department, will be the two protagonists in the event, which is being sponsored by the Karl Marx Study Society, recently-formed left-wing group of which Freistadt is chairman.

John Sanders will preside over the debate, which was scheduled when Freistadt issued a challenge to Woodhouse at an earlier debate on the same question. Two students and two faculty members argued the question at that time.

The earlier debate, sponsored by the Carolina Political Union, featured Dr. Woodhouse and student Bill Duncan on the affirmative, and Dr. Paul Guthrie and student Dortch Warriner on the negative.

In tonight's debate, each speaker will have 10 minutes for his first presentation, five minutes for rebuttal, and 10 minutes to question his opponent.

A general discussion and question-and-answer period, with the audience participating, will follow.

Di Will Select Officers Tonight

The Dialectic Senate will elect its officers for the fall quarter tonight at 9 o'clock, Don Shropshire, Di president, said yesterday.

The outgoing officers are Shropshire; Sam Manning, president pro tempore; Bill Harding, critic; Morris Knudsen, clerk; Gus Graham, treasurer; Artie Murphey, sergeant at arms; and Bill Foster, chaplain. Shropshire is the Di representative on the Debate Council and Harry Horton represents the Di on the Carolina Forum.

Nine new members who were elected to membership last week will be initiated tonight in a public ceremony. They are Betty Pleasants; Bob Clampitt, Archie Myatt, Edgar Williams, Joe Clark, Ed Hatch, Jack Roland, Bill Roth, and J. C. Rush.

Scott, Graham Speak At Dedication Services

Newest Campus Addition Becomes Part Of University; 320 Guests Are on Hand

By Don Maynard

Approximately 320 state dignitaries gathered in the Planetarium of the Morehead Building heard John Motley Morehead, donor of the $3,000,000 structure, present the building to Gov. Kerr Scott in an impressive ceremony yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Morehead, in making his dedication speech, said, "To the Governor of this State, the Chairman of the Board of Trustees, the Chancellor and the Acting President of the University; I say to you that it is all yours."

Gov. Scott accepted the building on behalf of the state. "We gladly accept this from your hands and are justly proud," he said. In reference to Mr. Morehead he added, "It has long been noted that men who make a success, generally come home to repay the state for what it did to them."

Mr. Morehead, "engineer, industrial statesman, minister from the United States to Sweden and interpreter of the Old World to the New," is an alumnus of the University class of 1891.

At 2:30, within the Planetarium, Dr. I. G. Greer gave the invocation, dedicating the service of the Planetarium. He was followed by Sen. Frank P. Graham, who praised the donor as the "devoted son and benefactor of the University of North Carolina.

"In the dedication of the Morehead Building," he said, "it's foundation, Gallery and Planetarium, we rededicate the University of North Carolina to liberty and learning, to truth, goodness and beauty, and to the God who 'made of one blood all the nations of men to dwell on the face of the earth.'"

Gov. Scott mentioned his "go-forward" program as a means of providing further developments similar to the Planetarium. He said he hoped the people of the state would get behind the rural road program, so that visitors to the Planetarium will not be identified from which section they come by "the color of the mud on their fenders."

Of Dr. Roy K. Marshall, director of the Planetarium and Professor of Astronomy, Chancellor Robert B. House said, to the assembly dignitaries, "I now present to you a distinguished man, a great man."

Dr. Marshall climaxed the dedication with a presentation of "Let There Be Light."

The arriving guests were met at the Planetarium entrance and directed to the dining room, where a buffet dinner was being served. From there, they inspected the building until 2:10, when they began assembling in the Planetarium theater for the ceremony.

Among the distinguished present were Lt. Gov. Pat Taylor, Speaker of the House Kerr Craig Ramsey, Attorney General Harry McMullen, Gunnar Dryselius, Swedish Consul to the U. S., Col. Harrelson, Chancellor of State College, W. D. Carmichael, Sr., and Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., Mr. Morehead's family, Katherine Carmichael, and William R. Kenan, donor of Kenan Stadium.

Spain Policy Causes Break In Democrats

Connally Splits With Colleagues

WASHINGTON, May 10—(UP)—Chairman Tom Connally (D.-Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, split openly with the administration today on United States policy toward Spain.

The Texan, known as the administration's foreign policy spokesman in the Senate, told his colleagues he could "see no reason" why this country should not resume full diplomatic relations with Francisco Franco's Spanish government.

"I've never seen any logic in diplomatic relations with Russia and not with Spain," he said. He believed that some foreign nations who are "bitter" against Spain are "influencing our State Department" against recognizing the Franco government.

Connally made his statement in response to demands from both Republican and Democratic Senators that this country review its Spanish policy. It differed sharply from the official U. S. stand that this country is bound by the United Nations diplomatic boycott of Spain.

Connally told the United Press his recommendation expressed "my own personal views," not those of the State Department.

Asked if he thinks this nation's policy toward Spain is changing, he said he believes he sees a "softening." He cited as "evidence" the U. S. abstention from a vote on restoring ambassadors to Spain in the UN Political Committee last week.

University Club Postpones Social

The University Club social scheduled for Monday, May 16, has been postponed until the evening of Monday, May 23, Ike Rolader, Club President said yesterday. At the May 16 meeting, election of officers for the forthcoming year will take place, he said.

Compromise Pension Measure Is Voted by House Committee

WASHINGTON, May 10—(UP)—The House Veterans Committee today dropped plans to write a new veterans pension law but tentatively voted to bring more needy, aged ex-servicemen under present pension provisions.

The committee accepted by voice vote a new compromise by Chairman John E. Rankin, (D.-Miss.) which would cost an estimated $12,000,000,000 during the next 50 years.

The action, subject to a final vote tomorrow, ended attempts to put through a new pension statute. It liberalizes existing laws to make more veterans of both wars eligible for $60 monthly pensions up to the age of 65 and $72 a month when they reach 65.

It would do this largely by increasing the amount of income single veterans can earn and still get pensions, and by removing the present requirement that 65-year-old veterans must be partly disabled before getting pensions.

Communists would not be eligible.

Committee members predicted the measure will win easy House and Senate endorsement and President Truman's signature.

The committee had been considering a bill with an estimated 50-year cost of $46,000,000 for World War I veterans alone, and $103,000,000,000 if veterans of both wars were included. The House earlier rejected by only one vote another Rankin bill which would have cost $100,000,000,000 to $125,000,000,000 in the next 5 years.

Under present law, veterans' pensions would cost the taxpayers about $35,000,000,000 between now and the year 2,000. Today's bill, according to committee staff experts, would raise this to about $47,000,000,000.

Aquinas to Hold Picnic on Friday

The Aquinas Club will have a picnic for all members at Hogan's Lake Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock, club spokesmen said yesterday.

College Is No Place for Stealing

When one considers that there are more than 7,000 students attending the University of North Carolina, the amount of stealing on campus is amazingly low. This is to the credit of the student body, but it is no more than is to be expected. A college student should be mature and well-balanced enough to go out and work for his spending money rather than resorting to cheating.

However, two recent incidents, coupled with numerous others which have gone unreported, indicate that there are those students in this school who have no place in a university. The first affair was reported by Charlie Lowdermilk, IFC president in charge of the cancer drive on campus. It seems that some of the cans containing money which had been contributed to the cancer drive were taken by someone in the lower quad. Stealing is low in any form, but stealing the money donated to the cancer fund is about the worst type.

Then at the baseball game Monday, someone entered the back seat of a black Oldsmobile parked across from C dormitory and carried away a number of softballs, bats, and gloves amounting to about $25.00. The theft occurred in mid-afternoon while students milled in and out of the ball park.

Perhaps the thieves were not students after all, and such is to be hoped. In the case of the cancer funds being stolen, the person doubtless was in financial need. If the thief were a student whose financial problems were that acute, then he has no place in college and should be out working instead. But there seems to be no excuse for going around pilfering cars of athletic equipment and other items there. It is unfortunate that a car cannot be safely left unlocked in Chapel Hill.

Senior Class Spirit

This afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Senior Class has scheduled a mass meeting in Memorial Hall. The attendance at this meeting will be indicative of what sort of class spirit the current 49'ers have.

Probably many of the present Senors recall the dismal meeting which last year's graduating class staged. Only about 50 turned out for the class meeting out of over 1,000 students. The definite lack of spirit exhibited that day reflected badly on the Class of 1948. There should be no repetition this year. The best way you can show interest in your class is by attending the meeting today.

The WASHINGTON SCENE

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Considerable astonishment was occasioned when Rep. Hamilton Chamberlain Jones, of the wealthy North Carolina Joneses, voted for Taft-Hartley repeal, because he is a gentleman with vested interests. Maybe this will explain it:

Mr. Jones, who belongs to the Rotary, Masons, Elks, Red Fez Club, Charlotte Country Club, and whatnot down in Charlotte, began getting concerned sometime back because he was incurring the open enmity of labor. It became almost a fixation.

A few days before the Taft-Hartley repealer was to come to a vote the strain of worrying over Labor's lost love got so intense he decided he needed a breather. So he snuck away to the ball park with his North Carolina colleague, Rep. Herbert Covington Bonner.

Our Nats were playing the Yanks. It turned out to be the most exciting game at Griffith Stadium this year. It was the day our stumblers wiped out a 3-run Yankee lead in the 9th inning and went on to win 4-3 in the 10th.

Rep. Bonner, who had cemented his decision to vote against repealing Taft-Hartley, and therefore had nothing on his mind but the ball game, kept on the edge of his seat, eyes riveted on the play He ignored all efforts of the wealthy Mr. Jones to get him into discussion of the impending vote.

"For Pete's sake, Ham!" begged Mr. Bonner. "Let's watch this ball game!"

But Mr. Jones kept muttering "Taft - Hartley" — "Taft - Hartley," even turning around to ask completely uninterested strangers what they thought about the issue. Then came the thrilling moment, with 18,762 fans holding their collective breaths.

The Nats had lost seven in a row. The Yanks were only one pitch away from their sixth straight victory. Then, with a man on third, and a man on first, Washington's Clyde Vollmer belted one which went for a triple against the left center wall to tie up the score.

The ball was still traveling, the fans almost dying with suspence; at which point Rep. Jones grasped the arm of Rep. Bonner and wailed plaintively:

"Listen Herb—I've just gotta do something to get back in right with labor!"

Taking the hazardous stand that eligible bachelors in Washington probably are more in need of protection from designing females than vice-versa, Rep. J. Glenn Beall, of Maryland, has introduced a bill to abolish breach of promise suits in the District of Columbia.

On The Dressing Problem

By Tom Wharton

A lot of boys around here, and girls too for that matter, would give a lot to know who the girl was that made the complaint so vehemently against the male students on this campus going to class wearing T-shirts, dungarees, and brogans, and don't shave often enough or keep their hair decently combed. The plaintiff argued that the coeds are always well-dressed and trim-looking when they come to class. Most of us will agree that her complaint is based on fact all right, but on further reflection we will agree that the fact is also based on reason.

In the first place, the guys around here that wear only T-shirts and dungarees and brogans to class are just being plain smart. What is the incentive to ruin your best clothes in a place like Chapel Hill where there is no one to impress with such trivial ways? You might impress the coeds by putting on clean white shirts and ties, and well pressed slacks and two-tone shoes, but what good does it do anybody to impress the coeds. On dates and social gatherings it is a little different, but then how many guys wear anything but the nicest clothes they can afford to wear on dates anyway?

Some girls might not realize that there are still a few men going to school here on the G. I. Bill of Rights, and on the G. I. Bill of Rights alone. Seventy-five skins a month doesn't go too damn far in Chapel Hill, not far enough to include several dresser drawers full of new shirts, a closet full of suits, etc., and a floor covered with good-looking bootery. In the common rainy, muddy weather peculiar to this place there is nothing much more practical and comfortable to wear in the way of shoes than the good old G. I. Brogans M-1.

If girls had to wear long pants they would see the many difficulties of them not encountered with skirts. Sitting on the hard class room seats or on the Y-court benches or South Building steps ruins the press that nice britches are supposed to have in them. Spilling coffee or beer on them doesn't make them look any better either. Also, some kinds of these garments are rather warm in this Spring weather, so what could be better than a good pair of dungarees or suntans for the ideal well-dressed collegiate?

As for the contention that the coeds are always well-dressed and trim-looking, that seems to be true enough all right. But nobody forces them to go to so much trouble to look sweet—we all know them any way. I am sure that there would be no complaint from the troops if the girls got in the habit of wearing T-shirts to class. Of course, we must realize that most of the girls around here would probably look worse in T-shirts than they do in all the stuff they wear now.

One man on the campus seemed to sum the whole problem up in one short, well-spoken sentence. He was quoted earlier in the DTH as saying, "The coeds are here to get married, we ain't."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ON HARRY BYRD

Editor:

In connection with John Stump's column on Harry Flood Byrd, I'd like to point out a few things about the senior senator from the Old Dominion. Having been active in support of Byrd's opponent in the 1946 Democratic primary, I believe I'm qualified to do this.

Byrd, as State legislator, Governor, and Senator, has been steadily tightening his hold on Virginia's political machinery—by means of the short ballot and shrewd use of the appointive power—until John Gunther was able with clear conscience to state that Byrd has "the world's most genteel dictatorship." When he is forced to make a public speech, it is a demogogic speech. When he can avoid speaking in public, he is happy in the knowledge that nothing burps or twitches in Virginia politics without his express consent.

His record in the Senate is unique. He claims to be Jeffersonian agrarian but voted against the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Bill, funds for rural rehabilitation, and national crop insurance. He claims to be for the small businessman but voted for the Reed-Bulwinkle bill to excuse the railroads from obligations under the anti-trust laws. He claims to be a democrat (small "d" as well as large) but strutted as the strategic leader in the anti-civil rights filibuster and has been a constant defender of the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting.

Harry Byrd is a study in power and little else. His record as a senator illustrates that he has supported nothing that was not of evident benefit to himself and his small circle of associates. Since most legislation introduced during his career as a senator has been aimed toward spreading the benefits of an abundant economy and an atmosphere of human dignity, Byrd's record has been almost entirely negative. Virginia has been for almost a generation in the power of a funny little man (like "Mr. 57" in the ketchup ads) unable to make an intelligible speech but always leaping up with a grunt to shout "NAY".

He has voted most of the time with the Republicans side of the Senate. Then is he a Republican? That is not an epithet but a matter of record.

I am glad to see the News and Observer point out this clown for ridicule. Harry Flood Byrd is fair game.

TO THE RIGHT

Editor:

There are several features in the Daily Tar Heel, dated Friday, May 6, 1949, which make the reader think he is reading a Hearst newspaper. On the first page is a striking headline advertising the coming appearance on the campus of one Carroll E. French, an official of the National Association of Manufacturers (more infamously known as the NAM, the most powerful anti-labor pressure group in the nation).

On page two is a highly propagandistic King Features Syndicate (Hearst) cartoon attacking national health insurance, which was a plank in the Democratic Party's campaign platform adopted last summer. Just to the right of this cartoon is a by-lined article entitled "Attack on Byrd." This two-column article, which supports "Republican" Harry Byrd of Virginia in his fight against the President's domestic program, would be welcomed by the Hearst papers, by the Chicago Tribune, by the New York Daily News, and by all others of the big syndicated newspapers, whose sympathies and interests are always united against organized labor and the common people everywhere.

Finally, on page three there is a strong propagandistic anti-Russian advertisement of almost half of a page in size paid for by the Pure Oil Company, sponsors of V. H. von Kaltenborn, who is infamous for his war-provoking radio propaganda.

In view of the evidence above, the reader is forced to wonder what has happened to the Daily Tar Heel in recent weeks, under the new editorship. The University of North Carolina is known as the most liberal and progressive Southern university. The political temper of the Daily Tar Heel of recent weeks gives exactly the opposite impression. Last fall the Daily Tar Heel had at least some editorial balance, but today it has swung to the extreme right.

Will the day come soon, Mr. Editor, when the one liberal feature of the Daily Tar Heel—L'il Abner—will disappear from the fourth page?

Big Four Success?

Do you think that the Russian proposal of a Big Four foreign ministers conference for the ultimate purpose of ending the "cold war" will or will not succeed?

This question was asked to ascertain how Carolina students reacted to this Russian proposal.

John Charles Moyle, 101 Everett

"According to Drew Pearson this is only one of Russia's attempts to offset their "loss of face" because of the success of the airlift over Berlin. The Russians have pushed the war in China hoping to end the war in order to prove to the world the strong communistic influence in the Far East. This meeting of the foreign ministers is only for the purpose of stalling for time in order to continue the cold war and to spread Communism throughout Germany as has been done by exactly opposite tactics in China."

M. D. Williams—Burlington.

"First Russia will have to prove to me that they will back up any proposal that they make with appropriate action. So far they have not lived up to the agreements that they have previously made. Therefore, I am not convinced that they definitely mean what they have proposed in this conference. And until they let impartial observers enter the "Iron Curtain" and report unbiasly their observations, Russia does not have any basis for action leading toward peace."

Sander Siegel—TEP House

"The fact that Russia has made the proposal indicates to me that she does not want to go to war, but at the same time, she is still attempting to aintain her position as a great power. Whether such a meeting will be successful depends upon the terms of which nothing yet is known. The basic issue is whether the United States and Russia will again come to a deadlock as to whose influence will win out."

Ernest Harrilld—217 B

"I think it could be a successful means to end the "cold war;" however, the degree of success depends upon the motives of the members attending the conference. The actions of Russia thus far have led me to be very skeptical about their desires to end the cold war. It appears that they possibly desire to end the Berlin blockade but, at the same time, it is possible this desire stems from some other ulterior motive which would still prevent lasting world peace."

Jim Mahan—204 Graham

"I think the conference will end the Berlin Blockade, but it will not lift the feeling of antagonism between the east and the west. It seems that Russia can afford to make concessions and attempt to end the Berlin Blockade since she has been so successful in extending her communistic influence in China. However, the mutual feeling of distrust between the peoples of the east and the west will continue to make it very difficult to settle all the controversies confronting the two ideologies."

Factotum

By "Wink" Locklair

Appropriately enough the current Factotum, now on sale in Lenior Hall and in local bookstores, is called A Goethe Commemorative Issue. The Goethe Bicentennial Convocation and and Music Festival will begin next month in Aspen, Colorado, and will continue there through July 16, featuring the first American visit by Albert Schweitzer, the foremost modern disciple of Goethe, as well as an impressive list of world-famous leaders in thought and music.

Realizing the tremendous importance of the Aspen celebration and other events to be held in connection with the bicentennial, articles for this issue have been written by Norman Foerster on "Goethe's Humanism;" by Herbert Reichert, who discusses "Faust," and that work's effect on two novels by Thomas Mann, "The Magic Mountain" and "Doctor Faustus;" and by Richard Jente, who reviews a new Thrift Press edition of Faust, which has been translated and edited with introduction and notes by J. F. L. Raschen.

There is also a dedicatory Forward and an expression of appreciation from editors Harvey Honig, Lee Knowles and Osborne Hardison, Junior, to Hanford Henderson of Chapel Hill, who assisted with this particular issue. And a number of Goethe aphorisms has been used throughout the forty-eight pages.

In addition to the Goethe pieces, there are twenty poems of varying length, mood and meter by a group of gifted writers, including two by Robert Kaske, who is now at work on his Doctorate in English here, and a pair by Osborne Hardison, Jr., who is an English major in the University. There are only two short stories in the May edition and one of them is the first-published work of Bob Fowler, a junior from Charlotte. Called "Vexation of Spirit," it is a subjective look into the life of Mary Price, a prim, thirtyish woman, the wife of a small town preacher who, while sitting for Sunday service, sees the power and the weakness of her husband and the people he is "serving in the face of continued ingratitude."

"Huckle" is the best rendition of this tune that your reviewer has heard to date. The rhythm is smooth and rocking and exactly right for shaging. Charlie takes a novelty vocal which is in exactly the right mood, then follows it up with a trumpet solo that has plenty of kick. "Again" has several better interpretations out. The arrangement on this one is plenty good, and of course the piece itself is very good, but where did Dorsey dig up this vocalist? Mary Lutes is the culprit who completely murders this side. Better she should have stayed in bed.

 Dreamy Old New England Moon

Vaughn has gotten into a rut with this latin tempo and can't find a way out. "Gigo" is the same old stuff and monotonous. Just how old this "Old New England Moon" I don't know, but it is worn completly out. This 1890 ballad lacks everything including inspiration.

This is a new one on me. As far as I can figure, he must be a Frenchman. Clever, huh? The album on the whole is not bad at all. It includes such Porter notables as "Love for Sale" (without vocal), "Just One of Those Things," Begin the Beguine," "Night and Day," "What is this Thing Called Love," and a number of others. The entire album is strictly instrumentl and in the modern manner. However, I don't think that this is the best rendition of Porter that I have ever heard.

"Baby" shapes up as a lilting novelty in argument form with the female party finally giving in. It is a cute number which I think will catch on to the public fancy. "Say" is a sickening ditty with little appeal for anyone.

Reserve Strength Nets Freshmen Track Victory Over Durham High

Coach Dick Hollander's Tar Baby trackmen edged out the Durham High squad by the score of 63-58 yesterday in spite of nine first places taken by the visitors to Carolina's five.

The Tar Heel freshmen came through with a sizable array of second and third places to post the victory.

Gene McDaniels was the top man for Durham, taking two first places, one in the 100 yard dash with a time of 10.4 and another in the 220 at 23.2.

Carolina's only double winner was Romas White who won the pole vault with a height of 11 feet, while in the same event, Whitfield of Durham and John Kimberly of Carolina tied with 9 feet 6 inches. White's other first place came in the broad jump with a leap of 20 feet 5 inches. William Winslow took second place with a 19 foot 8 inch jump and Riggsbee went 19 feet 4½ inches for the visitors.

Gordon Hamrick's long string of wins in the mile was snapped when Byrd of Durham High finished ahead of him with a time of 4:32. Townsend followed to take third place for Durham.

Eddie Foy and Buddy Tulloch came up first and second in the javelin for the Tar Heels with distances of 145 and 142 feet Hines of the visiting squad took the remaining point with a throw of 132 feet.

Art Winsor turned in a 5 feet 11¼ inch high jump for the local frosh, taking first place while Moore and Wolfe, close behind him, tied with 5 feet 9 inches.

Lacrosse Lads Lose

Playing their fourth and final game with the Duke Freshman, the Tar Heel lacrosse squad was again defeated on Navy Field yesterday by a score of 12 to 2.

Duke's Barry opened the scoring in the game when he picked up the face-off and raced in to put the Blue Devils in front. Immediately after, John Bolgiano scooped up a loose ball in front of the Duke goal and scored to tie the score at 1 all.

From there on, the Blue Devils took command of the situation and scored nine straight goals before Kirk Manning made the score 10-2 at the end of the third quarter. Bob Kavanaugh played an excellent game in the goal during the rainy second half when Duke scored only three goals.

Carolina Netters Meet 'Cats Today in Final Conference Tilt

Currently riding the crest of a 21-match win streak the Tar Heel netters will wind up their pre-tournament schedule this afternoon when they meet the Wildcats of Davidson College on the local courts at 3 o'clock.

In their last match before the opening of the Southern Conference Tournament, Coach John Kenfield's Tar Heels will be facing one of the toughest squads in the conference. The Wildcats, although defeated several times before, managed to give William and Mary's powerful team a terrific battle before bowing in a close 7-2 match last week.

Carolina ace Vic Seixas, undefeated this season, will face probably his toughest competition to date in Bo Roddey, Davidson's number one man. Seixas hasn't been pushed to the limit yet and has lost only one of 43 sets in the 21 singles matches he has played.

Clark Taylor, Coach Kenfield's number two man, will team up with Seixas in all probability for the standout doubles match of the afternoon. Davidson's probable twosome will be Roddey and Whit Cobb.

In their last outing the Tar Heels pounded out a close 5-4 win over the powerful West Side Tennis Club of New York last Saturday afternoon in the Gotham City.

Although winning in straight sets, Seixas was pushed by West Sider George Masterson and the second set between the two went 18 games with the Tar Heel ace finally taking a 10-8 victory. Seixas also prevailed in the opening set with a 6-4 win.

Fencing Contest Scheduled Tonight

Tonight will mark a new height in the rivalry between Carolina and N. C. State as fencing clubs from the two schools cross foils on the main floor of Wooller Gymnasium at 7:30 and proceed to give their audience an expert demonstration of swordsmanship.

The program under the direction of Franz Ross, head of the local club, and Luiz Lousada of the State group will be open to the public and there will be no charge. Weapons for tonights contest will consist of foils and sabres, and with the expert performers that are scheduled to participate, promises to be a very worthwhile show.

Kenfield to State

RALEIGH, May 10—State College officials announced today that Coach Jack Kenfield, Jr. will take over the position of head tennis coach at State beginning next fall.

Coach Kenfield has successfully tutored the Carolina freshmen netters this season. He is the son of varsity Tar Heel coach John Kenfield. He will remain at Carolina until August when he will receive his Master's degree.

CH Wins Again

The Chapel Hill Wildcats continued their winning baseball ways yesterday afternoon by defeating Oxford Orphanage at Oxford by a score of 13-7. Bill Butler led the visitors at bat with a triple and a home run.

Tar Heel Baseballers Meet Wolfpack in Big Four Tilt

Although the Carolina hopes of retaining the Big Four championship have just about thinned down to a mathematical improbability, the local nine will have a chance to advance closer to second place in the four team competition this afternoon when the Tar Heels tangle with State over Raleigh way.

It will be the third game with the Raleigh collegians for Carolina and so far this season, the Tar Heels have had no more success with the State baseballers than they have with the pace-setting Deacons of Wake Forest, current Big Four leaders and a shoo-in to take the title from Carolina.

State Has Won Both

The charges of local coach Bunn Hearn have dropped two close tussles with the Cow College athletes and will have an opportunity of revenge in today's contest. State won the first clash over in Raleigh, a game that will long be remembered as the game of the disputed home run that led to the Tar Heel defeat.

The return fray here in the local ball orchard was also taken by State as the Wolfpack came up with a rally in the ninth inning to disappoint the Carolina partisans with an 8-6 setback of the Tar Heels.

In both previous ball games, State Coach Vic Sorrell has thrown pitcher Ernie Johnson against the Tar Heels and both times he has emerged victorious, mainly because of his mates timely slugging and not of his own superlative twirling.

Cassell to Go

Johnson will probably toe the rubber for the Wolfpack today and his opponent in the Carolina uniform will no doubt be Dean Cassell, a junior speed-baller. Great things were expected from Cassell this season but the Union, N. J. righthander, despite four well hurled victories, has suffered from a disease prevalent with many college pitchers—wildness.

Goodman Is Tops In Loop Hitting; Replaces Varney

DURHAM — Stan Goodman, University of North Carolina second baseman, has replaced teammate Sid Varney at the front of the Big Four League batting race.

Latest averages, released today by the league's statistical bureau, show that Goodman has taken over top spot with a .423 mark and is the only regular still above the .400 point. Goodman moved into the lead when Varney slipped to .393 by collecting only one hit against Duke in his only game of the week. The Tar Heel backstop is in second place.

Moving up fast is State's centerfielder, Willie Evans, who holds third place with a .382 average. Evans slammed eight hits in 14 times at bat last week and used his three games to climb from .250 into contention for the title. He has collected the most hits, 13.

Another Tar Heel, Don Ward, is in fourth place, a single point behind Evans.

State's Bill Fowler leads in runs scored with 8, and Tar Heels Ward and Ed Lamb have the most two-base hits, three. Don Cheek, of N. C. State, has two triples to lead in that department while State's Jack McComas and Wake Forest's Eddie Teague have batted in the most runs, seven.

Paul Livick and Gene Hooks, of Wake Forest, are still deadlocked with two home runs, and Duke's LeRoy Sires has the most stolen bases, four.

Carolina's team batting average is tops at .290, followed by Wake Forest, .264; Duke, .242; and State, .219.

Duke Dumps Golfers, As Wall Beats Ward

The ups and downs of golf found Duke up and Carolina down at Hope Valley Country Club yesterday afternoon as the hot-as-brimstone Blue Devils cooled the Tar Heels by the devastating count of 22-5.

A crowd of several hundred, one of the largest to ever see a college match at the Durham course, followed the feature match of the afternoon which saw Art Wall of Duke toss a five-under-par 65 at Carolina's Harvie Ward. The latter could catch on with no better than a usually brilliant 69 and Wall took a 3-0 shutout.

Bob Cox won the only Tar Heel match of the day firing a 73 to beat Bailey Glenn, 3-0, and account for over half the Tar Heel points. The other Carolina points came from a half a point salvage from the best ball in the first and second foursomes and nine holes won by Stub Sapp in the last foursome.

The No. 1 match between Wall and Ward was a par-busting venture. Wall won the second hole when Ward went over par and took the fourth with a birdie to go 2 up. Ward countered with birdies on the 5th and 6th holes to even the match.

But on the 8th, the Tar Heel lost the front nine when he took a 6 on the long par-5 and he never quite caught up again. He missed a birdie putt on nine and finally went 3 down when Wall birdied the 11th and the short 14th. After Ward just missed a putt for an eagle on the 15th, the Blue Devil closed the match out 3 and 2 on the 16th hole.

The summary:

Wall (D) defeated Ward, 3-0.
Cox (C) defeated Glenn, 3-0. Best ball to Duke, 2½-½.
McLennan (D) defeated McKenzie, 3-0. Hanes (D) defeated Brantley, 3-0. Best ball to Duke, 2½-½.
Reed (D) defeated Brooks, 3-0.
Brewer (D) defeated Sapp, 2-1. Best ball to Duke, 3-0.

Frosh Play State

Carolina's freshman baseballers will take on State College's yearlings nine at Emerson Stadium this afternoon at 4 o'clock in a junior Big Four contest.

The locals have split with the Wolfcubs in the two contests the two teams have already had with each other, with the Tar Babies winning the first, 4-0, and the State diamonders gaining revenge in the second tilt, 7-3.

Greenwood Dancers To Perform At Pageant, In Tin Can Friday

A crack group of square-dancers will take the spotlight tonight when University students comprising the Greenwood team pick up the beat and swing their partners at the Burlington Centennial.

The same group will perform at Friday night's Tin Can square dance, sponsored by the Montreat Social Commission, and open to the entire campus.

The Greenwood team, so named after they had formed a list of all the residential sections of Chapel Hill and picked out the "prettiest one," was organized last spring to participate in the Folk Festival held in Kenan Stadium last year. They danced in that first annual Festival then, and now are setting their sights for the forthcoming second Festival to be held June 9-11.

At present, the team is composed of eight couples: Arnold Wilson, the caller, and his wife, Linda; Bob Callahan and his wife, Ginger; John Brady and wife Clariese; Harold Cummings and Betty McMahan; Ralph Morris and Nell Evans; Nick Disher and Sue Stokes; Nathan Booe and Kay Graybeal; and Arnold McPeters and Rachael Schepkowski.

Wilson, manager of the Rendezvous Room, calls for the group as they go through their square dance figures. Bascom Lamar Lunsford, folklore expert from Turkey Creek and director of the June Festival, lauds Wilson as "one of the best callers" he has ever heard.

In the "buck and wing" competition, the Greenwood group has hopes of taking honors with the talents of Nick Fisher, of Asheville. The buck dance, used in folk festivals in the Asheville area, was taught to Fisher by Sam Queen, considered one of the best-known square dance callers in the country.

When Fisher performs, he resembles what might be termed a pogo stick on legs.

Initiations and Elections Head Coed Activities

Initiations, elections and athletic events head the lists of sorority activities for the past several weeks. Parties, of course, continue to be the topic of much discussion and planning.

Louise Alsup, Dublin, Ga.; Ruth Blaine, Sanford; Kathryn Haynaer, Charlotte; Mary Lorimer, Montclair, N. J.; Nancy Root, Raleigh; and Peggy Swinson, Wilson; were initiated into Alpha Delta Pi sorority at a special ceremony at the house recently.

Other new sorority members are Carolyn Tillett, Charlotte, recently initiated into Chi Omega and elected social chairman of the sorority for next year, and Preston Westcoat, new Pi Phi pledge who has been elected representative to the University Club from Spencer Dorm. Peggy Swinson, a new AD Pi active has been chosen social chairman for Spencer for next year.

In the line of athletics Chi Omega's stars are really shining. Sara Wakefield, Palm Beach, Fla., qualified to participate in the national Amateur Athletic Union recently, and before bowing to the graduates in the softball series, the Chi O team downed Pi Phi by a score of 29-1 last week.

Celebrating their annual International Reunion Day April 23, members of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority entertained alumnae from each year's membership since the Alpha Gam's have been organized at the University. The luncheon; given at the Alpha Gam house, was followed by a program.

Heiman Gets Rosenstock Cup At TEP Dance

Tau Epsilon Phi Chancellor Gene Heiman was awarded the Rip Rosenstock Trophy as the senior who had done the most for the fraternity during his stay at school Saturday evening at the formal dance celebrating TEP's 25th anniversary at Chapel Hill.

Heiman was also presented with a chancellor's key as a token of appreciation for his work in the house this past year.

Several other awards were presented by houseparty chairman Howard Lieber Saturday evening as Omega chapter's weekend birthday party reached its climax. Irving Silver became the first recipient of the Sidney P. Brooks Memorial Scholarship Cup, which was dedicated last quarter, while Dave Isaacs was presented with the Warren Bernstein award to the outstanding intramural athlete.

The dance also honored the fraternity's pledges and the final trophy of the evening to the outstanding pledge of the year, was given to Morton Glasser by Pledgemaster Marvin Nathan, last year's winner.

Following the presentation of awards, which took place during the intermission, the dance sponsors and their escorts and the pledges and their dates were introduced to the gathering. After the presentation there was a no-cut dance for the officers and the pledges and their dates.

Lawn Party Slated By Dames Today

Carolina Dames Club picnic will be held today at 5:30 on the lawn behind the recreation center on Franklin Street. Husbands and children are invited, and each family is asked to bring its own lunch to be served cafeteria style.

'It's Wonderful,' Asserts Queen Speaking Of Sigma Chi's Honor

"The most wonderful feeling in the world" according to Mike Merker, is to be selected "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi."

And Mike should know, for last Saturday night at the annual Sweetheart Ball, she was named the new Sweetheart of Alpha Tau chapter of Sigma Chi fraternity.

"I'm still so excited about it I can hardly talk," Mike admitted when asked how it felt to be chosen for the honor. "Saturday night we stayed up until 4:30 just talking about it." she added.

Mike, a junior, transferred to Carolina from Sullins. She is a member of the Coed Senate, WAA and Pi Beta Phi sorority.

A natural beauty loaded with pep and vitality, Mike has been in many contests of this sort, but "I never had won a single one" she said.

Mike was named Sweetheart at the ball after the eleven members of the Sweetheart court had been presented. Each girl carried a bouquet of red roses as she stepped through a large red heart. After the girls had formed a semi-circle, Bill Maceyko, president of Alpha Tau chapter, walked over to Mike and gave her a bouquet of white roses centered with an orchid in place of her red roses.

Following this, Fran Angus, last year's Sweetheart, presented her with the Sweetheart Cup while the boys sang "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi."

But the festivities didn't end there. At one o'clock the Sigma Chis arrived outside Mike's window in McIver Dormitory and gave her the traditional Sigma Chi serenade.

C.; Thomas Richard Patrick McIntyre, Springfield, Pa.; Wiess, Philadelphia, Pa.; Joesph and Curtis Joyner Ratledge, Guilford College, N. C.

Fraternity members and pledges held their annual Spring house party last weekend, which began with a jamboree at the Saddle Club in Durham Friday night. The affair continued Saturday with a cabin party at Crabtree Creek State Park.

Barbecue and Brunswick stew was served Saturday night, and the weekend concluded with a Sunday dinner at the Phi Kap house. The chairman in charge of the weekend was Jim Covington of Kinston.

Dorms Will Get Extra Phones

Additional telephones are being installed in the third floors of the men's dormitories this week, it was announced yesterday. Heretofore the men's dorms, with the exception of A, B, and C, have had only the one phone on the first floor and the service for the third and fourth floors has been anything but good.

According to J. S. Bennett, Director of Operations, this hardship will be removed by the end of next week when telephones will be installed on the third floor levels of Mangum, Manley, Grimes, Ruffin, Stacy, Everett, Aycock, Graham, Alexander, Whitehead and Lewis.

CAA Seeks Men For Alaska Work

The Civil Aeronautics Administration has openings for a number of qualified single men as aircraft communicators in Alaska, Joe Galloway, director of Placement Service, said yesterday.

Starting salaries are $3,718 a year, and men selected will be in line for eventual promotion to higher-grade jobs paying up to $6,340 a year, Galloway added. Additional earnings are possible in all grades through authorized overtime beyond the 40-hour week, and through a 10 per cent night differential.

Basic qualifications for the job are the ability to transmit and receive International Morse Code a minimum speed of 30 words a minute; to touch typewrite at 35 words a minute; and 18 months of aeronautical communications experience or an acceptable equivalent in education and experience.

GUSC Meet Will Be Held At Capital

University Day To Be Discussed

The last formal meeting for this year of the Greater University Student Council will be held in Raleigh on the N. C. State campus Sunday afternoon.

Of primary importance to the Council will be the question of the proposed Greater University Day. The original proposal called for the University Day to be on the same day as the State-Carolina football game. A stumbling block arose because of the early date of this year's game. It is the first of the season for both schools. Definite plans will be laid by the Council at this meeting.

The Carolina representatives, meeting yesterday afternoon, announced the appointment of Dortch Warriner as chairman of their delegation.

Carolina's new representatives to the Council will include Bill Mackie, President of the Student Body; Ted Leonard, Vice President of the Student Body; Helen Epps, Chairman of the Women's Council; Dan Bell, Chairman of the Student Council; Bruce Sanborn, Chairman of the Men's Council; Patricia Denning, Speaker of the Coed Senate; John Sanders, Attorney General; Al Lowenstein, Chairman of the Orientation Committee; and Warriner, Jess Dedmond, and Sam McKeel, who were re-appointed to the Council by Bill Mackie.

'Hamlet' Movie To Open Monday At Durham Show

The motion picture production of Shakespeare's great tragedy, 'Hamlet," which won five academy awards this year, will open a six-day run on Monday, May 16, at the Quadrangle Theater Page Auditorium, on the Duke University campus in Durham.

Starring Laurence Olivier,who won the "Best Actor of the Year" award for his part in the production, the picture will be presented each afternoon and evening, with a special student discount for both shows. The student price will be $1 and they can be obtained on the Carolina campus from the English and Dramatic Arts Departments.

If students plan to attend the picture individually or in small groups it will be necessary for them to obtain discount coupons before going to the performance. Large groups will attend the production together and their tickets will be available at the box office.

Anyone wishing information on the picture may contact John Parker at his offices in Swain Hall, or write to Quadrangle Pictures, Box KM, Duke Station, Durham.

Snowden Is New Editor Of Quarterly

Emily Sewell Picked As Associate Editor

Harry Snowden, rising senior from Long Island, N. Y., was named editor of the Carolina Quarterly at a meeting yesterday afternoon. Retiring editor Roy Moose made the appointment to the position.

In making the announcement, Moose told staff members present that 'Snowden is a man who has done a little bit of everything on the magazine this year and has done every job well."

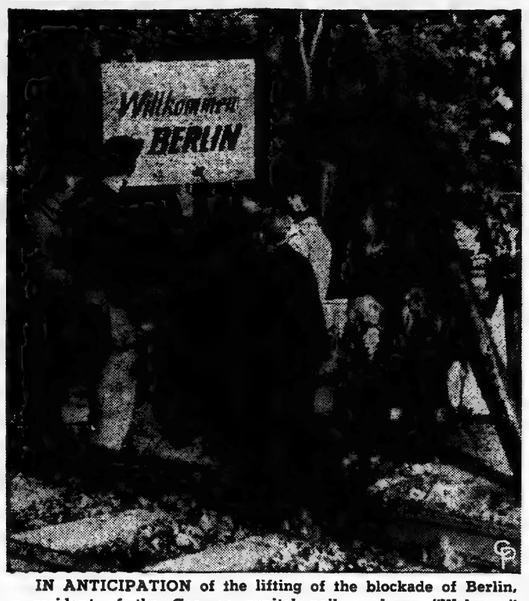
During the past year Snowden has served as associate editor of the Quarterly and is a past feature editor of the publication. He has also served on the feature literary staffs of the Carolina Magazine and as reporter, columnist and feature writer for the Daily Tar Heel.

Emily Sewell, retiring business manager, has been named new associate editor. Miss Sewell, a rising senior from Norfolk, Va., is a member of Chi Delta Phi, coed literary sorority, and has been on the staff of the Daily Tar Heel.

Business manager for next year will be John Taylor, rising senior from Chapel Hill. Taylor has been on the advertising staff of the magazine this year and has previously been on the staff of the Carolinian at Woman's College.

Before turning the meeting over to the incoming editor, Moose gave special recognition to staff members Priss Moore, Alice Sharp and Ewell Setzler, who he said have done outstanding work on the magazine this year.

Editor Snowden then announced that he still must fill several positions on the staff.



Square Dancing Set in Tin Can

Square dancing in good old fashioned, informal style will get underway tomorrow night in the Tin Can when the Montreat Social commission holds its third and final square dance of the season.

Open to the entire campus, the dance will feature the music of the Chatham Ramblers, a group of musicians who are employed at Woollen Gym and have organized a "gen-yoo-wine hill billy band" in their spare time. Calling and exhibition dances will be provided by the Greenwood team.

Bob Williams is chairman of the commission, which was organized at the YM-YW winter conference at Montreat with the object of providing weekend entertainment at low cost for all students. The dances are financed entirely by contributions.

There will be an important meeting of all directors and officials in room 311 Woollen at 1:45. All entrants are asked to be dressed and in their proper places at the scheduled starting time.

Planetarium Sky Was Clear, But The Rains Came Anyway

It rained inside the newly opened Morehead Planetarium Tuesday night though the starlit sky under the perforated dome showed not a sign of foul weather.

Dr. Roy K. Marshall stood enclosed by the Planetarium console, his wet feet protected only by soggy shoes. He had just come from the Planetarium basement where a foot-deep flood was still being pumped out. The floods came as a result of a clogged drain. . . and Chapel Hill rain.

The Planetarium Director immediately prior to the 8:30 showing had been in the basement directing pumping operations, his trousers rolled up, his shoes off.

"Before I came down here, I had heard that it rained in Chapel Hill," Dr. Marshall told an audience of some 200 dripping first nighters who had weathered the storm Tuesday night to attend the premiere showing of "Let There Be Light," open to the general public.

Workman stripped down to remove the water, which had held up the showing of "Let There Be Light" about 30 minutes. The flooded basement had forced ticket-seekers to leave the dry building, go back into the rain and walk around to the entrance of the planetarium theater to purchase their ducats.

"It certainly is a good thing we took this building off Mr. Morehead's hands before the rains came," Dr. Marshall quipped. "I'm sorry to have inconvenienced you tonight." he apologized. "The next time you return I promise you will not be imposed upon again."

Then, aside, "Yes I had heard it rained here, and now I know. ."

Senior Picnic Is Scheduled For Thursday

'49'ers to Party At Hogan's Lake

"The 49-ers Gold Rush" will officially begin Thursday, May 19, with a picnic at Hogan's Lake for all seniors and their guests, Nat Williams announced yesterday.

Williams, social chairman for the Senior class, made the announcement at a class meeting yesterday in Memorial hall. More than 300 seniors were present to hear Ed Davenport, class president, and Bill Shuford of the Alumni Association, outline plans for commencement weekend and the advantages of joining the Alumni association.

Social plans for the 49-ers include, in addition to Thursday's picnic, the traditional barefoot day on May 20, and an informal dance in Woollen Gymnasium on June 4.

The Hogan's Lake picnic will be free to all seniors, with food provided from class funds. All those attending must sign up in the Y lobby tomorrow, Monday or Tuesday. Although the picnics is particularly for seniors, the dates of class members will be welcomed.

When signing up seniors will be asked to indicate whether they will have a date for the picnic and whether they will want transportation. If enough people sign up for transportation, trucks will be hired, Williams said.

The picnic is slated to get underway at 4 o'clock, and entertainment will be provided by the Bull City Night Hawks from 6:30 to 10:30. In case of rain, the affair will be cancelled.

Seniors signing up for the picnic will also be asked whether or not they will attend the Senior dance on June 4.

Three more vacancies on the Orientation Committee will be filled by appointees by the time the Legislature convenes this evening, Mackie said. All the appointments except the Elections Board, which will be considered today, have been approved unanimously by the Appointments Committee.

Freistadt – Atomic Energy Scholar!

Hans Freistadt, graduate student in physics and the leading exponent of Communism on campus, is attending the University on a scholarship—given, amazingly enough, by the United States Atomic Energy Commission! Readers of this page are thoroughly familiar with Freistadt's philosophy, for the Stubbering, Austria, native is the most prolific "Letters to the Editor" writer at Carolina. He has consistently attacked the American form of government, its theory, and its practice—the same government which is giving him $1,600 to study in college.

The fact that it is the Atomic Energy Commission which is making it possible for Freistadt to attend Carolina makes the situation triply disgusting. It isn't necessary to point out that this is an explosive period all over the world, with the United States and Russia invariably on opposing sides. The situation is such that American youth are being drafted into the services for defense of the nation, presumably against Russian aggression. Meanwhile, back home, the government is paying a man who for all purposes is a Communist to attend college and further his background in physics for eventual study of atomic energy. If war should come, can't you imagine Mr. Freistadt perfecting some atomic weapon to be dropped on Russia? The idea is ridiculous.

Freistadt has held this atomic energy scholarship some time. We had heard a rumor to the effect that he was here on scholarship but neglected to investigate the matter. Fulton Lewis, Jr., however, in his radio broadcast Tuesday night finally unveiled the whole messy situation. Many students on campus disagree with Lewis on various issues and others follow him avidly. But his revelation that Freistadt is attending school on money paid by the Atomic Energy Commission is one which will arouse the entire student body.

The Commission certainly pulled a "boner" in selecting Freistadt for the award. One wonders just how naive a committee can get. Of all the 100 per cent Americans with loyalty unquestioned, the Atomic Energy Commission has chosen Mr. Freistadt! Of all the thousands of students scraping to get through college and the thousands others never able to attend, Mr. Freistadt gets a $1,600 scholarship! Surely there are numbers of good physics students in the U. S. who do not have a background entangled in Communism. What has happened to the Atomic Energy Commission's reason?

Freistadt came to Carolina from the University of Chicago, where he headed the Communist organization in that school. Here he is the leader in the propagation of the Communist doctrine and heads a little group which he calls the "Karl Marx Study Club." He has been investigated by the F.B.I. We don't know if Hans has a card in the Communist Party or not, but to us it really doesn't matter. The opinions he espouses are enough to type him. He has all the earmarks of a Communist.

Who was responsible for Freistadt receiving his appointment to the scholarship? We don't know, but David Lilienthal and his Commission certainly showed recklessness and incompetence in giving Freistadt a scholarship.

The Atomic Energy Commission can compensate for its poor judgment by depriving Freistadt of his scholarship immediately. If they don't, they are not only wasting the taxpayer's money but endangering the safety of the nation.

We are told that right now Freistadt has no access to the Atomic energy secrets. He is in the training period. But he is in line for advancement eventually to a post where he will have access to the secrets. However, we believe Hans Freistadt will never get that far. The American public will wake up one of these days. Still it is the height of foolishness to continue the scholarship which enables him to come to Carolina. It should be given to some person with loyalty unquestioned.

Meanwhile, Hans Freistadt sits back in Chapel Hill, pen in hand, writing out his Communist beliefs for publication in the paper, utilizing to the fullest extent Carolina's liberalism. It is one thing for Mr. Freistadt to go to school and criticize our government while paying his own expenses. It is a horse of a different color for him to accept a scholarship from the U. S. and then turn on the hand that helps him. Just how Freistadt can eulogize Russia while exercising the freedom and generosity of America is beyond our comprehension.

And the really great sufferer in the whole affair is the University of North Carolina. Through rumor and exaggeration the word has gotten out that this institution is a hotbed of Communism. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Ninety-nine and a fraction per cent of the students have no interest in Communism whatsoever. The University and students cannot help it if the Atomic Energy Commission sees fit to approve a scholarship to individuals with questionable reputations.

Many say that the best way to deal with Communism is through not publicizing it. We are inclined to agree, but when one of its leading advocates is given a scholarship to prepare for eventual work in an atomic energy laboratory, then the matter calls for action.

The students and nation have just cause to be indignant. Hans Freistadt publicly brags of being a Communist. He in no way merits governmental assistance. He should be deprived of his scholarship immediately, for the sake of the good name of the University of North Carolina, the taxpayer's money, and the welfare of the nation.

The WASHINGTON SCENE

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 10—My literary crony, Mr. Louis Bromfield, decided to grace Washington with his presence the other day and determined the great event should not go unnoticed. So he sent an advance wire to our top society feeder, Mrs. Perle Mesta, demanding a party in his honor.

"Because he has that farm out in Ohio," said Mrs. Mesta, in rounding up the guests, "He has convinced himself he is a plain, simple, tiller of the soil. He says in his telegram that he wants a 'lap' supper. What do you suppose he means?"

"Old Farmer Bromfield wouldn't know about it," explained one of the prospective guests, "but we have a newfangled French word for it here in the effete east. We call it a buffet."

The honored guest arrived in due course, fairly immaculate in dinner jacket, except that his legs were encased in high cowboy boots of a violent shade of brown. Moreover he insisted on tucking his pants into his boots.

This proved somewhat of a shock to the dames, who had gotten themselves all horsed up to meet a polished gentleman of letters. Mrs. Mesta, who entertains so many peculiar people anyway, didn't appear to notice.

After lapping up our lap supper, which would have tasted just as elegant sitting at a table, Mr. Bromfield began holding forth on practically every subject. He even gave pointers on military matters to ex-Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall.

He was going really good when Mrs. Mesta said: "Hold this for me for a moment, Louie" and thrust a flat object into his work-gnarled hand. It proceeded to emit the most hellish noises; being a hand siren thoughtfully brought along by Mr. Lawrence Wood (Chip) Robert, former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

It halted the Bromfieldian flow of forensics—but only until it had run down. Then the author-farmer took off again.

Mrs. Mesta tried repeatedly to cut through the word barrage. Finally, in desperation, she shouted:

"Louie—listen to me! Louie—I'm going to get married!"

It was probably the only thing that would have worked. It did. Mr. Bromfield halted in mid-sentence, his mouth still open.

"Eh? Who?" he gasped. "Not Vice President Barkley?"

"I won't tell you," replied our hostess. "I want you to just sit there quietly and guess."

Miss Hamilton, Notes

By "Wink" Locklair

For many people, the highlight of Sound and Fury's recent "Merrily We Love" was "We are the Girls of the Chorus, Kick!," a number sung and danced with reckless enthusiasm by the most outlandish line this side of "The Gayety" in Washington. And of all these young ladies, each of whom contributed to the popularity of this second-act scene, the most consistently hilarious was a blond, gum-smacking, tough-talking floosy seated (occasionally) at a dressing table on the extreme right, played by Virginia Hamilton.

This was not Miss Hamilton's first experience at scene stealing. Those who saw The Beggar's Opera in Memorial Hall last March will recall her humorous performance as Mrs. Slammekin, a scraggily, boosy, frequenter of taverns near Newgate Prison, Mrs. Slammekin was considered her first theatrical role at Carolina.

We talked with Virginia for over an hour the other afternoon in the lounge of Spencer dormitory and found her to be amiable, entertaining and most modest. She doesn't understand why people burst out laughing when she appears on the stage because, as she explains, "I haven't ever had an actual part in a play. I'm always in the chorus!"

"One time I did do a serious role, though," Miss Hamilton recalled. "It was when I was with the Harbor Players in Manhasset. I played Madame Atherton in a really gruesome tragedy called 'Children of the Moon.' Everybody else in the play was going crazy but me. I was the only sane person on the stage. Some part!"

Her home is Manhasset, New York, and she attended Central College in Fayette, Missouri, before coming to Chapel Hill last September. (One of her three brothers, is studying there now. She has a sister, also.) At first Virginia thought it would be nice to major in psychology, but something—probably the courses involved—changed her mind. On the recommendation of one of her professors, a Dr. Shaff, who graduated from Carolina many years ago, she decided to come down here.

Major confusion still plagued her, however. Mrs. Hamilton was more or less anxious for her daughter to play the cello and Virginia did for a while, but she soon decided that she not only looked awkward with the instrument, but that she was just so much dead wood in the orchestra. Her cello now stands forlorn and unfiddled in its case under the stairs in Spencer.

So far as is known, Virginia is now majoring in Dramatic Art, a turn of events which may have been inspired by a recitation she once gave of "Casey at the Bat," during an "Oral Interpretation" class. At any rate she has been interested in the theatre since that time and has been seen or heard here in "H.M.S. Pinafore" and with the Women's Glee Club, in addition to the other shows mentioned. She was sound technician for "Apple Tree Farm," assistant electrician for "The Little Foxes," and has worked on crew for "I Remember Mama," "Egypt Lan," and several one-act experimentals.

This summer Virginia will continue her program of obtaining a well-rounded education by taking sociology at Adelphi College in Garden City, Long Island, and, if possible, she'd like to do something in summer stock. Next fall she will return to Chapel Hill where she feels sure her talent will again be relegated to the chorus. "I'm hopelessly typed," she moaned. But it is no moaning matter when a member of the chorus continues to dominate the stage without saying more than a word or two which is just what Virginia Hamilton has been doing a good many times this season. . .

NOTES. . . The University Men's Glee Club will leave by bus for Lynchburg, Va., tomorrow where they will sing a joint concert with the Randolph-Macon Women's Chorus Friday evening. They will return to Chapel Hill Saturday. . . . . The excellent article in the current issue of TIME magazine on the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra and Conductor Swalin was prepared by a Miss Moran of the magazine's Washington bureau.

She was given the assignment by Dorothea Bourne who had done research on the story in Now York. Miss Moran met the orchestra in Laurinburg, covered the concert there, rode with the musicians on their special buses from Laurinburg to Charlotte, took a plane from Charlotte back to Washington and filed her story from there. Next year LIFE magazine is going to send photographers out with the Little Symphony when it begins touring the State.

Anyone who saw the entertaining performances here of "Le Medecin Malgre Lui," may be interested to know that the Moliere's opera Charles Gounod composed from that play will be given a performance tonight in Spartanburg, South Carolina, under the title of "The Frantic Physician." It will be part of that city's annual music festival.

On Foreign Policy

By Jonathan Marshall

American foreign policy often fades into the back of our minds when we live away from the great centers of foreign commerce. But even in these places our past mistakes are all too often overlooked.

Although everyone still remembers the recent war, many people have already begun to forget the causes of the war, and the ideals for which we supposedly fought.

Undoubtly the long-range basic causes of war can be attributed to geopolitical causes and to psychological tensions and insecurities; however, the immediate aims were, in theory, to protect the "democratic way of life."

Since VJ day the American record has been erratic, to say the least. In Germany we have failed miserably in restoring the democratic leaders and in building a grass roots democracy. Many of Hitler's flunkies have returned to power, and there has been almost no progress in destroying ther controlling cartels.

In the East we have supported the Dutch imperialism in Indonesia. This at the expense of gaining a great potential democratic ally.

On the other hand, we have given economic aid in order to help Europe rebuild itself. This is undoubtedly the greatest single positive force in recent American foreign policy, for a strong democracy can only exist when there is a measure of economic prosperity and security.

The economic weapon has proven to be our strongest defense against Russia. Our political weapons have not been too successful.

Because we do not hear much about the totalitarian government in Spain, many people tend to minimize it, and under the guise of creating another bastian of strength against Russia, they tell us we should give Franco full recognition.

Chairman Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is the most recent advocate of full diplomatic relations with Spain. It would be hardly consistent with our ideals to recognize a government whose record has been every bit as bad as was that of Nazi Germany.

Rather than strengthening our bargaining position with Russia, such recognition would weaken our position. It would give Russia one of the best political propaganda weapons that she has had.

It was rather humerous to notice the other day in the special supplement to the DTH that the Planetarium Art Gallery was featuring paintings by William Mead Prince.

Later in the article four Dutch masters from the time of Rembrandt were mentioned. One of these was a Mr. Van RiJn—the great Rembrandt himself, but he was apparently completely over-looked in the publicity.

Perhaps it is heresy, but this columnist feels that the Morehead building's greatest contributions to Carolina are the Rembrandt, a very beautiful tapestry, a couple of beautiful oriental rugs, and some of the finest antique furniture that can be found anywhere.

In contrast to the somewhat cold exterior, the building is furnished with a luxurient opulence on the inside. One only hopes that visitors will be careful, and will respect the value of the many showpieces.

Peace Conference

By Charlie Kauffman

"It's going to be a rough and tumble affair, this Paris Peace Conference." Lord Balfour said that in 1918 and Charlie Kauffman said that in 1949. On Thursday, Philip Jessup will leave for Paris to construct with Bevin's and Schumann's representatives the allied front which the three Western foreign-ministers will present to the Russians on May 23.

The terms for real peace therein will not approach generosity. There will be no consideration of the peace of the world. The Russians can either take what we choose to offer or pack up their portfolios and fly back to Moscow.

No wonder no enthusiasm was shown in official Washington circles when the conference date was announced. They know the Soviet cannot possibly accept our terms with any vestige of honor. But then our whole foreign policy stinks.

We aren't going to be satisfied, that we won the Battle of Berlin, try to sit down with the Russians and "work out a compromise satisfactory to all parties in the interest of world peace."

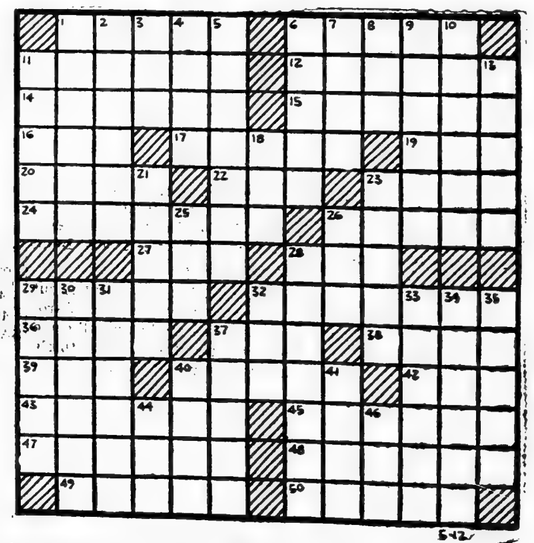
We continue to bandy these old cliches around, President Truman is particularly good at it, knowing full well that we are not going to compromise and that we are not going to act in the interest of anybody's peace, even our own. We could at the least hold our own position if the Russians would not compromise. But wait and see: they will not have a chance.

It doesn't take a great mind to comprehend the events of the years since 1945. Because Russia has taken it upon herhelf to absorb as much surrounding territory as she could digest, as we have done on several occasions, we have condemned her vigorously.

We insist the Russians are hell-bent on world revolution. They are "aggressive." It took a little more than naivete to get us into Greece and Turkey.

As far as her economic system is concerned, the Soviets believe we are hell-bent on its overthrowal. It is extremely difficult for us to get rid of the idea that Russia is all wrong and we are all right. In fact it's almost as hard to do as it is to convince either Hans Freistadt or J. R. Cherry, Jr., that he's full of mud.

The attitude of our campus is certainly reflected in our policy: we aren't going to give and take and we don't give a rip about the peace of mankind if it means we do have to give.



While we have thoroughly frightened each other over the "Red menace" (some people have apparently never been told that all Powers have spy systems operating inside all other Powers), we have succeeded triumphantly in forgetting that it was 80 millions of these square-headed Germans who required 500 million allies 5 years to beat down.

Our newspapers and our State Department do not tell us that German nationalism was never so unrestraintedly rampant as it is today. Never before has German youth been so fanatically Nazi. And never before has the German soul been so determined to resist the intruders upon the sanctity of the Fatherland.

While we, in an effort to defy the Russians and all their interests, have turned our backs on Germany, 80 million of these folk, so capable of combat and so willing to fight with blood for the fulfillment of their destiny, are preparing a third onslaught against another group of 500 million allies.

As soon as the inevitable U. S. economic depression falls on us we will see in Europe an unholy sight something akin to the 1932 situation: a powerful Germany, a stronger Russia, but still on the defensive, a bankrupt Britain and France, and a Soviet Italy. And given a few years Germany will be prepared to launch the third act of her grand drama upon the world, a world whose history for the past century has revolved around her ambitions, played by a people who have by no means taken their final bow.

But why fret? Let's cheer for our side and send Dean all our grit and best wished for "good luck" at Paris.

Southern Conference Net Tournament Opens Today

Seixas Seeded On Top; Draws Opening Bye

By Lew Chapman

The stage was set last night and this afternoon at 2 o'clock the action will begin in the annual Southern Conference Tennis Singles tournament that is being held here at the local courts for a three day stay.

Host Coach John Kenfield and representatives from the six other competing conference schools assembled last night in a Woollen Gym office and after several hours of careful consideration annnounced the respective seedings and pairing for this annual tourney that is well past its twenty-fifth birthday.

The seeding ran true to form as the mentors selected Carolina's own Vic Seixas, to the surprise of no one, as the man to beat in the playing. Seixas is sporting at the present an impressive 22 match winning streak and should have no trouble in the play until he should happen to meet William and Mary's Fred Kovaleski, seeded second. Both Seixas and Kovaleski are two of the highest ranking collegiate netters at the present and the tourney seems to be built around them.

Forty-four men have entered the competition and of the 44, 20 have advanced to the second round without weilding a racquet, via byes. Seixas and third seeded Bo Roddey of Davidson drew first round byes but Kovaleski is slated to go against Ed Laberge of Maryland in one of the early matches this afternoon.

The first round matches are:

Hurt (NCS) vs Robinson (Md); Hicks (Duke) vs Cole (WM); Taylor (Car.) vs Burns (NCS); Morphis (WF) vs McCool (Md.); Clarke (WF) vs Warmath (Duke); Grogan (Md) vs Randall (WM); Kovaleski (WM) vs LaBerge (Md); Boney (NCS) vs Drake (WF); Longworth (Md) vs Dameron (Car); Taylor (Duke) vs Purdy (Md); McMasters (Duke) vs Watkins (WF); Culbertson (NCS) vs Ozenberg (WM).

The second round pairings are:

Seixas (Car) vs Mumford (WF); Macken (WM) vs Keenan (Car); Keesler (Davidson) vs Winstead (Car); Hammock (WF) vs Corloss (Duke); Atwater (WM) vs Tapley (Duke); Gruner (Car) vs Chenault (WM); Roddey (Davidson) vs Wilder (Car); Regan (NCS) vs Wesley (Duke); Weathers (NCS) vs Rice (Car); Galloway (WM) vs Montesanti (NCS).

Fencing Exhibition Held In Woollen

A new sport, fencing, was added to the impressive list of sports already offered at Carolina last night.

Over 200 interested spectators were present at a short but instructive exhibition between the N.C. State and Carolina fencing squads in Woollen Gym.

Exhibitions of foil and sabre fencing and an exhibition of fundamentals by the entire State team, led by Luriz Lousada, captain and instructor of the Raleigh team, made up the program for the evening.

Lousada and David Evans of State opened the meeting with a demonstration of fencing with foils, and then they were followed by a match between Gil Fox of Carolina and Lex Baysingber of State. Baysingber then met Jack Armstrong, also of State in still another exhibition of the foils.

Bob Armfield, State sabre fencer, and Don Williams, president of the Carolina club, tangled in a match with the heavier weapons, and Dr. Franz Ross, coach of the local team, and Lousada put on a demonstration of foils in the finale.

Local Netters Take Win Number 23 With 5-4 Decision Over Davidson

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Carolina's high-riding netters wound up their pre-tourney schedule yesterday by edging past a powerful Davidson team, 5-4 on the slow, damp local courts for their 23rd straight win of the season.

The Tar Heels of Coach John Kenfield were hard pressed all the way. Each match was bitterly contested and the feature doubles attraction was forced to go 36 games before the Davidson duet pulled out the Wildcats' fourth point of the afternoon.

Both Carolina number one man Vic Seixas and number two man Clark Taylor were battled right down to the final point before pulling out wins.

Seixas' match with highly-touted Bo Roddey was the feature of the day and the two turned in some very fine tennis to the delight of the several hundred fans in the gallery.

The blonde Tar Heels ace swept to an easy 6-1 first set victory and got off to a quick 1-love second set lead. Roddey, however, turned the tables on Seixas and blasted out five straight games to gain a substantial 5-1 lead over the Carolina captain.

Seixas then reversed the procedure on Roddey and swept the next five games to win the set, 7-5 and the match in straight sets. In the final game Roddey battled valiantly to hold on and the game went to deuce five times before the Carolinian finally gained the necessary two points for victroy.

Stiff Opposition

Meanwhile on the next court, Taylor was running into some very stiff opposition in the Wildcats' number two man, Ted Keesler. Taylor took a 4-2 lead in the first set, but Keesler came back to tie it at 4-all. From that point the two kept winning their own service until Taylor finally broke through on the sixteenth game to crack Keesler's service and take an 8-7 lead. After that it was mere formality for Taylor to win his own service and wrap up the first set.

In the second set Taylor had an easy time and breezed to a 6-4 victory to win the match in straight sets.

On the third and fourth sets Wildcat net stars Whit Cobb and Mike Williams rallied to win by respective scores of 9-7, 6-2 and 6-3, 4-6, 6-2 over Stan Gruner and Charlie Rice. Rice's match with Williams was another of the more exciting of the afternoon.

Wilder-Winstead Win

Duke Wilder and Jim Winstead wound up the singles action with wins over Henry Neisler and Bob Palmer.

The first doubles match was the one which lasted until the waning moments of the afternoon and found Davidson's twosome of Roddey and Cobb winning the bitterly disputed match, 3-6, 6-4, 8-6.

Carolina gained a split in the final two doubles matches as Rice-Wilder edged out Neisler and John Crosland, 7-5, 6-3 and Winstead-Gruner bowed to Keesler-Williams, 6-3, 6-2.

Summaries

Singles—Seixas (UNC) defeated Roddey, 6-1, 7-5; Taylor (UNC) defeated Keesler, 9-7, 6-4; Cobb (D) defeated Gruner, 9-7, 6-2; Williams (D) defeated Rice, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2; Wilder (UNC) defeated Neisler, 6-4, 6-3; Winstead (UNC) defeated Palmer, 6-2, 6-1.

Doubles—Roddey-Cobb (D) defeated Seixas-Taylor, 3-6, 6-4, 8-6; Keesler-Williams (D) defeated Winstead-Gruner, 6-3, 6-2; Rice-Wilder (UNC) defeated Neisler-Crosland, 7-5, 6-3.

Trackmen Meet Cavaliers Friday In Big Dual Meet

Thirty-two Carolina trackmen will travel to Charlottesville today to engage the University of Virginia thinclads in a dual meet on Friday afternoon. On Saturday, Coach Fetzer and his assistant coaches will journey to Blacksburg to enter their tracksters in another dual meet with Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The local cinderbeater will leave from Fetzer Field this afernoon at 3 o'clock.

Joyner, Saunders, and Seligman will leave Durham by train on Friday to strengthen the Carolina entries at Blacksburg on Saturday.

In the dash events, Crimmins, White, and Marshall will attempt to capture first place for the Tar Heels, while Terrell, MacKenzie, Hooper, Magill, Ross and Lewis will carry the Blue and White banners in the distance events.

Co-captain Julian MacKenzie will try to extend his winning streak in the mile this week-end. He defeated all his opponents in the dual meets with Duke and State College. The race in this event will probably be between Sam Magill and MacKenzie as the two tied for first in the Duke meet.

Taylor, Moody, and Byatt will be the Tar Heel hopefuls in the hurdles while Baldwin, Cowles, Harris, House, Russell, and Kirk will participate in the field events. Bob Kirk will be out to better his javelin efforts in the Southern Conference meet with VPI.

Coach Dale Ranson said that he expected top-notch performances from all of his trackmen this week-end.

Big Four Mural Leaders To Clash; Six Events Are On Roster For Today

By Andy Taylor

The spotlight on Big Four competition will shift to the intramural scene today with the holding of the second annual Mural Sports Day. Carolina will be the host team for the first time; proceedings are slated to get underway at 2:20.

First held at Duke last year, the home team won with Carolina, State, and Wake Forest following in that order. Contests will be held in six events: softball, badminton, handball, table tennis, horseshoes, and volleyball. A single elimination consolation tournament will be conducted in all sports. First round winners will be paired and will play for first and second places. At the same time, the first round losers will play for third and fourth places.

Highlighting the day's activities will be the softball nines. The Tar Heel team will be made up of the contestants with the best records in both the dormitory and fraternity leagues. Many fine players are among their numbers but if the Deacon soft ballers are in any way influenced by their varsity brothers, they should prove hard to beat. Paired on field 1 are Wake Forest and Carolina, on field 4 it will be State and Duke.

Handball is to be played on the outdoor courts under one-wall rules. Representing the Tar Heels will be Joe Zohram, L. R. Holoman, Johnny Pyre, Bill Buffaloe, Roy Jones, and Tom Clayton. State and Wake Forest will see action on courts 1 & 2 while Carolina and Duke compete on courts 3 & 4.

Sport's Day Program

Here is the schedule of today's Big Four Mural events:

Softball—2:20—diamonds 1 and 4.

Handball — 2:20 — outdoor courts 1-4.

Volleyball—2:20—main floor Woollen, courts 1 and 3.

Table tennis—2:20—main floor Woollen, tables 1-6.

Badminton—2:20—main floor Woollen, courts 1-6.

Horseshoes—2:20—horseshoe pits 1-6.

Archery—3:00—Fetzer Field

In volleyball, Duke and State will see Duke and Carolina on tables 1-3, and Wake Forest and State wielding padles on tables 4-6.

The badminton schedule calls for Wake Forest to play Carolina on courts 1-3, Duke and State on courts 4-6. All three of the latter events will take place on the main floor of Woollen Gym. In the horseshoe pits, it will be State and Wake Forest pitching in 1-3, and Carolina and Duke in pits 4-6. An invitational archery tournament will also be held on Fetzer Field beginning at 3 o'clock. The tournament is sponsored by the University Archery Club in connection with the Mural department. The results will not affect the final score.

The University Badminton Club will take to the courts for the Blue and White, while an all-star handball team has been picked to represent Carolina in that event. The table tennis team is composed of members of the ATO and Town groups. Sigma Nu will do the honors in the horseshoe tournament while the Phi Gams will carry the weight of the volleyball attack.

Weatherman Wins!

Varsity, Frosh Are Rained Out; To Meet State Again Today

The third place Tar Heel baseballers were all set for another crack at the Cow College nine yesterday, but the weather man, doubtless thinking the locals were playing Wake Forest again, absolutely refused to cooperate.

The Carolina and State freshmen were also the innocent victims of his evil. The Tar Babies have split with the Wolfcubs in their last two meetings and the tie was scheduled to be broken today.

The varsity team, barring any further weather complications, will tangle with second place State today at Raleigh with the hope of going a little further toward dispossessing them of their runner-up position.

The Tar Heels have had little success to date in their clashes with the Wolfpack. State won both of the meets, the first, over at Devereaux Meadow in Raleigh where a disputed home run figured prominently in the Carolina defeat.

The locals were defeated the second time by the State men here in their own Emerson Stadium by a score of 8-6. Pitcher Ernie Johnson was on the mound for State in both games.

It will probably be Johnson hurling for the Wolfpack today while Dean Cassell will likely fill the mound for Coach Bunn Hearn's squad.

While the big boys fight it out over in the capital city the Carolina and State freshmen will come together for their third tussle here in Emerson Stadium.

The Frosh are also drawing close to the end of a successful season and would like to make their record more substantial with another win over the Wolfpack yearlings. The Tar Babies won the first of the two previous clashes with ease but two weeks ago in a return contest, State swamped the local youngsters in a humiliating setback.

TEN UNIVERSITIES TO BENEFIT BY GRANTS FOR UNRESTRICTED FUNDAMENTAL RESEARCH

With a view to stock-piling basic knowledge, the Du Pont Company has announced a program of grants-in-aid for the college year 1949-50 to 10 universities for unrestricted use in the field of fundamental research in chemistry.

The grants-in-aid of $10,000 each are to be used for research that has no immediate commercial goal. The universities themselves are to select the projects in which the grants will be employed, and results of the research are to be freely available for publication.

HOW FUNDS WILL BE USED

Du Pont's purpose in offering the grants is to help insure the flow of fundamental knowledge in science upon which the future industrial development of our country is so dependent. It is intended that the funds be utilized for such expenses as employing additional research personnel or lightening the teaching load of a professor who is eminently capable of research of a high order. They may also be expended for the purpose of obtaining supplies, apparatus or equipment.

GRANTS ARE EXPERIMENTAL

This program of grants-in-aid is largely experimental. However, it is Du Pont's hope, should the program work out satisfactorily, to continue each grant for a period of five years.

Four of Many Outstanding Du Pont Fellowship Winners

Dr. Wendell M. Stanley, at University of California, is Chairman of the Department of Biochemistry in Berkeley and in the Medical School at San Francisco; Director of the Virus Laboratory. Bachelor's degree at Earlham College, 1926; M.S. at Illinois, 1927 and Ph.D. in Organic Chemistry, 1929. Honorary Doctor's degrees from five prominent American universities and the University of Paris. Has received more than 10 medals and awards for distinguished work in chemistry and biochemistry; co-recipient of the Nobel Prize in Chemistry in 1946. Du Pont fellow at Illinois in 1928-29.

Dr. Carl S. Marvel, Professor of Organic Chemistry at the University of Illinois since 1930, received his A.B. at Illinois Wesleyan University in 1915; A.M. at Illinois, 1916 and Ph.D. in Organic Chemistry, 1920; Sc.D. (honorary) at Illinois Wesleyan, 1946. President American Chemical Society, 1945; Director 1944-46. Has received numerous honors such as the Nichols Medal and memorial lectureships at outstanding universities. Du Pont fellow at Illinois in 1919-20. Consultant on Organic Chemistry to the Du Pont Company at present.

J. Frederic Walker is a Research Supervisor on formaldehyde products in the Electrochemicals Department. Trained at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Awarded Bachelor's degree in Chemistry, 1925; Master's degree 1928, Ph.D. in Organic Chemistry, 1929. Author: "Formaldehyde Chemistry," "Organic Chemistry of Sodium," "History of Chemistry." Du Pont fellow in 1926-27.

Frank S. Fawcett is now doing synthetic organic research with Du Pont's Chemical Department. Received Bachelor's degree in Chemistry, Furman University, 1940; Master's degree, Pennsylvania, 1944; Ph.D. in Organic Chemistry, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1948. Du Pont fellow at M.I.T. in academic year 1947-48.

77 DU PONT FELLOWSHIPS* MADE AVAILABLE TO GRADUATE STUDENTS

Again in the academic year 1949-50, the Du Pont Company is awarding post-graduate and post-doctorate fellowships to universities throughout the country.

This is a continuation of the company's 30-year-old plan to encourage advanced studies in the fields of chemistry, physics, metallurgy, and engineering.

It is hoped that the plan will continue to help maintain the flow of technically trained men and women who will go into teaching and research work at the universities and into technical positions in industry. Some of them, as in past years, may come to work for Du Pont when they finish their studies, but there is no obligation to do so: fellowship holders are free to enter any field of activity they choose.

The students and their research subjects will be selected by authorities of the 47 universities participating. In this year's program, 45 of the post-graduate fellowships are in chemistry, 4 in physics, 15 in chemical engineering, 5 in mechanical engineering and 2 in metallurgy. There will be 6 post-doctoral fellowships as an incentive to those who would prefer to remain in academic work in order to obtain additional advanced training in chemistry.

What Fellowships Provide

Each post-graduate fellowship provides $1,200 for a single person or $1,800 for a married person, together with an award of $1,000 to the university towards tuition and fees. Each post-doctoral fellowship provides $3,000 for the recipient and $1,500 to the university.

Univ. of North Carolina participates in the Du Pont Company Fellowship Plan.

Tickets Are Distributed For Barnet Dance Set

Tickets were distributed last night to all members of the German Club for the Spring Germans May 20 and 21 featuring Charlie Barnet and his orchestra.

The dance set will include a concert at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, May 20, a dance that night from 9 o'clock to 1 o'clock in the morning, and a dance Saturday night from 8 o'clock to midnight.

The German Club is presenting Barnet as its third dance set for the year. Last quarter the organization sponsored Tommy Dorsey's successful return to the campus, and in the fall brought Elliot Lawrence and his orchestra to the University.

Barnet's troupe, which features Eddie Safranski on the bass, took on the famed former member of Stan Kenton's orchestra several months ago. Barnet uses a number of modified Kenton arrangements, and dabbles in "progressive jazz," but he does not want to become typed with any brand of music, fast or slow.

The orchestra has just finished successful weekends at North Carolina State College, Washington and Lee University, and Cornell University, among others.

Other featured musicians with the Barnet outfit are Cliff Leaman and Doc Severenson.

Advisor Training Set for Tonight

The training program for student advisors will continue tonight at 7 o'clock in Room 206 Phillips Hall with an informal discussion of the duties and responsibilities of the advisors, overall chairman Charleen Greer anounced yesterday. Dormitory chairmen and the newly elected secretary will assume responsibilities.

Dormitory chairmen are: Alderman, Mary Brown Hill; McIver, Ruth Whalen; Spencer, Helen Strawn; and Smith, Peggy Law. The new secretary and publicity chairman are Preston Wescott and Caroline Bruner, respectively.

University Club Hears Weaver, Joe Pete Ward

The University Club Monday night had as its guest speakers Dean of Students Fred Weaver and former Club President Joe Pete Ward. Both spoke on the history of the Club, its purposes and its activities.

The Dean noted in his talk that the University Club had progressed since its beginning in 1934. He said that the club had come back with a "bang" during the last few years. Dean Weaver charged the new members present to "preserve the necessary spirit we now have, and aim your efforts at the highest possible level."

Ward gave a brief talk on the activities of the Club, and stressed the importance of planning, publicity and clearance through University channels as important to the successs of Club functions.

Norm Sper, head cheerleader, outlined plans for the forthcoming Carolina-Notre Dame football game next November and suggested the formation of a committee of four to five members to work with him on the fall athletic events. Sper's plan for the weekend in New York included the setting up of a special train for University students, arrangements for hotel accomodations for students, possibly a whole hotel and plans for presentation of card stunts at Yankee Stadium. All his plans were still tentative, he explained.

Hillsboro served as the capital of North Carolina during the Revolutionary War. Before that, Halifax and New Bern were the seats of colonial government.

Who are America's Most Successful YOUNG Men?

In anybody's book, one of them is Marion Harper, Jr. of Advertising's McCann-Erickson. Said TIME—late last year:

Just ten years ago, Marion Harper, Jr., fresh from Yale, got a job as office boy at McCann-Erickson, Inc., one of the six largest U.S. advertising agencies. Tall (6 ft. 1 in.), strapping (190 lbs.) Harper was far from the out-sider's idea of an advertising man. He was quiet and studious; he did not wear hand-painted ties. didn't smoke, showed not a single huckster characteristic.

But he had been an office boy only three months when he was moved into the copy research department where he could put his liking for market research to work. Not long after, Harper was made manager of copy research: at 28, only seven years after he had left Yale, he was vice-president in charge of research and merchandising.

By bearing down on market studies, he helped boost the agency's billings from $46 million in 1946 to a 1948 rate of more than $50 million. Last week in Manhattan, at 32, Marion Harper was made president as Founder H. K. McCann, 68, moved up to board chairman. Said an awed agency director, in summarizing Harper's rise: "He energizes people . . . he's got so much energy himself. The agency has never had such good teamwork before."

On Harper's team is his wife Virginia, whom he met while she was a clerical worker at the agency and married in 1942. She is now assistant director of McCann-Erickson's copy research department. Having no children, Mr. & Mrs. Harper sometimes stay at the office until 2 a.m., working together. Says Mrs. Harper: "I think he's quite bright."

Freistadt Causes Furore In Washington

Legislature Passes Campus Chest Program

Activities Office To Get $4,759 Appropriation

The long-talked-about Campus Chest became a reality last night by an overwhelming vote of the Student Legislature, but the body spent little time discussing the lengthy, complex bill.

John O'Neal asked the student solons to kill the bill in its entirety, but the short discussion that was held on it centered about its various clauses and several amendments introduced to it.

As passed, the Chest has a Board of Directors with apparently wide-sweeping powers as to the members of the organization, the appointment of funds, and the calling of "emergency" solicitations, among many other things.

Other old business passed included three bills, two of which were introduced to the assembly two weeks ago, and held over in the Ways and Means Committee.

The single one-week-old bill was the appropriation of $4,759.90 to the Student Activities Office for purchasing a posting machine, new filing cabinets, adding machine, typewriter, and reserve for assistants. The bill was passed after considerable discussion and question-answering by Secretary-Treasurer Nat Williams, also a member of the Legislature.

NSA Delegates

The Student Legislature late last night named five delegates and one alternate to the National Students Association convention this summer.

The delegates named were Al Lowenstein, Bill Mackie, Dortch Warriner, Herb Mitchell, and Ben Jones. Jess Dedmond, former president of the student body, was picked as the alternate.

Appointees Are Approved in Vote

All appointments sent to the Student Legislature by President Bill Mackie last night were passed unanimously, including that of Gran Childress, whose appointment to chair the campus National Students Association Committee was challenged by some legislators last week.

Al Lowenstein was approved as chairman of the Orientation Committee, Sally Osborne as assistant chairman, John Sanders as attorney-general, and Larry Botto as assistant attorney-general.

Other appointments approved were Bill Prince, Charleen Greer, Jim Hamrick, Charles Bartlett, and Joe Leary for members of the Orientation Committee; Lew Chapman, Mac Copenhaver, George Darden, Carol Homan, Ross Lane, J. C. Rush, A. C. Mangum, Chuck Northend, Bill Rodgers, and Robin Scroggs for members of the Elections Board.

The Childress appointment, finally passed last night, was postponed from the previous legislative session.

Down the Drink

PHILADELPHIA, May 12—(UP)—The University of Pennsylvania's ancient campus dry law went down the drink today.

School authorities announced that liquor will be permitted in dormitories, fraternity and sorority houses, student residents and the museum.

Liquor, however, is still taboo in academic buildings, the library, the student Houston Club

Mackie Tells Solons Plans Of SG Action

President Reports 'State of Campus'

By Roy Parker, Jr.

Outlining a seven-point program of action, Student Body President Bill Mackie last night delivered a State of the Campus address to the Student Legislature on his plans for student government during his tenure in office.

Points in his program included closer unity between the branches of student government, better student-faculty liasion, bringing student opinion to bear on academic questions, maintaining student and academic freedom, taking a bigger part in general campus problems, an improved orientation program, and suggested changes in procedure for student government during summer sessions.

Mackie proposed to destroy the "wall between coed and male governments," by a closer-knit orientation program and improved election laws. He asked for a smaller committee to replace the inactive student welfare committee in order to facilitate better student-faculty cooperation on common problems.

The president proposed an educational committee to begin an investigation, in conjunction with a faculty board, into changes in curriculum, and other academic problems.

Calling on the University to take the lead in the regional National Students Association, Mackie urged closer cooperation with other schools in the area in order to solve common problems. He outlined a plan to set up a committee to solve the problem embarrassment when interracial conferences are held on the campus.

"By combining the program at the top levels," Mackie said he hoped to provide a better, more comprehensive, program of orientation. In conjunction with this, Sally Osborne, head of coed orientation, was appointed as

Will to Work Is Neglected, Asserts Craig

Scholar Speaks At Phi Bete Meet

Modern civilization has removed so many of the hardships and obstacles former generations had to overcome that " the one thing our citizens do not do and have no incentive to do is to work, and that, I am sorry to say, is the only thing in our whole lives that in the matter of human progress is worth a row of pins," Dr. Hardin Craig of the University, noted English scholar, said in an annual Phi Beta Kappa address at the University yesterday.

Addressing a convocation of the student body and faculty in Memorial Hall, for which all classes were suspended, Dr. Craig took a pessimistic view of "the will to work" today. "And yet," he said, "I will go so far as to say that the road is open and that, idle and self-indulgent as we are, there are grounds of hope."

Dr. Craig, who was introduced by Chancellor R. B. House, spoke on "The Problem of Progress."

"Barring accidents, ill health, and machinations of the wicked, things which are not always insurmountable, you will get out of life exactly what you put into it," he declared.

"Nobody has ever heard of a truly great man who was not also a good man," he said. "A modern administrator who thinks his success depends on his reputation and not his character, on his cleverness and not his honesty, may from his own point of view be right. His adroitness may well contribute to a factitous success. But such men are as temporary as gusts of wind."

Non-Graduates To Notify South

Students who have registered for graduation and who find that they will not graduate, are asked to notify Miss Josephine Prichard, of Central Records Office, South Building.

Miss Pritchard said she must notify the engravers as soon as possible to stop work on those diplomas which will not be issued. The $5 diploma fee will be refunded to the students, or it will be held over until they graduate.

State Student Legislature To Meet In Raleigh Today

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, May 12—Students from approximately 25 colleges and universities in North Carolina will take over the two legislative chambers of the state capitol here tomorrow for the first session of the 13th annual State Student Legislature.

The delegation of 22 students from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will be headed by Dortch Warriner, a member of the Interim Council of the Legislature, who was elected to lead the delegation at a caucus in Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon.

At the same caucus three University delegates, Don Shropshire, Herb Mitchell, and Bob Giles, were elected to fill the three seats allotted to the school in the Senate of the mock General Assembly.

University students in the House of Representatives will be Al Lowenstein, Graham Jones, John Sanders, Emily Baker, Bill Duncan, Ted Leonard, Iris Bost, Bill Mackie, Nat Williams, Dave Sharpe, Bill Prince, John Stump, Dan Bell, Pete Gerns, Charlie Gibson, Banks Talley, and Russell Baldwin. Cam West is an alternate.

The first session of the assembly will convene at noon tomorrow and will adjourn at 5:30 in the afternoon. The second session will run from 7:30 to 9:30 tomorrow night.

On Saturday morning, the senators and representatives will convene at 9 o'clock, meet until noon, recess for lunch until 2 o'clock, when they will reconvene until adjournment sometime late in the afternoon.

Four bills are to be sponsored by the North Carolina University delegation. Two are resolutions and the other two are laws.

One of the latter appropriates money from state coffers to permit tuition rates at the Greater University to remain at their present level. The other forces all schools supported wholly or in part by state funds to admit Negro students on the graduate level.

The two resolutions favor federal aid to education and federal world government.

Kansas Brawl Involves Dean, Coeds, Injuries

LAWRENCE, Kans., May 12—(UP)—"Stag Week" among the boys at Kansas University ended prematurely today.

The coeds evidently inspired a near riot which involved police, the Dean of Men, a sorority house-mother, various injuries and resulted in the calling-off of the anti-girl demonstration.

The boys, particularly of the fraternities, organized the "week" during which no boy was to speak to a coed on penalty of being dunked in the campus lake by the other boys.

No one was quite sure what happened except that yesterday afternoon a group of coeds invaded the man-sacred precincts of several fraternity houses and "made themselves at home."

That was the start and by midnight, 500, to 1,000 boys, with some coeds intermingled, were engaged in an uproar that sent 10 boys and two girls to the

Murphy Follows Don Shropshire As Di President

Arthur Murphy, junior from Macon, Miss., studying pre-law, was elected this week to the speakership of the Dialectic Senate, forensic society and oldest extra-curricular organization on the University campus.

To replace Don Shropshire from Winston-Salem as their president, the Di Senate members elected Murphy by acclamation in their regular weekly meeting Wednesday night in the Di Hall third floor, New West. The speaker-elect, who will assume office next fall, is also active in the University Club and on the Yackety Yack staff. He saw two years of service in World War II, reaching the rank of second-lieutenant in the Air Corps.

Other newly chosen Senate officers include Gus Graham of Oxford, speaker pro tempore; Toby Selby, Goldsboro, critic; Morris Knudsen, Los Angeles, Calif., clerk; Jim Lamm, Mount Airy, sergeant-at-arms; Cam West, Philadelphia, Pa., treasurer; and Shropshire, chaplain. Graham was also picked as the Senate representative to the Debate Council.

Before the election, nine new members were initiated into the Di by Speaker Shropshire. The new Senators include: Betty Pleasants, Bob Clampitt, Archie Myatt, Ed Williams, Joe Clark, Ed Hatch, Jack Roland, Bill Roth, and J. C. Rush.

Officers of the Senate for the present quarter who will hold their positions now for one more forensic discussion next Wednesday on a topic yet to be announced are, in addition to Shropshire: Sam Manning, Spartanburg, S.C., speaker pro tempore; William Harding, Aurora, N.J., critic; Knudsen, clerk; Murphy, sergeant-at-arms; Graham, treasurer; Bill Foister, High Point, chaplain; and Shropshire, Debate Council representative.

N. C. Preachers Tour Morehead

A crowd of more than 350 ministers from every section of North Carolina, their families and their friends were guests of student government yesterday for a special showing at the Morehead Planetarium.

At a luncheon at 12 o'clock in the Pine Room of Lenoir Hall, Dean of Men Fred Weaver and Student Body President Bill Mackie welcomed the group on behalf of the students, and Dean Weaver introduced Controller and Mrs. W. D. Carmichael, Jr., Chancellor House, and other members of the administration who were present.

Following the luncheon the ministers were taken on a tour of the Morehead Building, ending in the Planetarium room where Dr. Marshall presented the performance, "Let There Be Light."

Weathers Dance Set for Tonight

Stormy Weathers and his orchestra will provide music for a free, informal dance tonight in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. Featured during the dance will be the weekly floor show and radio broadcast of the Rendezvous Room, which will be given in the main lounge tonight.

The radio broadcast will begin at 9:30, with Mark Barker announcing. Jean Hillman, the show-stopper of the recent Sound and Fury production, "Merrily We Love," will sing, and Jimmy Weathers, piano sensation of Stormy Weathers orchestra, will perform.

Lib Stoney is directing the show. The floor show will also include tap dancer Becky Holton.

Avowed Commie Has AEC Award

Hoey, Cole Blast Atomic Commission For Not Checking Communist's Loyalty

WASHINGTON, May 12—(UP)—The Atomic Energy Commission today was accused in Congress of awarding a $1,600 fellowship for advanced atomic study to a young "professed Communist" without checking his loyalty.

The award was criticized sharply before the joint Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee, on the floor of the Senate, and in the pages of the Congressional Record.

Rep. W. Sterling Cole, (R.—N.Y.), in a statement inserted in the Record, identified the student as Hans Freistadt, a native of Austria now taking post-graduate work in physics at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. He graduated from the University of Chicago.

Sen. Clyde R. Hoey (D.—N.C.) voiced identical charges on the Senate floor. He also put into the Record a statement of defense by Chairman David E. Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Hoey told his colleagues they would be "amazed to know that the money of the taxpayers is being used to provide scholarships for known Communists through the Atomic Energy Commission."

He did not name Freistadt at the time but he told reporters later he meant Freistadt. He said he was tipped off about the case by a "very fine GI student" at North Carolina University.

Lilienthal said the Commission does not require a loyalty investigation of applicants for fellowships unless they seek access to restricted data because it feels it will get better students that way and stir up less ill feeling among scientists.

He said that in most cases a loyalty investigation would be an "unnecessary expense" because the student fellows seldom get a chance at any really top-secret atomic information. When they do, he added, they are required to get loyalty clearance.

"As the program develops we will be constantly alert to any conditions which may indicate a need for an alteration in this security policy."

The question arose in the Joint Atomic Energy Committee while Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R.—Ia.) was questioning Dr. Henry D. Smyth, Princeton University physicist and author of the famous atomic weapons re-

Student Says He Is Loyal U.S. Citizen

'Will Not Change,' Freistadt Declares

Austrian-born Hans Freistadt, 23, whose Communist leanings stirred up a sharp debate before the joint Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee in Washington, said yesterday he is a communist but "I consider myself a loyal citizen of this country."

The Atomic Energy Commission awarded the young graduate physics instructor at the University of North Carolina a $1,600 fellowship for advanced atomic study and was attacked for the action in the committee.

Members of the committee charged that Freistadt was a "professed Communist."

"I think that's a fair description," Freistadt said. "I belong to the Communist Party in Chapel Hill. There really isn't but one Communist Party and I belong to that."

The soft-spoken student took exception to a statement by Dr. Henry D. Smyth, Princeton University physicist and new member of the Atomic Energy Commission, who said that "when he gets some sense he may change his mind."

"I appreciate the fact that Professor Smyth is tolerant," he said, "but I don't think at the present time that I will change my mind."

Freistadt said the fellowship, awarded "a month or two ago" will run from July 1, 1949, to July 1, 1950.

"Under the fellowship," he said, "I agreed that any patents I discover in research here will be controlled by the Atomic Energy Commission.

"However, in the type of work I do, it is not likely that I'll turn up any patents."

His thesis is on general relativity.

Freistadt came to the United States in 1941 and served in the U. S. Army from June 1944 to April 1946. He was naturalized Aug. 19, 1944.

He said he was perfectly willing to undergo a loyalty investigation.

Graham Comments

WASHINGTON, May 12—(UP)—Sen. Frank Porter Graham (D.—N.C.) said today he knew "nothing about the award, and had nothing to do with the award" which was given Hans Freistadt by the Atomic Energy Commission.

"Certainly," he said, "the loyalty of the person who is to have access to any confidential atomic energy information should be thoroughly investigated and approved by appropriate authorities."

Joint Statement

Chancellor Robert B. House and Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., issued a joint statement yesterday on the excitement caused in Washington by the revelation that student Hans Freistadt, an admitted Communist, had been awarded a fellowship by the Atomic Energy Commission.

"We know of no legal authority," House and Carmichael said, "under which the University administration may take action against a student because of his political beliefs."

Third Quarterly Out Next Week

To Feature Work By Faculty Men

The spring issue of the Carolina Quarterly, will appear next week containing five articles by prominent men in the fields of writing, education, and science announced Editor Roy C. Moose yesterday.

Outstanding among the articles is the Southern Writer feature by Robert Walker entitled "Tennessee Williams: Portrayer of Frustration" in which Walker presents a sweeping criticism of Williams as a playwright and a man. Walker, a special student at the University, knew Williams during the three years that "A Streetcar Named Desire" and "Summer and Smoke" were written.

His article is a combination of personal reminiscences and objective criticism of Williams and his works. The article devotes a large section to William's early period one-act plays which contained the germinal seeds for his illustrious major works.

Phillips Russell, noted creative writer and biographer, makes his first appearance in the Quarterly with an article entitled "Towards Form in Writing" in which he sets forth what he considers to be the necessary ingredients of good writing. The article may be termed a summary of Russell's years of experience in the writing and teaching fields.

As a companion piece to the Folk Festival to be held at the University in June, Dr. I. G. Greer and Norman Cordon have collaborated on a dialogue type article on "Southern Folk Music." Dr. Greer, for many years a leader in the collection and preservation of folk music in the South, in the article imparts much of his knowledge to Cordon who has returned to North Carolina from a successful career with the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York to become active in the renewed interest in folk music.

Dr. Wallace E. Caldwell, a professor of history at the University for the past twenty five years, defends the liberal arts curricula in his article "Why A Liberal Education?" In addition, Dr. Caldwell formulates what he believes the student should expect from his four years of college.

For the final article, Dr. J. B. Rhine of the Parapsychology Laboratory at Duke University has written the "Relation Between Psychology and Religion" in which he explores the possibility of the human being having senses other than the five normally attributed to him.

TMA Night Groups Schedule Practice

Five campus groups will begin rehearsals today for the stunts they will put on Monday night in Memorial Hall when the Town Men's Association sponsors its stunt night program. Those entered in the program to date are the Chi Omega, Carolina Tumblers, Tri Delts, Lambda Chi and PiKA.

The three rehearsal periods that have been announced are scheduled for this afternoon, tonight and Monday afternoon.

Greenwooders to Perform

Square Dancers Gonna Defy Friday the 13th Fate Tonight

By Sally Woodhull

This is Friday the 13th. Traditionally, black cats should stalk, ladders fall, and bad luck generally prevail.

But campus square dancers and fun seekers in general will defy tradition as they gather at 8 o'clock tonight in the Tin Can for the Montreat Social Commission's final campus-wide square dance of the current season.

The Greenwood team, a square dance team made up of students from Asheville and the surrounding territory, will call for the dance and do several exhibition numbers. The team performed last night at the Burlington Centennial celebration in an exhibition postponed from Wednesday night because of rain.

Formed early last summer, the team performed at the first annual Carolina Folk Festival in Kenan Stadium last June and received high honors. They plan to participate in this year's festival also.

Among the figures which they present in exhibition are "Dive and Shoot the Turkey Buzzard," "Ocean Wave," "Four Leaf Clover," "Shoo Fly Swing," and a novel twist to "London Bridge" which involves an over and under motion.

Time for a Change

Every year it's the same old thing. The sticklers for tradition, those all-mighty beings who plan commencement exercises, just can't seem to realize that these are modern times, and it is time to stop doing things in old-fashioned ways. In our opinion, the only smart people connected with commencement are the seniors who beat it home and forgot the whole darned thing.

Sometimes we are fortunate to have a good speaker. Gen. George C. Marshall was such, and his speaking at graduation last year was something that the seniors who graduated at that time will long remember with pride. But they will remember with distaste and disgust the fact that they had to sit through hours of boring name-calling while they and their fellow graduates filed up to the platform one by one and received their diplomas.

Once again this year, we send out a desperate plea to the administration, the faculty marshall, any and all persons connected with commencement exercises: Let's straighten up and fly right, boys. It's time to cut out the long, drawn-out, involved commencement services and dispense with the individual diploma-handing-out. If you have to, you can read off all the names of the seniors without making them march to the platform one by one, but the modern schools have even eliminated that.

Something should be done. A little planning and investigation can bring about a solution and maybe the seniors who graduate in the future will not have to put up with long hours of boring commencement exercises as those that have gone before.

At Carolina, it's time for a change.

Open Letter to Mr. Morehead

Chapel Hill, N. C.
May 12, 1949

Dear Uncle John,

We got your present Tuesday and we don't know how to thank you enough for it. We've never had anything just like it before, and it's making quite a hit here in town. We've had friends and kinfolks over to the house we haven't seen in years.

Of course, the neighbors have known it was coming, and some of them couldn't see much sense in it—they wanted to know what use it was and how we were going to keep it dusted and all, but now they've seen it, they're crazy about it. And that sure is a nice fellow you got down here from Philadelphia to show us how to run it—we get along with him fine.

It's a wonderful present, anyhow, and after some of the shine wears off, it'll look just like it's always been here. Thanks again, Uncle John; it sure is a pretty thing, and we all appreciate it.

The Family

The WASHINGTON SCENE

By George Dixon
(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The coal operators are convinced John L. Lewis intends to pull another strike when the present contract expires June 30—and are secretly in favor of it.

"By this summer," confided a leading operator, "there won't be any coal business anyway, nearly everybody who uses coal is stocked up with it.

"There's never been so much coal above ground in the country's history. We all lie about how much coal we have, but the best estimate is 100,000,000 tons.

Faced with this, Lewis is going to have the toughest fight of his career getting anything more from the operators. Both sides are pretty well convinced the Government will have to step in.

Old eyebrows is keeping his counsel about the extent of his demands, but the operators feel sure he will ask for a 35-hour week to replace the present 40. This would mean an hour less a day for five days, with time and a half to be paid for all labor on Saturdays.

The mine owners are also convinced he will demand an increase in the contribution to the United Mine Workers' welfare fund of 10 cents a ton, making a total contribution of 30 cents a ton.

The operators would like to get the excessive stockpile reduced. If Lewis takes the rap for it with the public, it'll be all right with them too.

Mr. Grover Whitney McKeister, the distinguished legislative consultant, came in today bellowing that he considered Defense Secretary Louis Johnson a dangerous radical.

"What's Louie done now?" asked Miss Reid. "Advocated socialized atomic bombing?"

"He is striking at the very foundations of free enterprise," replied Mr. McKeister. "He says he is declaring war on '15 per cent brokers' and 'pull peddlers' who may try to horn in on the big new arms program."

"Very radical!" sniffed Miss Reid. "It will certainly put a crimp in you thieves."

Mr. McKeister beamed fondly upon the outspoken damsel, saying she didn't understand.

"My business," he explained, "is to make contacts. What right has the Secretary of Defense to say he will drive us out of the National Military Establishment?"

"No more, I guess," said Miss Reid, "than the coppers have to tell a stickupman to get out of town."

More On 'Merrily'

By Vestal Taylor

With the final curtain rung down on "Merrily We Love," there is little to occupy the attention of campus theatre goers until the opening of "Merchant of Venice" late next week. There is much to be said about the local production of Shakespeare's great play but not so much that it can't all come in a later edition.

The person or persons who wrote the copy for the recent Sound and Fury publicity committed an unpardonable error in omitting the name of Pete Strader from the list of important players, when making up the publicity copy. Pete played the part of a harried theatrical producer with his hands full of a temperamental actress and a matador with overactive ego. The part taken by Strader was essential to the success enjoyed by "Merrily We Love" and Pete played his part well.

For the benefit of those who don't know, Marty Jacobs was the brain behind S'nF's "Merrily" rather than the advertised director, Mark Barker. Marty agreed to do the show long before he finished with "Apple Tree Farm" and opened rehearsals after choosing his cast largely from a group of experienced players. However, shortly after "Merrily" got under way, Marty was called on the carpet by Sam Selden and asked to forego the directorship of the new show and to confine his time and talents to the Dramatic Arts department. Jacobs promptly arranged to have the directorship transferred to Barker in so far as publicity was concerned and went on his way producing a hit.

All was forgiven after the second night of the "Merrily" showing when Mr. Selden came backstage to welcome Marty back into the fold and to tell him that it was a great show. Selden must be dumb like a fox. It makes for interesting speculation to wonder just what would have been Jacobs' fate if his boss had not liked the S'nF show.

Some of the loudest gripes heard against the recent musical production revue came from persons qualified to criticize. These observers had some very valid reasons for their objections to the production, based, no doubt, on their experience in having watched major Broadway productions over a period of years. They did not jump to conclusions but weighed their decisions very carefully. However, they, along with so many others, who are quick to criticize, fail to make one very important consideration. They have failed to account for the hours and nights and days spent in each of these student productions by the students themselves.

They fail to consider that the people who are putting these shows on are putting their time and effort into a production for no other reason than the sheer love of acting—of displaying their talents (or lack of it as you like)—and of entertaining their fellow students. There are few persons participating in student productions of a professional calibre. If they had passed the test of fire they would be elsewhere selling their talent for the well known lucre.

Here at UNC there is no matter of deciding on a particular type that may be needed in a particular role and calling a booking agent and having the role filled in a matter of hours. There is no great amount of money to hire talent in directors, actors or technicians. There is no money with which to buy expensive settings. Those interested in producing a show have to do the best they can and that usually means doing without.

This state of affairs does not only apply to Sound and Fury productions but the majority seen on campus. Another consideration should be the vast difference in price between a campus and a Broadway production.

CPU Student Poll

Earlier in the quarter the Carolina Political Union conducted a poll of student opinion of five questions which the Union believed would be of particular interest to the average Carolina student. The tabulation of the answers to two of the questions asked was given in an earlier edition of the Tar Heel. At this time the findings for two of the other questions will be presented.

The Union realizes that like all other public opinion polls this poll is also subject to inaccuracies. However, due to the scientific procedure employed in choosing the subjects to be interviewed and the careful tabulation and analysis that followed, it is believed that the results of this poll do measure to a very large degree the actual beliefs and wishes of the student body on these important questions.

In reply to the question: "Do you approve ratification by the Senate of the U.S. of the North Atlantic Pact," the answers were as follows:

76.1% favored the Pact.
16.4% were undecided.

A further breakdown was made with percentage results given for the various class groups and additional groupings were made to show the opinions of the students with residence in the state as contrasted with those from other states and a third grouping was made according to whether the student was a veteran or non-veteran. The results for this part of the poll were as follows:

	Fresh.	Soph	Junior	Senior	Grad.	Special
Yes	61.9%	80%	69.4%	84%	73.8%	100%
No	9.5%		11.2%	6%	13.3%	—

No	6.3%	13.3%	8.2%	7.8%
Uncertain	17.8%	10.0%	14.4%	18.5%

A second question was "In your opinion should the Taft-Hartley Act be:

1) Retained in its present form.
2) Substantially modified.
3) Completely repealed.
4) Uncertain.

And the answers for this question were as follows:

28.4% wanted the act retained in its present form.
71.5% thought that it should be substantially modified.
4.7% thought that it should be completely repealed.
18.3% of those polled were uncertain.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

FREISTADT'S REPLY

Editor:

Your editorial "Freistadt—Atomic Energy Scholar" contains a few inaccuracies which I feel should be corrected:

(1) It is false that I am now or have been for some time attending school on an Atomic Energy Commission scholarship. I have been awarded a Fellowship for one year effective July 1; I have not so far received a dime under it.

(2) It is false that I am being trained for secret work with the Atomic Energy Commission. The Fellowships are general academic awards, granted by the National Research Council on behalf of the Atomic Energy Commission, to graduate students on the basis of a competitive examination, their record, and recommendations by faculty members. The Atomic Energy Commission is not wasting the taxpayers' money; the purpose of the Fellowships is to provide trained physicists, teachers and research workers to intensify physical studies in this country; I hope to be able to serve this country in that capacity. Only in the present hysterical atmosphere will one find editors and radio commentators who shout "waste" at every penny spent on anything other than "perfecting some atomic weapon to be dropped on Russia."

(3) It is false that I have ever attacked the American form of government. I challenge you to produce one quotation to that effect, or to withdraw your statement and apologize. I have criticized our present administration and economic organization; I have argued that our foreign policy is suicidal; I have argued that under socialism the American people could enjoy a standard of living the like of which we dare not dream of now. The right to so argue is a privilege that every citizen enjoys, and it requires a highly distorted reasoning to make disloyalty out of that. I consider myself a loyal citizen of this country; I am bound by my oath of citizenship to defend it against any aggressor, and will do so if necessary. I see no contradiction between my loyalty and my membership in the Communist Party. I consider allegations that the Communist Party is under foreign control lies, and until such time as these allegations are proved in Court, I will judge the Communist Party by its published platform and Constitution, to which I subscribe.

(4) By suggesting that academic awards be given on the basis of political orthodoxy rather than on the basis of scholarship, you are engaging precisely in the operation of mixing science with politics of which Communists have been accused.

(5) I submit that your vilifying and inflammatory editorial, filled with half-truths, exaggerations, and outright falsehoods, is a low of journalistic ethics. There is no indication that any source other than Fulton Lewis, Jr. was used for your editorial, for the facts of the case could have been ascertained by a phone call to Phillips Hall, which even the Chicago Tribune took the trouble of doing before writing on the matter.

SPANISH POLICY

Editor:

Again this nation's policy towards Spain is in the news. Again there are Americans who unfortunately believe we must include Spain in the ERP and Atlantic Pact. These Americans should realize that our fight against communism will not be won by militaary containment alone, but in the battlefield's of men's minds.

In China we supported a fascist regime, and we lost the people's backing and the nation itself. This should be lesson enough. We can not say that we believe in democracy, and then support dictators. So let's not repeat this mistake in Spain.

PLANETARIUM ISSUE

Editor:

I want to add my congratulations and appreciation to those I know you have already received for the splendid work that you, Bill Buchan and the other members of your staff did in getting out the Planetarium issue.

Many of the guests expressed very favorable comments in looking over the copies they received.

It was a fine job.

Trivia and Tripe

On Criminal Doings

By Bob Sturdivant

We were happily thumbing through the latest red-hot publication from the Board of Temperance of the Methodist Church the other night, when we were brought up short by an extracted bit of news from a Los Angeles paper contained therein. "Wife Arrested in Knife Death of Headwaiter" proclaimed the headlines and the article below went on to state that the wife's husband had come home drunk, and a quarrel had ensued. (quarrel" is hardly the word for what ensued if you want our opinion.)

Now, on the surface this would seem to be nothing more than just a common old murder, but to us there are grave implications connected with the case. We are curious as to how a headwaiter got stabbed by this lady simply because her husband showed up drunk. There is a case on the records in St. Louis in which a waiter was stabbed when the spouse came home drunk, but that fellow was no headwaiter. We are also reminded of a case in Witchita that concerned a husband who got stabbed when a headwaiter came home drunk, but this again sheds little light on the problem at hand.

According to a famous criminologist who we consulted in regard to the matter, the wife's motive probably falls into one of three categories: (1) The headwaiter may have been bringing the husband home from a binge, and the wife, laboring under false assumptions, flew into a fit of jealous rage and lowered the boom. These assumptions, may have been drawn on the spot upon seeing the two in each other's arms, or they have been harbored in her mind for some time. (2) The headwaiter may have refused to get into those stuffy clothes at the husband's approach, and by so doing, let himself in for the "silencer" treatment. (3) Maybe she just didn't give a happy darn.

It has been brought to our attention that the husband and the headwaiter might have been the same person, but this would only serve to spoil the fun!

We understand that a few members of the Golden Bears have formed an early morning breakfast club which meets as often as finances will allow. These boys are real hustlers as shown by the fact that they are usually up town wandering around long before the cafes open. That's what we call real enthusiasm.

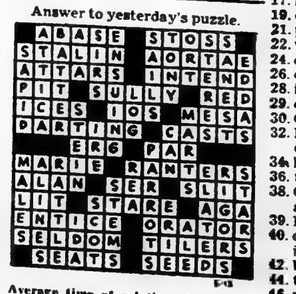
With the approach of the German weekend, there seems to be a note of mystery prevading the atmosphere over around the lady's dorms. Coeds can be seen gathering into little groups and nodding and becking to each other with voices subdued. Also, there is something ominous to us in all those boxes that the girls have been slipping into their rooms after hours. We have asked several of the fairer sex about it, but all we can get for an answer is a few giggles and knowing glances.

One coed did loosen up just a wee tad over some ten cent beer the other afternoon and she managed to drop a few hints. We are not certain, mind you, and we may casting about in the dark, but we believe that the coeds are planning some sort of rebellion against imports this spring.



We don't advocate anyone going into hysterics over mere rumors, but you men uright do well to exercise a great deal of care in picking dates for the Germans. Perhaps a bat in your import's stocking or a black jack in her bag would not be out of place, just in case!

Tar Heels Take One, Drop One

Cassell Pitches Varsity to 8-4 Win Over State

RALEIGH, May 12—The University of North Carolina Tar Heels showed Raleigh baseball fans a fancy hitting attack the likes of which are seldom seen in these parts as they blasted two State College pitchers for 17 hits and eight runs. State batters touched winning pitcher Dean Cassell for four runs on six hits.

Every Carolina batter collected at least one hit in the slaughter of the Wolves of West Raleigh. It was the first win over the 'Pack for the Tar Heels in three attempts.

Don Ward and Sid Varney, both near the top in the Big Four batting race, fattened their averages with three hits each in five trips to the plate. Varney collected his first homer of the season in the seventh with nobody on. Ward added a triple in the sixth, but was left stranded at third.

Goodman Singles, Scores

Carolina opened up with a run in the first inning when League Leader Stan Goodman singled and was brought in on a lengthy double by Varney.

One more run was added to the Tar Heel cause in the third as Goodman again crossed the plate after walking to first. Rip Ryan singled him to second and Varney brought him in with a clean single.

Centerfielder Jim Ballou took his turn at crossing the plate in the fourth. He singled and scored later as Cassell collected the seventh hit off starting pitcher Ernie Johnson.

Cassell's Field Day

Meanwhile, Cassell was having a field day on the mound. He completely dumbfounded the frustrated State batters with his curve-balling antics. He didn't allow any hits until the fifth inning when Willie Evans collected a weak bingle. However, Cassell weakened in the fifth to allow three hits and two runs.

One of the Livingstone brothers started State on the road to a run when he walked in the fifth. Bill Fowler followed with a single. Ned Council drove in Livingstone with a single and Shortstop Cathey brought in Fowler with another bingle. That completed the first act in State's two-act play on Cassell's weakness.

Carolina added a run in their half of the sixth by virtue of an error by Catcher Fowler that put Will Hobbs on first and Ward's triple that sent Hobbs across the well-trodden plate.

Then came Fearless Varney's homer.

Three in Eighth

As a climax to an excellent performance, the visitors from Chapel Hill added three final runs in the eighth. Hobbs singled. Ward singled. Goodman Singled. Ryan singled. Lamb had to be different—he walked. Ballou singled. In the ensuing confusion three runs scored.

State was undoubtedly impressed with the Carolina eighth. They tried to duplicate the show, but fell one run short. Don Cheek singled and was brought home on Mussack's 'round the world clout. That was the ball game.

Favorites Advance In Net Play; Quarter-Finals To Be This Morning

By Lew Chapman

As the day's results were turned in at the scorer's table at dusk yesterday afternoon after six hours of continuous competition, the Southern Conference tennis tournament officials no doubt breathed a bit easier when they noted that six of the eight seeded netters survived the first day's play to advance into today's singles quarterfinals.

The only beaten seeded netster was seventh ranking Bill Weathers of State who was beaten in the second round by William and Mary's John Galloway, 7-5, 7-5. Otherwise, today's competition will pit the "big boys" of the tourney against each other in a lucrative attraction that is expected to lure even a bigger turnout than yesterday's fine crowd. This morning's matches start at 9:30.

Form also held true in the doubles play as co-favorites Vic Seixas and Clark Taylor of Carolina and Fred Kovaleski and Howe Atwater advanced to the quarterfinal round.

Carolina's powerful team, who have a 23 consecutive dual victory streak at this writing, placed two men in today's singles round. The local's one-two punch, Seixas and Taylor, both won a pair of matches to reach this stage of the game.

The National Intercollegiate tennis champion, the Indians of William and Mary, put three and possibly four racqueteers in today's pairings. The match between Duke's McMasters and W&M's Chennault was postponed because of darkness and it will be completed this morning.

Of local interest, six of the eight man Tar Heel team were beaten and eliminated in the singles play.

Seixas and Taylor remain the Carolina hopes for the individual champ. Seixas served fair notice of why he was ranked number one by trampling Bob Mumford of Wake Forest in an early match, 6-0, 6-0. The Tar Heel ace's second match was a horse of a different color as the local pride had to scramble to defeat W&M's Jim Macken, 7-5, 6-2. Macken is a former Canadian Davis Cupper and was the early conqueror of the Tar Heel's Keenan.

Taylor beat both Walt McCool of Maryland and Dick Randall of W&M rather handily but the sixth seeded Tar Heel has a tough one on tap this morning when he meets highly touted Howe Atwater of William and Mary.

Following this morning's matches, the singles semi-final round will be held at 2 this afternoon with the finals tentatively slated for 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Doubles play will also continue today to make it a full day for the local tennis fans.

Matches this morning at 9:30:

Seixas (NC) vs Keesler (Davidson); Atwater (WM) vs Taylor (NC); Kovaleski (WM) vs winner of McMasters (Duke) vs Chennault (WM); Roddey (Davidson) vs Galloway (WM).

Doubles matches today:

Atwater-Kovaleski (WM) vs Taylor-Warmath (Duke); Ozenberg-Galloway (WM) vs Carloss-Tapley (Duke); Hicks-McMasters (Duke) vs Weathers-Ragan (St.); Hammack-Watkins (WF) vs Cole-Chennault (WM); Keesler-Roddey (Davidson) vs Rice-Wilder

Golfers to Tourney

The Carolina golf team is off today to Winston-Salem where tomorrow the locals will attempt to dethrone reigning Duke University as Southern Conference links champions.

The 36-hole one-day tournament will be conducted at the Old Town Country Club and will be conducted on a medal play basis. Each team starts six players with the best four scores comprising the team total. The Individual medalist will also be crowned.

Harvie Ward, Roy McKenzie, Bob Cox, Jack Brantley, Oliver Sapp, and Frank Brooks will comprise the Tar Heel entry. Coach Chuck Erickson heads the Carolina party.

Frosh Bow, 11-3 To State Nine; Whiteheart Stars

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Carolina's freshman baseball team took its second successive pounding at the hands of the State frosh bowing 11-3 to the junior Wolfpack on Emerson Field yesterday afternoon before a sparse crowd.

Although the Tar Babies reached State hurler Lonnie Lewis for nine safeties, they couldn't bunch them sufficiently to score more than three runs. State managed only eight hits, but got seven off starter Charlie Bridger in the first four innings and combined them with two walks, an error and a hit batsman for nine runs.

Carolina picked up "Singletons" in the first, seventh and eighth frames, but the cause was already hopeless.

State's right fielder Walt Ferrell got the longest hit of the day, a bases-loaded homer, poled into deep center. Vic Bagonis was the most consistent State hitter of the afternoon, however, bashing out two safeties in three trips.

The Tar Babies took an early lead in the first inning when Herring. Whiteheart and Ben Smith singled and Herring dashed home from third with the initial run of Charlie Overman's fielder's choice to short. State, however, bounded back in the next frame to score three times on Dinan's triple, Ferrell's fielder's choice and pitcher Lewis' single.

The State nine added four more in the third and a pair in the fourth with the benefit of five hits including Ferrell's "grand slam" circuit clout.

Paschal took the mound at the start of the fifth and held State hitless and scoreless until the eighth when a walk, a fielder's choice, Bill Smith's steal of home and Bagonis' Texas Leaguer to center wound up the State scoring for the day with two runs. Carolina's short-lived rally in the seventh came as a result of a walk, an error, a fielder's choice and Paschal's liner to left.

Carolina rallied once again in the ninth to end the scoring with a lone run which came on Lewis' third walk, Bill Smith's second error and Lawrence Check's infield hit.

Carolina Mural Men Capture Title In Big Four Carnival Of Sports

By Andy Taylor

It was the campus mural champs that did the honors yesterday as they racked up four first places for a total of twenty-five points to gain the crown for Carolina in this year's Big Four Mural Carnival. State copped the runner up spot with Duke placing third and Wake Forest last.

State and Duke captured one win apiece, State's first being in the handball tournament and Duke's in the badminton playoffs. Wake Forest failed to take either a first or a second, their total for the day amounted to eight points. The second-place Wolf Pack amassed nineteen points and Duke fourteen.

In the handball competition, State posted a win over the Blue Devils in the finals while Wake Forest lost the consolation game to Carolina. But the Blue and White began its winning ways in volleyball by chalking up a victory over State! the Deacs took third.

Carolina won again in the horseshoe pjts through the efforts of the Sigma Nu fraternity champ team. Members of both the ATO and Town groups accounted for the vicfory in table tennis. They defeated State while Wake Forest lost to Duke. The Tar Heels dropped the badminton finals to Duke.

Track Today

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va; May 12—The University of North Carolina track team arrived here tonight in time to get a good night's rest before they encounter the University of Virginia's thin-clads tomorrow afternoon.

The Tar Heels are heavy favorites to defeat the Cavaliers in the dual meet, although the Blue and White will encounter stiff competition in the field events.

After the meet, the Tar Heels will journey to Blacksburg where they will again be favorites to subdue Virginia Polytechnic Institute in a dual meet.

By far the outstanding performances of the day, however, were to be seen on the softball diamonds. Backed by the Fireball pitching of Choo Reagan and Bob Callahan, the Blue and White nine came up with two shut outs to become undisputed Big Four softball champs. Made up of both fraternity and dormitory players, the team accounted for six runs in the first game and four in the championship contest.

In the opener, they were paired with Wake Forest and the game went scoreless for three innings. In the third, however, Bernie McKiernan broke the ice when he connected for a double. A single by Charlie Thorne plus a number of walks scored two runs for Carolina. Again in the sixth the Tar Heel stickwork took its toll and four more runs were added to the Carolina score sheet.

The only scoring in the final engagement was done in the fourth. Choo Reagan, playing in right field, opened with a single. Bill Maceyko then advanced for a round-tripper that scored two runs.

Fred Talton walked, got to third on an error and was driven home by Callahan's one-base tally. Pegram followed with another single and Charlie came up with one of the same that scored Callahan. Two walks were given up by Callahan; he allowed three hits and accounted for nine strike-outs.

An archery contest was also held though the results did not affect the score.

The Dean of Men got dunked by two buckets of water, the house-mother of a sorority house was drenched at the business end of a fire hose, and a dozen or more sorority house and women's dormitories were invaded by the rampaging boys.

University officials were silent on what if any disciplinary action was planned. One thing was certain, however. "Stag week," which was scheduled to end tomorrow night, definitely was over.

Laurence Woodruff, Dean of Men, received two buckets of water from the accurate pitching arm of an unidentified student, but succeeded eventually in quieting the situation, at midnight. Before he gained the upper hand, the sorority houses and dormitories had been invaded. Windows at the ADPi house were broken, water from a fire hose drenched a wall, a piano and the house-mother, Mrs. Charles Wentworth, at the Tri-Delt house. Furniture and rugs were soaked at several other houses.

Banquet" passed overwhelmingly, as did the bill to set up a committee to look into the possibility of restoring recreation rooms to men's dormitories, after some discussion.

The bill to give the Carolina Quarterly $1,500, the rest of its original $2,000 underwrite by the Legislature, did not come to the floor, since it went into effect simply upon the request being made.

The bill to create a special committee to prepare a tentative list of members for a constitutional convention was sent back to committee after a very short life on the floor. It will be brought up again presumably next fall.

The two bills to set up committees to investigate the NSA purchase card system and increased campus parking space were defeated after it was brought out that the regular campus NSA Committee and the standing Safety Committee were handling investigations already. It was also pointed out that reports could not be made by the committees this legislative year.

JOHNNY SATTERFIELD (inset) and his orchestra will play a free public concert at 8:15 Sunday evening in Memorial Hall. The concert will feature compositions written by five members of the orchestra, all of them students at the University.

Students Write Concert Works For Satterfield

Five students from the University wrote the concert book which Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra will present in a free public concert at 8:15 next Sunday in Memorial Hall. All five will appear with the orchestra.

Frank Justice, alto saxophonist, has written several pieces before; he arranged music for other bands before he and Satterfield organized the present orchestra in 1940. Justice came back to Chapel Hill, after three years in the Navy, for a year, then spent 15 months in New York University concentrating on his musical studies. He came back to Carolina in January 1949.

He composed the First Suite for Wind Orchestra which was performed by the Satterfield orchestra in the concert last Spring. He has composed a second suite for the coming concert.

John Satterfield, a native of Danville, Virginia, studied at Stratford College there and came here to the University in 1939. He spent two years here, then three years in military sevice and a couple of years playing for and arranging for various bands, he came back to Carolina in 1947. Last summer he studied with composer Ernest Bloch at the University of California at Berkley.

They are: Thomas Allred, a sophomore from Greensboro, who studied piano and clarinet through high school and spent a great deal of time even then in the analysis of music and the study of Paul Hindemuth's treatises on harmony.

Stressing the fact that because of a lack of quorums in the branches of student government, summer school government was practically "nonexistent," Mackie announced a plan to appoint a committee of six men and five coeds to take over all functions of student government during the summer. The committee would be empowered to handle all cases coming up under any of the judicial branches, and to legislate in cases of emergency.

Speaking of recent appointments to executive positions, Mackie asserted that student government is "composed of people who can and will do the job best."

Aquinas Club members who are planning to participate in the Club picnic at Hogan's Lake this afternoon were instructed to assemble outside Graham Memorial at 4 o'clock today. Transportation will be available for those who have none, a club spokesman said yesterday. For those who have their own transportation, the group will meet at the Lake.

Seniors May Sign For '49'er Picnic

Seniors who wish to attend the "Gold Rush" picnic next Thursday at Hogan's Lake should sign up today in the Y lobby from 9 to 4 o'clock, Nat Williams, class social chairman, said yesterday.

Alll 49'ers and their dates may attend the picnic free of charge, provided they have made reservations. The reservation table in the Y lobby will be open today, Monday and Tuesday from 9 until 4 o'clock. After that time, no one will be able to sign up, Williams said.

Those signing up should indicate whether or not they will want transportation so the planning committee can hire trucks. They should also sign up for their dates.

Entertainment at the picnic will be provided by the Bull City Night Hawks, playing from 6:30 until 10:30. This is the first event in the "Gold Rush of 49," with barefoot day following on Friday, and a senior dance slated for commencement weekend.

Grail Dance Ballot

Voting for the band to play at the annual Grail Club Duke-Carolina weekend dances will continue through Saturday, according to Len Butts. Ballot boxes are situated in the Y court, Lenoir Hall and the Scuttlebutt, and all students have been requested by the Grail to cast their ballot for the bands they would most like to hear.

Department Statue Stolen from Lenoir

The French Department announced yesterday that a small bronze statue used by the department in advertising their recent production of two French plays has been stolen from in front of Lenoir Dining Hall.

The statue, a two-foot-tall replica of a man with a flowing cloak, is the same one which many students saw on the lawn between South Building and the Library. It was moved to Lenoir Hall Thursday and stolen the same day.

Commerce Students To Register Today

Students in the School of Commerce who are not planning to attend summer school should come by 116 Bingham today or tomorrow to make an appointment for fall quarter pre-registration, Dean Carroll's office said yesterday.

Tar Heels Capture Posts; Race Debates Rage

HANS FREISTADT, LOCAL GRADUATE STUDENT, is shown above sitting on the Old Well, familiar campus landmark, reading news reports concerning the awarding of an Atomic Energy Commission fellowship to him, a professed Communist Party member. Freistadt has claimed that despite his Communist affiliations, he is a loyal American and would "defend the United States against any aggressor."

Hans Claims Research Has No Military Value

Communist Says His Political Beliefs Were No Criteria of Winning AEC Aid

Mild-mannered, soft-spoken Hans Freistadt sat behind his study table with a hurt expression in his eyes.

"Yes, I'm a Communist," he said. "But I see no contradiction between my loyalty to my country and my membership in the Communist Party. I consider myself a loyal citizen of the United States."

The University student, working toward his Ph.D. degree in physics, was the object of a storm of protest in Washington Thursday over the fact that the Atomic Energy Commission had awarded him a $1,600 fellowship, effective July 1, for further study here.

"I respect the American form of government and the American people," the Austrian-born student continued. He pointed out that he had become a citizen of the United States by choice, and had interrupted his college education to serve in the U. S. Army for two years.

"I would still, by choice, become an American citizen if I had it to do all over agin. And I would defend the United States against any aggressor. But, on the other hand, if this country were to engage in an aggressive war, it would be against my conscience to support it."

Freistadt, a short, stocky, 23-year-old native of Vienna, Austria, ran his hand over his crew-cut hair as he explained that he had left Europe because of the Nazi persecution in occupied France, where he and his family were living. He was 15 years old.

He went to high school in Evanston and Chicago, Ill., followed by a session at the University of Chicago before he went into the army. He returned to Chicago to graduate and get his master's degree.

"I came to the University of North Carolina because of the fine physics department here," he said. He is a graduate assistant and instructor in that department now, described by professors as "quite capable and very easy to get along with."

Coed Francine Mellon of Durham, a former student in a class taught by Freistadt, said, "I can vouch for his ability as an instructor—I had the pleasure of being one of his students last quarter, and I can honestly say that I came out not only with

Applications Are Part of 'Attack', Says Official

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 13 —(UP)—Applications of six Negroes for admission to the University of Florida were called a "well-planned" attack on Florida segregation laws today.

J. Thomas Gurney, Orlando, chairman of the State Board of Control, made the charge at a special meeting of th board, the State Cabinet and the President of Florida A. & M. College for Negroes.

TALLAHASSE, Fla., May 13 —(UP)—The State Board of Control today turned down applications of five Negroes for admission to the University of Florida, terming them a "well-planned" attack on Florida segregation laws.

Holland Tube Fire Cuts Power Lines

Exploding Truck Starts Blaze; Phones, Wire Services, Radio Networks Suffer

NEW YORK, May 13—(UP)—The worst telephone service failure in the country's history occurred today when a truck blew up in the Holland vehicular tunnel beneath the Hudson River.

Much of the nation's communications system was paralyzed. The tunnel carries cables on which power is provided by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. for press association wires, radio networks and long distance telephone service.

Sixty-other trucks and passenger cars piled up, "telescope" fashion, behind the exploding truck, and caught fire in turn. The drivers and passengers scrambled, choking and paniky, out of the 8,200-foot New York-New Jersey tube. The explosion occurred at 9 a.m. after the truck had passed from the New Jersey side about a quarter of the way toward New York.

Heat buckled the tiled walls. The intricate ventilation system stopped. The tunnel was plunged into darkness. The flames ate through the telephone cables and telegraph cables of Western Union. The tunnel filled with poisonous fumes.

A.T.&T. issued the following appraisal of the situation as of 4:30 p.m.:

"Of the 6,000 long-distance circuits going south or west, about half were lost.

"We had restored, through rerouting, about half of those lost —somewhere in the neighborhood of 1,500."

The long lines department had five cables running through the Holland tunnel, one of which was a coaxial cable suitable for television programs. They carried about 2,600 voice message circuits. The remaining 400 circuits carried private-line telephone and teletype messages, radio networks and other such special loads.

The company said the circuits to the north were not affected.

Frederick Cappel, vice president in charge of the long lines division, said the explosion "simply blew apart" the cables of copper wire sheathed in lead.

A few years ago, the company said, a train ran through a wall in the Hudson and Manhattan railroad tunnel which also carries communications cables. There was a serious disruption of service then but A.T.&T. said today's was the worst service failure in the history of the company.

Main lines were severed between New York and Harrisburg, Philadelphia and other points west, Cappel said.

The 16-ton trailer truck was heavily loaded with a highly inflammable chemical, carbon disulphide. The explosion turned the motor vehicle thoroughfare into an inferno.

Summer Tour To Be Offered UNC Students

Grumman Announces Europe Study Trip

The University Extension Division, in cooperation with the Department of Political Science, will conduct an eight-week study tour to England and France this summer, it was announced today by R. M. Grumman, Director of the Division.

Dr. John McConaughy, associate professor of political science in the University of South Carolina, will serve as director of the tour and instructor of the two college credit courses to be offered, namely, international relations and the governments of Europe.

The group will sail from New York July 8 and return from La Havre, France, August 30. Study will begin enroute to England. In addition to the regular courses, special supplementary lectures will be given by faculty members in the London School of Economics and Political Science and in the University of Paris.

Veterans of World War II who are eligible for government-financed education may apply for benefits covering tuition, books, and subsistence, Grumman said.

Due to the limited space available on student ships, all applications must be received by June 1, he added.

Rains and Floods Cost Playmakers

The slings and arrows of outraged weather have seriously handicapped Director Kai Jurgensen in the current Playmaker production, "The Merchant of Venice." The play is being staged in outdoor Forest Theater and at the last report the brook that trickles past the rear of the stage has been turned into a raging torrent by the downpours of the past several days.

Time lost in rehearsals is not the only thing that is bothering Jurgensen and his staff. Although the technical crew has at last found a waterproof paint for the scenery, the costume department is still trying to convert sou' westers into Shakespearean attire.

The show is scheduled for presentation on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday (May 20, 21, and 22) and the Playmakers are determined to meet their deadline. However, just in case it does rain on any of the dates listed, the "Merchant" will be presented on the next clear night.

Four Students From Hill Get High Honors

Childress, Gerns, Shropshire, Talley

RALEIGH, May 13—The 13th annual State Student Legislature today elected four students from the University of North Carolina to top posts in the mock general assembly setup.

The legislature, meeting here in two-day session running until tomorrow afternoon, chose Gran Childress, Chapel Hill, retiring interim secretary-treasurer for Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Don Shropshire of Winston-Salem was elected to the president pro-tempore seat in the Senate and Pete Gerns of Canton, Ohio, was chosen parliamentarian of the house.

Banks Talley, Bennetsville, S. C., was elected interim secretary-treasurer to succeed Childress. He was handed the year-long job at a joint session.

The legislature meet today in two sessions, the first beginning shortly after noon and running until 5:45, and the other beginning at 7:45 and ending at 10:25. Tomorrow the general assembly will convene at 9:30 in the morning, recess at noon for lunch, reconvene at 2:30 and adjourn the annual meet sometime late in the afternoon.

Approximately 143 delegates are attending the meeting from 18 colleges and universities, both white and Negro, from North Carolina.

Music Department Announces Series Of May Concerts

A series of concerts and recitals for May have been announced by the Music Department, including programs by the University Band, University Symphony, and music students.

Tomorrow afternoon, two programs are being offered with Charles Somers to play a piano recital at 4 o'clock in Hill Hall and the University Band to play a lawn concert at 5 o'clock near Davie Poplar. On Tuesday evening at 8:30, a joint recital will be presented in Hill Hall by David McAdams and William Tritt, violinists, accompanied by Barbara Tritt and Charles Stevens.

Wednesday evening at 8:30, another joint recital will be heard in Hill Hall and will include Robert MacDonald, pianist, and chamber trio, Dwight Price, John O'Steen, and William Tritt. Samuel Andrew will play a piano recital Thursday evening at 8:30.

The vocalists will come into their own Sunday afternoon May 22, at 3:30 when Richard Cox, baritone, will present a voice recital. That same afternoon at 5 o'clock, the University Band will feature its final concert of the season on the lawn. The campus and public in general will be treated Wednesday evening, May 25, at 8:30 when the University Symphony Orchestra will present a concert in Hill Hall.

The public is invited to all recitals and concerts. In case of rain, the Band concerts will be held in Hill Hall.

Bills Approved Admitting Negroes To Grad School

Senate Defeats House-Passed Law To Eliminate All Jim Crow Rulings

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, May 13—Both the Senate and the House of Representatives of the 13th annual State Student Legislature approved legislation today to admit Negro graduate students to all state schools wholly or partly supported by state funds.

But the two houses of the mock general assembly did not see eye-to-eye on a house amendment which would make private schools not admitting Negroes to graduate study relinquish their state tax exemptions.

The Senate did not pass this amendment along with its bill in today's afternoon session, but a joint committee of the two chambers will meet at 9 tomorro wto see if a settlement can be reached.

The admission of Negro graduates to State schools touched off lengthy and fiery debate in both houses, and the House amendment on private schools stirred up a storm in the lower chamber, led by an indignant Duke University delegation.

More fireworks hit the two chambers tonight when similar bills were introduced on both floors to abolish Jim Crow rulings applying to segregation on common carriers, in public building and factory rest rooms, and in public library reading rooms.

The House passed the measure item by item, eliminating the segregation clauses one by one and then approved the entire bill by a whopping 42-13 vote.

The Senate disagreed, however, and killed the legislation by a close 16-14 vote after a drawn-out debate. The House spent well over an hour on the bill.

The race issue bill was also sent to special committee to discuss a possible compromise.

Other legislation handled today included a bill to force all students and teachers in state-supported schools on the college or graduate level to sign non-Communist afidavits.

The bill went down to resounding defeat in both houses of the mock general assembly. The Senate and the House both approved plans for re-establishing State automobile inspection, but differences in the two bills were being working over by a joint conference committee.

The House downed a motion to lower the voting age in North Carolina to 18, and passed by a vote of 34-16 a resolution favoring federal world government. The lower chamber also approved a resolution favoring federal aid to education.

Open House Planned In Planetarium Today

Marshall Invites Students for Tour; Director Lists Schedule for Shows

University students are invited to an "open house" at the Morehead Building today from 1 to 10 o'clock, Dr. Roy Marshall, director of the Planetarium, said yesterday.

This will be the first time anyone has been given the opportunity to see the Genevieve B. Morehead Memorial Art Gallery, the collection of painting loaned by North Carolinians, the Faculty Lounge, the University Room, the Governor Morehead Room, the Copernican Orrery, and the various scientific exhibits all at one time.

Also, there will be the regularly scheduled 3 o'clock matinee and the 8:30 night performance in the Planetarium Theatre.

The performance, "Let There Be Light," will probably run through the end of June, and then change monthly, Marshall said. He explained that the present show would contiune until June because of the visitors that will be on campus during graduation, followed by new students for summer school.

The Morehead Building will regularly be opened to the public on week days from 1 to 10 o'clock, and from 10 in the morning to 10 at night on Saturdays and Sundays. The building will not be opened to the public above the second floor, which includes the University Room, the Faculty Lounge, and the Governor Morehead Room. Nor will the Planetarium Theatre be opened except during a performance, Marshall added.

The admission price for a performance is 38 cents for those over 12 years of age, and 18 cents for children. Marshall said childmen under 6 years of age would not be admitted, as they would probably be frightened by the show.

Tickets may be obtained at any time from the ticket office in the lobby of the Planetarium Theatre, which is on the ground floor in the back of the Morehead

Sutton of Sutton's Drug Store will conduct the program which will continue the general theme of this series planned to prepare coed graduated for a pleasent and effective life in the business world.

North Carolina's Symphony To Give Concert on Thursday

A special "Pops" concert by the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra will be played in Chapel Hill on Thursday, May 19.

The concert is scheduled for Memorial Hall, and will begin at 8:30 p.m. Dr. Benjamin Swalin, Director of the Orchestra, has chosen a program of light concert selections for presentation.

This concert will be played as a benefit for the Sustaining Fund of the Symphony. The Orchestra needs funds to meet the deficit which will be incurred by the present tour. It is hoped that this concert will augment the Sustaining Fund to meet this deficit.

A Sousa march, "Stars and Stripes Forever," will open the program. The First Movement of Schumann's "Spring Symphony" will also be presented. The program will include a selection from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream," and "Chicken Reel," an old Southern folk song.

On the latter part of the program Grofe's "On the Trail" from the "Grand Canyon Suite" will be heard, and also Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine."

Membership cards in the Society will not be good for this performance, but special tickets priced at 60c, 90c and $1.20, tax included, will be available in Graham Memorial, Ledbetter-Pickard, Carolina Inn, Ab's Book Shop, and at the door the night of the concert.

The program will be played in Memorial Hall, and will begin at 8:30 p.m. This will be the final concert by the North Carolina Symphony in this area this season.

Coed Advisors Hold Meeting

The second meeting of coed advisors in a training series met in Phillips Hall Thursday night to discuss the general aspects of the orientation program and the duties and responsibilities of the advisors.

Leading the program, chairman Charleen Greer discussed the manner in which the advisors should write letters to the advisees, and read the evaluation report from last year's orientation program.

Marshall to the Rescue

Curious Students Imprisoned By Elevator in Planetarium

By Wuff Newell

Exploring the Morehead Building may sound exciting to most people, but to Louise Horner the idea has become nothing short of a nightmare.

It all happened when Louise, who had heard of the beautiful interior of the Building, decided to see for herself. Feeling like a true sightseer she made the rounds of the first floor art gallery and then preceeded to go upstairs.

However at present the upstairs of the Morehead Building is forbidden territory for students, and guide Tom Gillman took no time in telling Louise just that.

And the upstairs would probably still be forbidden territory to her had not Dr. Roy K. Marshall happened to steep upon the scene just then. When guide Tom explained Louise's wish to the good doctor, he thought a moment and then said, "Well, maybe tonight you can sneak her upstairs."

But "tonight" wasn't quite soon enough for Louise, and Tom knew it. So as soon as Dr. Marshall had departed, the pair hopped into one of the automatic elevators and rose to heights unknown.

And unknown the heights were, too. When the two stepped from the little elevator, they discover-

Freistadt Brings National Attention

Hans Freistadt, whose press clippings must already be the equal of those of Charlie Justice, made the headlines of almost every major newspaper in this vicinity yesterday with the revelation of the fact that he has been awarded a $1,600 scholarship by the Atomic Energy Commission. The offices of the Daily Tar Heel have been besieged with visitors either demanding that Friestadt be deprived of his fellowship, defending him, or praising the paper's editorial stand on the issue.

At any rate, there has been a complete airing of the facts before the public's eyes, which is as it should be. There are those who feel the paper should have made no mention of the Freidstadt case, but it is a matter which concerns the entire nation. The question of whether the Communist Party should be outlawed in the U. S. may possibly be affected by the current controversy.

The matter was carried into the Senate on Wednesday by Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D—NC) and Rep. W. Sterling Cole (R—NY). Hoey's statement just about sums up the reaction of the majority of the students who have expressed their opinions to us. Hoey expressed amazement "that the money of the taxpayers is being used to provide scholarships for known Communists through the Atomic Energy Commission."

Meanwhile, at Carolina, Freistadt assures the public that he sees "no contradiction between my loyalty (to the U. S.) and my membership in the Communist Party." Furthermore he says he will defend his country against any aggressor. This latter statement is highly ambiguous, for in event of war between the U. S. and Russia there might be considerable difference of opinion as to which nation was the "aggressor." Attendants at the debate this week between Prof. Woodhouse and Freistadt advise us that Freistadt said he would not fight in the event the U. S. was the aggressor. Is this loyalty? We have an old tradition about "My country, right or wrong!" in which Hans evidently places no faith.

So, while there is no law preventing the granting of a fellowship to a Communist, it is not a particularly ethical or advisable thing to do. Right now Freistadt has no access to atomic secrets, of course. There are none at Carolina. But what is he holding an atomic energy award for if he is not to continue in this field? Where will he go when he finishes at Carolina? His very questionable background probably will make most universities hesitant to have him on their faculty. If he continues his work in the field of atomic energy, he most assuredly will have to be watched closely.

If there are not enough physics scholars in the U. S. to qualify for the AEC fellowships without taking on a Communist, then it would be better to appropriate the money to some other cause or give it to the other fellowship students. David Lilienthal, who heads the AEC, says the commission makes no loyalty check before handing out the awards. Out of respect for the great potentialities of atomic energy, it would seem a good policy to conduct a loyalty check in the future to prevent further furores like the Freistadt case.

Freistadt calls this mixing science and politics. Its rather hard to separate politics from any subject. And it is a bit ironical for Hans to lament the presence of politics in science. If anyone on this campus delves into politics and governmental theory, then it is Freistadt himself. But actually, to quote him, all he is doing is arguing "that under socialism the American people could enjoy a standard of living the like of which we dare not dream of now." That would be quite a nightmare!

Athletic Improvements Needed

Athletic teams here at the University are becoming more and more renowned throughout the country every year. Of this we are justly proud.

We now have, and have had for the past few years, one of the top football teams in the nation. More often than not the Tar Heel baseball crew is one of the best in the land. Our current swimming team is one of the best in the East, and the track and tennis teams show promise of greatness.

Still there are a few needed improvements that should be made in order to raise even higher the standards of UNC.

One of the most-needed improvements is a modern scoreboard in Kenan Stadium, heralded by many as one of the most beautiful athletic fields in the nation. The present clock at the end of the field is nothing more than an eyesore. With the construction of new boxes for pressmen and guests on either side of the field, it would seem advisable to invest a bit more nd bring another modern innovation to the Tar Heel stomping grounds.

Another urgent need is a new baseball diamond. Reports have it that plans are now being formulated for a ten-year expansion program that will include a new diamond. If this is true, all well and good. But if such is not the case, then it would be well for University officials to investigate the matter. With teams coming here from all over the country every spring, it seems that we should have a field that will impress them. Moreover, the present diamond could be converted into much-needed parking space.

PLATTER MATTER

By Zane Robbins

Gordon MacRae
The Right Girl for Me
I Get Up Every Morning

Right Girl is a smooth new ballad that has the stuff that makes hit tunes. Gordon MacRae's rich baritone voice gives the new ditty a smooth, melodic treatment that blends in nicely with Paul Weston's grade A instrumental backing. The Starlighters with MacRae on the flipover turn out a listenable tune that will catch on quick.

Alvino Rey
Nighty Night
The Continental

Disc jockeys from Maine to Manitoba will dance on their turntables now that Rey has done a remake on Night—he first waxed it for Bluebird, an RCA Victor affiliate, a number of years back, and the tune has been a rave on night dejay shows for years. Yvonne King does a swell vocal job, and the climax makes ya wanta—well, give a listen and see for yourself. Continental is a gay instrumental that has been tops from way back, and the Rey adaptation of the lively show tune is tops.

Frank Sinatra
Bali Ha'i
Some Enchanted Evening

Frankie's waxings of the new hit tunes from the smash Broadway production "Tales of the South Pacific," are some of the best striplings we've heard since the advent of the new Rodgers-Hammerstein II musical mint. His super-smooth rendition of Bali is aided no little by the exotic music of Axel Stordahl's orchestra and the girl chorus. A number of top artists have etched the new show tune, but no one has approached the peak set by "The Voice." The distinctive Sinatra-Stordahl styling is easily detected on the reverse side. Some think that Evening may surpass its platter-mate on the hit parade before too long, and when the new Columbia disc gets moving it may do just that.

Mel Torme
Careless Hands
She's A Home Girl

"The Velvet Fog" scores again with these two top hit tunes. Hands is a pleasant tune, taken from the Saturday night hillbilly crew who, incidentally, did it in an entirely different manner. The platter begins with a chorus clapping rhythmically in the background. Then comes the magic Torme vocal work. Mel does a creditable job on this catchy little ditty, and adds a slight Sinatra touch that's very effective at the tail-end of the disc. Home Girl is a simple ballad sung in typical Torme fashion. Although not destined for the Hit Parade, it will take in a lotta nickles in the drugstore jukeboxes.

ON POLICY

Last Sunday it was stated in the Letters To The Editor column that a policy governing letters sent in would be printed this week. It was the intention of the Editorial Board to do so.

However, because of the large number of letters, both pro and con, concerning the editorial printed Wednesday on Hans Freistadt, which have come in and are still coming in, this policy will be delayed until next week.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

REACTION CHARGE

Editor:

May I add a hearty ditto to the charge of reaction which Mr. Harper leveled at the DTH on May 11. I have read myopic mutterings in my time, but the May 13 editorial concerning Mr. Freistadt beats them all. I take it that the editorial is DTH policy, since it was not signed by any individual.

Before publicly dragging Mr. Freistadt's name through the mud, let us examine his record with something akin to 20-20 vision: Since his arrival on the campus he has been active in expounding Communist Philosophy—true. However, he has yet, to my knowledge, to advocate violent overthrow of the government, or to be found guilty by any authoritative body of subversive activities. His economic and political views, then, are his own business.

It seems to me that one of the basic rights of American citizenship is that of having one's character free from unwarranted defamation. I consider an attack such as the one against Mr. Freistadt to be a negation of the very "100% Americanism" which the editor so ardently espouses. And speaking of Americanism, I wonder if an acute interest in the form, policies, and actions of one's government is not a better indication of such than is public slander.

One wonders, too, at the motivation behind the editorial, when he reads simultaneously that Mr. Freistadt has been investigated by the F.B.I., and that he is totally unfit to receive an Atomic Energy Commission scholarship. Obviously, the F.B.I. has found Mr. Freistadt to be a fit recipient of such an honor. Or is the editor so "un-American" as to question the integrity of the F.B.I.

The editor might take note, by the interest shown in the press and by the attendance at the May 12 discussion on outlawing Communism, that his notion that over 99% of the student on campus are not interested in the problem of Communism is a myth. We must discuss all philosophics of government, giving objective consideration to merits and defects. Only then can we be certain that we are in continuous possession of the best form. The cry of "Red!" will earn for us nothing more than the disdain of intelligent people.

Melvin Steinberg

FREISTADT NAIVE

Editor:

Mr. Freistadt's recent letter to the Editor reveals him to be a rather naive character after all. He states that he sees no contradiction between his loyalty to the United States and his membership in the Communist Party; and that the allegations that the Party is under foreign control stand as lies until proved true in a court of law.

I invite Mr. Freistadt's attention to the findings of the Royal Canadian Commission, which was appointed in 1946 to investigate the facts relating to and the circumstances surrounding the communication, by Canadian officials and other persons in positions of trust, of secret and confidential information to agents of the Soviet Union. The Royal Commission's findings were upheld in court, and it was thus proven that Soviet agents were able to find Canadians willing to betray their country and to supply Soviet agents with secret information to which the Canadians had access in the course of their work.

Scientists, army officers, and secretaries, despite their oaths of allegiance, of office, and of secrecy, worked diligently of their own free will to perform acts of treason because their oaths to the Communist Party had a greater binding force than their oaths to the Canadian state.

The most surprising fact about the entire affair is that Mr. Freistadt expects us to believe that he can have two loyalties. He's not even a good Communist if he really believes such a falsehood. But in the light of the proven facts in the case of the Canadians, one does not have to ponder too long over Mr. Freistadt's position to guess which way he will jump when the opportunity presents itself. He has mistaken the temper of the people of his adopted land.

More than any thing else, he has bitten the hand that is feeding him, so to speak, and he has offended one's sense of fair play. He has mistaken natural consternation at an ungrateful guest for hysteria based on fear. The choice is yours, Mr. Freistadt, and let us hope that your future answers will reveal as much about the confusion in your mind as your recent letter.

Robert M. McAllister

QUOTE UNNECESSARY

Editor:

I noticed recently where the clever local Communist who is to receive a scholarship granted by a democratic people challenges you to produce a quote by him in which he attacked the American form of government. Now I don't know whether you can do this or not, Mr. Editor—but I submit that it is entirely unnecessary and uncalled for under the circumstances. His challenge is merely an invitation to penetrate the endless maze of deceit and trickery characteristically manifested in communist tactics.

Any thinking person knows that the American form of government is not the same as the Soviet or Communist form. The very fact that Freistadt is a professed communist is certainly formidable proof that he is against the American form of government. Freistadt tells us that he is a loyal American.

I challenge the loyalty of any American who UNQUALIFYINGLY asserts that he would not defend the U. S. in an aggressive war. Freistadt specifically made that assertion in a recent debate. Obviously, what appears to be an aggressive war might well be a defensive one.

You are certainly correct in linking political and scientific beliefs insofar as Communists are concerned. Unforatunately, it has been and is being amply demonstrated that the arts and sciences in Communist countries must conform to Communist political and philosophical dogma, rather than left alone to develop in a free and unpolluted atmosphere.

Let me commend you highly for the stand taken in this controversy. Frankly, I never dreamed that the "let em alone" attitude fostered by Frank Graham (as a college President) would be dispelled so quickly. Stick to your guns, Sir, for your aim is true. My hat off also to the distinguished SENIOR Senator from North Carolina and America's outstanding security commentator, Fulton Lewis Jr. for publicly exposing the rotten affair.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

HEARST PAPER

Editor:

CONGRATULATIONS!—You have certainly proved the accusation made in a recent letter to the editor. When Robert Harper said the Tar Heel was beginning to resemble a Hearst paper with its lack of balance, I was rather amused, feeling that it was due to the political immaturity of our editors, not any planned reactionary policy.

However, since your editorial on Hans Freistadt appeared yesterday, I have been forced to change my opinion. I now consider you even more reactionary than any Hearst "newspaper"—a college paper, under the pretense of representing all shades of thought on campus, has no right to a page-long editorial, replete with such un-democratic "mug-wash." At least we know where a Hearst paper stands and have a choice of reading other town papers—thank God!

I only consider three points in your editorial worth discussing; the rest was irrational and typical of the "witch-hunting" and "name-calling" now going on nationally and locally. It's practically reached the place where a girl can't even wear a pink sweater without being called a "Red." Let "them" call Carolina a "hotbed of Communism." Our parents and friends at home won't believe it if we've made it our business to clear up that mistaken notion.

How can a person call himself an American and advocate abolishing "Freedom of the Press?" How can we afford to restrict "Freedom of Speech" and expect to foster democratic government in other countries?

Hans Freistadt is evidently a brilliant student or he would not have been granted a scholarship by the Atomic Energy Commission. I can vouch for his ability as an instructor—I had the pleasure of being one of his students last quarter, and I can honestly say that I came out not only with a greater understanding of Physics, but still a hard-boiled Democrat! I know this may come as a shock to some readers, but believe it or not, Mr. Freistadt didn't say one word in class outside the realm of Physics!

If the membership of our scientific investigators were restricted to 100% Americans (How Gerald Smith would smile at these words), as suggested by our editor, I doubt seriously if the United States would ever have developed the atomic bomb—you see, great men like Oppenheimer and Einstein who played such important roles, were of "Foreign" descent.

May I appeal to the student government that we be more careful next year in our election of Tar Heel editors-let's have people, who can give us more politically mature editorials.

Frankly, those of us who are truly concerned with maintaining and furthering the democratic way of life, are scared. Yet, if we defend a communist's right to speak, we're called "Reds" ourselves. a practice reminiscent of Hitler's rise to power.

Perhaps the best expression of our philosophy is contained in Voltaire's often-quoted but under-practiced words, "I may not agree with what you have to say, but I'll fight to death to defend your right to say it!"

Now is the opportune time for all "liberals" on campus to state their case and organize a powerful bloc to counteract this onset of reaction.

Let's take our faces out of the sand, instead of falling into the trap totalitarians have set for us. Let's stand up and defend those high ideals we hold so dear!

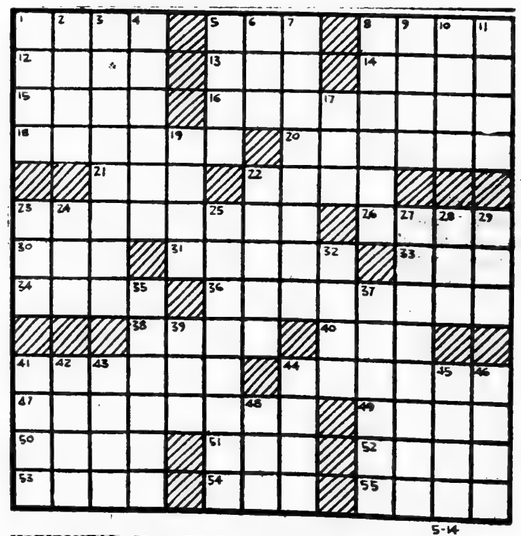
TIME PROBLEM



Editor:

Most people who study in the Reserve Reading Room of the library are annoyed by the fact that a big, old light hangs right in front of the clock, so that it is difficult to check on the time. I have asked several conservative friends of mine to write to the Daily Tar Heel in protest considering that this would be a first step toward correcting an unpleasant situation.

Since these friends have been slow to respond (although they agreed with me in principle) I have decided to write a letter myself. I do so with the earnest hope that the idea which follows will not suffer as a result of left-wing sponsorship.

I wish to suggest the formation of a United Front for political action directed toward the final elimination of an unnecessary evil—which by no stretch of the imagination can be attributed to capitalism.

Southern Loop Tennis, Golf Champs Decided Today

Fred Kovaleski Against Seixas In Singles Finals

By Larry Fox

As today's Southern Conference tennis finals go, so may go Monday's Carolina-William and Mary match for the number one singles players and doubles combinations when the two schools are slated to meet this afternoon for the loop matches starting at 2 o'clock on the varsity courts.

Vic Seixas and Fred Kovaleski both triumphed in their semifinal matches yesterday afternoon and will fight it out today in a rematch of last year's finals which saw Tar Heel Captain Seixas emerge with the singles crown.

The doubles encounter will see Seixas team up with Clark Taylor against Kovaleski and Howe Atwater. Kovaleski won the doubles crown last year with Bernie "Tut" Bartzen as his partner, defeating Seixas and Taylor in the finals, but this time the William and Mary duo is seeded in the number two slot.

Seedings Accurate

The seedings have held true thus far in the tournament with first-seeded Seixas dropping number four-man Atwater in the semifinals while Kovaleski, ranked second, downed Bo Roddey, third-seeded senior from Davidson College.

The Kovaleski-Roddey encounter was billed as the top match of the afternoon and for the first set it looked as if the lanky Indian netter was going to have his hands full. The two took turns winning their services and then Roddey went ahead by breaking Kovaleski's service in the sixth game. That made it 4-2 in the first set, but Kovaleski, who had been making a great number of errors, settled down and won seven games in succession before Roddey could get back with a win in the second canto that made the score 3-1.

It was all Kovaleski in the remaining games and he took the match, 6-4, 6-2, 6-1. Roddey almost pulled an upset with his steady back court game, but Kovaleski's service, he tallied approximately seven aces, and strong net game were the difference.

Seixas Scores

Seixas made his shots count agaist Atwater, taking a straight set 6-2, 6-4, 6-3 decision. The first and third matches were almost duplicates, reaching 2-2 and 3-3 deadlocks, respectively, before Seixas turned loose a string of wins to gain the set.

The number-one doubles match of the afternoon featured Seixas and Taylor against Davidson's Roddey and Ted Keesler. Both duos had turned in quarter-final easy wins just before meeting in the semis. The Carolina pair counted one of the quickest wins of the tournament, a 24-minute straight-set swamping of William and Mary's "C" boys, Huck Cole and Lyman Chennault by twin 6-1 scores.

The Davidson entry dropped Carolina's Charley Rice and Duke Wilder, 6-3, 6-1, in their quarter-final match, which was decided on a two-out-of-three basis. The semis are three of five.

No Upset Here

Seixas and Taylor took the first four games in the opening canto to start things rolling and dispell any ideas which the Davidson crew's strong showing in the quarter-finals might have started concerning an upset.

The Wildcats broke through Seixas' service to take the fifth

Blue Devils Play Here Today In Big Four Fight With Locals

Carolina's hard-hitting baseballers will be out to maintain their perfect record over their arch-rivals, the Blue Devils of Duke University, when the two nines meet this afternoon in Emerson Stadium at 2:30 for their fourth contest of the season.

The Tar Heels have met and defeated the Durham diamonders three times previously this spring and a victory in today's encounter will give the Tar Heels a firm grip on second place in the Big Four standings and will put them within one game of a clean sweep of the series with Duke.

Coaches Bunn Hearn and Walter Rabb have reliable Ray Blair as the Tar Heel's starting moundsman. The big righthander has hurled all three of the Carolina victories over the Devils this season, and local fans are hoping for another winning performance today.

In earlier contests with the Blue Devils, the Tar Heels took a one-sided affair on Easter Monday, and edged the Durham nine, 3-1 and 4-3, in the next two tilts.

The Tar Heels will field a "murderer's row" of sluggers in today's tilt. Led by Stan Goodman, who currently is pacing the Big Four batters, and Sid Varney, who hit a homer in Carolina's 8-4 win over State Thursday, the local lineup presents an impressive array of heavy timbermen.

The Tar Heel diamonders have a .500 average in Big Four play, with their win-loss record tied at four-all. Three of the Carolina victories have been at the expense of Duke, while the other was over State in Thursday's game.

The home team has dropped two decisions each to Wake Forest's dream team and State's Wolfpack.

Today's starting Carolina lineup will probably see an infield composed of Blair on the mound, Varney behind the plate, Will Hobbs on the initial sack, Goodman at second, Joe Brookshire at third, and Rip Ryan at the shortstop position.

Roving the outer gardens for the Tar Heels will be Don Ward in left field, Jim Ballou in center, and Ed Lamb in right field. All three are dangerous hitters.

Frosh at Duke

Coach Henry House's Tar Baby nine will journey to Duke this afternoon for a tilt with the Blue Imps of that Durham institution.

The locals defeated the Duke baseballers, 14-6, in their first engagement and tied the Dooksters, 6-6, in their next meeting, a ten inning affair.

Thursday, in their last outing the Carolina squad was handed a one-sided, 11-3 pasting by the Wolfpack yearlings of State. The locals have an overall record of six wins, two losses, and one tie.

Chapel Hill High Tops Roxboro, 3-0

The Chapel Hill High Wildcats kept alive their winning winning streak here yesterday afternoon by downing Roxboro 3-0 in the first half of an afternoon-night doubleheader.

Ward Will Lead Golfers in Loop Tourney at W-S

By Billy Carmichael III

WINSTON-SALEM, May 13—A banner crop of collegiate golfers will tee off here tomorrow morning at the Old Town Country Club in the one-day 36-hole Southern Conference golf championships.

At least 13 of the 16 loop teams will send entries to the big affair which promises to be the closest tournament in the dozen-odd years that the event has been held. North Carolina, Duke, Wake Forest, and State rule as a quartet of toss-up favorites with the Blue Devils attempting to regain the team laurels they won last year at Pinehurst

Wake Forest placed second at that time with State third and the Tar Heels fourth, but this year the Demon Deacons seem to be the slight favorite if there is one. They have victories over Duke and State and tied Carolina over this same Old Town course two weeks ago.

Arnold Palmer of Wake Forest is the defending medalist, but he will receive stiff competition this year from Tar Heel Harvie Ward and Art Wall of Duke. Palmer has beaten Wall in dual meet play this season while having halved with Ward. Wall beat Ward ealy this week in Durham.

A dark horse possibility for the medal honors is Fred Smith of South Carolina. Smith went to the finals of the recent Southern Intercollegiate at Athens, Ga., and split his season's match with Ward.

The North Carolina entry will be composed of Ward, Bob Cox, Roy McKenzie, Jack Brantley, Stub Sapp, and Frank Brooks. Sapp and McKenzie are from Winston-Salem and are playing a relative home course.

Each team is allowed six entrants in the team competition with the best four scores making up the team total.

The Old Town course, which boasts one of the toughest back nines in golf is in top shape for the meet.

Other schools expected to be represented besides the forementioned include Washington and Lee, Davidson, VPI, VMI, Maryland, Clemson, and William and Mary.

Soccer Clinic

A practice Soccer match will top off the days activities in the soccer clinic for the coaches and officials of this area that is to be held today in Chapel Hill under the supervision of Carolina's soccer coach, Marvin Allen.

The clinic is sponsored by John Blye of Duke, Arthur Paschal of High Point College, Eric De Grote of N. C. State, Robert Reese of Richmond Professional Institute, E. D. Fox of Roanoke College, Larry Ludwig of the University of Virginia, and Norm Lord of Washington and Lee.

The program for the day will include discussions on the fundamentals of soccer and soccer officiating, a luncheon for the officials and coaches and the soccer match between State and Carolina with the officials working under the supervision of Mr. Walder.

Carolina Thinclads Stay Unbeaten With 88-38 Victory Over Virginia

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., May 13—The University of North Carolina's visiting track team lived up to expectations here today as they smashed to an 88-38 win over the University of Virginia thin-clads on a very slow track before a crowd of about 1,000.

For the Tar Heels it was dual meet victory number four in four attempts. The visitors were in complete control from the first start and increased their margin with each successive event.

Running without the services of several of their top weight men, the Carolinians turned in a very creditable showing and swept 12 first places and tied for another. Only in the discus, where their three top men were missing, did the Tar Heels fail to garner at least a tie for top honors.

Double Winners

Carolina had two double winners for the afternoon. Big Jack Moody resumed his winning ways by copping the high jump with a jump of 6 ft. 2 in. and a win in the broad jump with a leap of 22 ft. 1 1/3 in. Bill Crimmins, sophomore, sprinter, won the 100 in 10.6 and the 220 in 23.2.

Virginia's lone winning effort was accomplished by Harry Mott in the discus with a toss of 132 ft. 10 1/4 in.

A big surprise in the Carolina camp came as a result of footballer George Verchick's win in the shot put. Verchick's toss was 44 ft. 8 3/4 in. on his first attempt at varsity competition.

Carolina swept firsts in all three of the distance events. Frank Hooper copped the half. Sam Magill ran off with the mile and John Ross won the two-mile. In addition to the slow condition of the track, many of the Carolina runners were not accustomed to the five-lap-to-the-mile track. Both of these conditions were factors in the slow times of many of these events.

Laddie Terrell, Carolina quarter-miler, turned in one of the afternoon's better performances, running the lap and a quarter 440 in 50.5.

In the hurdles, Carolina's favored Dick Taylor won the highs in 14.9 and Bill Albans ran away with the lows in 24.6. Jack Moody took a second for the Tar Heels in the highs while Virginia's Don Mohler was second in the lows and third in the highs.

Carolina's top pole vaulter Bob House soared 12 ft. into the clouds to gain a first place tie in that event with Virginia's Roller. Rusty Russell of Carolina took the third. Bob Kirk, Carolina's Penn Relays champ, won the javelin throw with a toss of 162 ft. 9 in.

In the two dashes Carolina scored clean sweeps, taking all three places in each event.

Athletic director Bob Fetzer of Carolina and Tar Heel coach Dale Ranson both voiced complete satisfaction over the results of the meet.

Gobblers Next

BLACKSBURG, Va. May 13—The University of North Carolina track team arrived here today fresh from their 88-38 victory over the University of Virginia Cavaliers.

The Tar Heels take on the Virginia Tech Gobblers here tomorrow on the local track. They are expected to make a clean sweep on their Virginia trip and put down the Gobblers without too much trouble.

Stickmen to Meet Generals Today On Navy Field

The Tar Heel lacrosse squad will have their own plan of attack when the Washington and Lee Generals invade Navy Field today at 2:30 to engage the Carolina team in the old Indian game. During the past week, Coach Bill Darden has worked out a new attack system which he hopes will net his team quite a few goals.

John Bolgiano and Sommers will probably be the scoring threats in this new plan of attack, while Jess "Choo-Choo" Greenbaum and Fred Poisson will also be scoring possibilities.

The scoring this year has been almost evenly divided between seven players. Greenbaum is high scorer with five, while Taylor is close behind with four. The remaining ten goals are distributed equally between Dietzel, Bolgiano, Manning, Poisson, and Murchison.

The Washington and Lee team will fashion an attack of their own with Tommy Tongue leading the offensive line. Tongue is a product of St. Pauls prep school in Baltimore, Maryland. Last year he was a member of the Southern All-Star team which defeated the North. Coach Baxter will bring a squad of twenty experienced players to Chapel Hill including such formidable stars as Guthrie, Jones, Ryer, Pacy, and Gray.

The Carolina defensemen consisting of Lynch, Timberlake, Winius, Debnam, Nearman, and Wilkerson will be faced with the problem of stopping the Generals a greater understanding of physics, but still a hard-boiled Democrat! I know this may come as a shock to some readers, but believe it or not, Mr. Freistadt didn't say one word in class outside the realm of physics!"

Freistadt, who still speaks with a noticable German accent, said he was quite surprised that he had won the Atomic Energy Commission fellowship. He said he was chosen on the basis of a competitive examination, his academic record, and recommendations by faculty members.

"There was no question about political beliefs," he said.

Dr. P. E. Shearin, head of the Physics Department, backed the student up, pointing out that the questionnaire "had nothing about loyalty. The only requirements were as to scholarship, and on that point the applicant was well qualified.'

The work he is doing now, Freistadt said, "has no military value of any kind. It is pure theoretical research. I do not expect to work for the AEC when I finish, but I plan to teach."

Had many reporters been bothering Freistadt in the past few days?

"Oh, yes, but I am glad to talk to anyone except people from Time and Life magazines."

And how about his own literary pursuits?

"Well, I will still write some letters to the editor, even though he may not print them."

ed to their disappointment that they were not in the spacious dining room but in a little two by four cubby hole. It's only visible advantage was that it opened onto the patio. Open, however, was not to be taken literally, for the door was locked and no key in sight.

If Louise had been disappointed at the size of the room, she was even more disappointed at the thought that she would have to return to the lower level without seeing even the patio.

And then the bitter blow came. The elevator, their only means of returning to civilization, was stuck and could not be budged.

But Tom was undaunted. Looking the situation over, he discovered one small foot-square window in the room, and with careful manuvering he was able to crawl through and jump down to the roof.

Here he stood for nearly half an hour and shouted for help. Finally one of the workers heard him and went in search of Dr. Marshall.

Slightly baffled at what the worker told him about a boy being on the roof, he used the special Marshall technique on the elevator and raced upstairs where Louise was wishing she had never even heard of the Morehead Building.

The rescue was made in short order, and the two adventure-seekers were taken on a complete tour of the building to help them forget the episode.

The moral of this story is don't explore the Morehead Building unless you're immune to claustraphobia, for the spacious building isn't spacious on every floor.

DEMURELY GARBED in a long-sleeved black lace dress and veil, Princess Margaret Rose of Great Britain is escorted to a twenty minute private audience with Pope Pius XII in his personal library at Vatican City. It was the first meeting of Britain's royalty with the Pontiff in 26 years. The 18-year-old princess made the visit despite protests from Protestant organizations throughout England.

Colonial Stores Announce Plans For Training Men

The Colonial Stores recently announced a plan for recruiting and training young men who desire to go into the retail grocery business, Joe Galloway, director of Placement Service, said yesterday. A representative from the Company will be here Monday, May 23, to interview students who are interested in the work. A group meeting of the entire group is scheduled for that day, followed by individual interviews.

The plan is to take college men for summer work between their sophomore and junior years, and give the mpractical work experience and training directed toward store management and merchandising. Upon graduation, the trainee would again be placed in a retail store and, with six months of experience behind him, should be prepared for promotion to Assistant Store Department Manager within a few months.

Candidates selected will work in a retail store near their home. Careful consideration will be given to interest, scholastic record, extra-curricular activities, and personality.

Sophomores who are interested should contact Placement Office, 209 South Building, to receive further information and an appointment with a representative of the Company.

Wolfe Collection In Library Display

Originals of All Wolfe's Published Works Contained in 20th Anniversary Exhibit

By Leonard Dudley

"The Thomas Wolfe Collection," comprising at least one original copy of all the author's published works, is now on display in the east corridor of the library.

In the tall case beside the reserve reading room there is a recent edition to the collection, a leather-bound scrap book containing original letters from Wolfe to Professor Koch, given to the library by Mrs. Koch and her son, Robert Koch, of Princeton. The Koch scrap book contains, in addition to the letters, the original typescrip to Wolfe's first play, The Return of Buck Gavin, in a notebook marked "English 31, Dramatic Composition"; Wolfe's signed contract for the publication of Buck Gavin; the Wolfe memorial issue of the Carolina Playbook (1943); the manuscript in long hand of Wolfe's article about Professor Koch, "The Man who lives with his Idea," with Koch's pencilled corrections; three articles about Wolfe clipped from the Saturday Review of Literature; and a so-called "Biographical Sketch" which Wolfe had apparently been asked to write for class, and in which he perversely gives not one scrap of biographical information, but discusses at some length his admiration for George Bernard Shaw.

Also in this same case there are three original wood engravings used to illustrate "Look Homeward Angel."; an essay entitled "The Crisis in Industry," the shortest thing Wolfe ever wrote and for which he received the Worth prize for philosophy.

The three cases in the east corridor of the library are filled with original copies of all Wolfe's books, two editions in French, De la Mort au Matin (From Death to

Disk-Jockey Jimmy Capps Here Sunday

Popular MC Invited For UC 'Stars' Show

"Music which is designed to be heard with the heart," will be heard on this campus next Sunday when popular disk-spinner Jimmy Capps of "Our Best to You" will twirl tunes for two hours from the porch of Graham Memorial.

From 9 until 11 o'clock Sunday night, Capps will air his sentimental melodies for University students' consumption only as a feature of the University Club's "Music Under the Stars" program.

While lad and lass lounge on the lawn before Graham Memorial, Capps will present his regular format—sweet, smooth strains—unless students request otherwise.

"I'm not against swing music," Capps told a Carolina delegation of four University Club representatives Thursday night, "but I am going to leave the selection of songs up to you folks." The four, Nemo Nearman, Harold Bursley, Daggy Ogg and Lynn Strohkorb, visited Capps in his WPTF studio to invite him to the campus for the "Stars" series.

Capps nodded and smiled, "Why I'd be tickled pink to come over," he said.

In order that the program be conducted as nearly like that of the NBC station feature as possible, request boxes will be placed in the YMCA and Graham Memorial Tuesday through Thursday for students' dedications. Placed on the requests should be the song title and the dedication, such as, "From Cuddles in Stacy to his little Gumdrop at St. Mary's . . . "

The disc-jockey will come to the campus this Thursday to pick up the requests and complete arrangements for the program.

Tom Jordan Gets Fraternity Award

Tom Jordan, president of the campus chapter of Alpha Tau Omega, last night received one of th highest awards the national fraternity can offer to its members.

Jordan was named winner of the Thomas Arkle Clark award for this province of the fraternity, and was selected as one of three honorable mentions for the national award. The presentation was made by Dick Johnson of North Wilkesboro, University alumnus and chief of this ATO province.

Yackety-Yack Distribution Is Scheduled

Annuals Available In GM Wednesday

Yackety-Yack distribution is scheduled to begin Wednesday afternoon in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial, yearbook business manager Ted Fussell said yesterday.

Definite hours have not been assigned yet, said Fussell, but have tentatively been set for afternoons, Monday through Friday.

All students who have been in school consistently since fall quarter may collect their Yacks without additional cost, as matriculation fees automatically cover Yack payment. However, if a student has not been enrolled each quarter since the fall session, he should bring $1.50 for each quarter missed.

Advance copies have been received by the yearbook staff, and Fussell said this year's Yack is one of the best ever produced. The first shipment of 3,500 yearbooks is expected early this week, with the second due within the following week.

Satterfield Plays At GM Concert Tonight at 8:15

Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra will present their second annual concert tonight at 8:15 o'clock in Memorial Hall. The program is being sponsored by Graham Memorial.

The program will include the following compositions written by members of the band: "Prelude in Satin" by Carolyn Satterfield, "Night Song" by Thomas Allred, "First Suite for Wind Orchestra" by Samuel Andrews, "Catawba Rhapsody" by John Satterfield, "Dona Nobis Pacem," anonymous German Round Canon arranged by John Satterfield and "Second Suite for Wind Orchestra" by Frank Justice.

In addition to the original numbers the program will include popular selections by such American composers as Duke Ellington, George Gershwin and John Green.

Satterfield's orchestra, which has played for numerous dances on the campus, is composed of Charles Simpson, Roger McDuffie, Luther Minton, Fred Phipps, Carl Baxter, Norman DeLancy, James Oates, Frank Justice, James Crawford, Samuel Andrews, Perry Ritch, Thomas Allred, James Duke, Eugene Stryker, Nelson Benton, George Creel, John Satterfield and vocalist Ruth Justice.

Newton to Speak To Pi Delt Frat

Pi Delta Alpha, pre-dental fraternity, will have an open discussion and talk by Dr. M. E. Newton, local dentist, at a meeting tomorrow night at 8:15 in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial.

The discussion will provide pertinent information of interest to all students planning to enter dental school. Members are requested to attend and all visitors are invited.

TMA 'Variety Night' Curtain Is Tomorrow

First Annual Presentation Features Skits by Four Groups in Memorial Hall

Curtain time for the first annual Town Men's Association "Variety Night" will be 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall tomorrow night, Nelson Taylor, past president of the TMA, said yesterday.

The auditorium will rolic to the best that four organizations have to offer, Taylor said, in this premier of what he hopes will become "an entertainment institution on campus."

The Carolina Tumblers will perform their acrobatic acts; Tri-Delt plans to present the "Sleeping Cutie" skit which took top honors at the Sigma Chi Derby a week ago; Lambda Chi has a mystery stunt on tap and the Pi-KAs will present "The Night the Ghost Got In."

"Only one loving cup will be presented to the best entrant this year," Taylor said, "but next year, we promise that three awards will be made, one to the fraternity division, one to sororities and women's dorms and the third to men's dorms and non-theater groups."

Taylor, who will act as master-of ceremonies, said there will be three judges on hand tomorrow night from Sound and Fury, the Playmakers and the Journalism department. Judging will be on entertainment value only.

"This year's participation is small," Taylor said, "but we expect interest to build up. Next year we hope that participation will be greater and that interest will increase through the years until this becomes an entertainment institution on campus."

CP Meeting Slated In GM Tomorrow

Campus Party members are urged to attend an important meeting scheduled for Monday afternoon at 5 in Roland Parker Lounge 2, Graham Memorial, Chairman Vestal Taylor said yesterday.

Rooms Available For Graduation Guests in Dorms

The University will have dormitory accomodations for parents, wives, and husbands of degree candidates as well as alumni returning for Commencement and the reunions, it was announced yesterday.

Hotels in the vicinity have been flooded with requests for accomodations. The dormitory rooms should be reserved by writing or seeing James E. Wadsworth, Housing Office, 22 New East Annex, Chapel Hill, giving the number of spaces needed, names of guests, and the nights of Commencement for which reservations are desired. A room assignment desk for reservations will be opened at the Alumni Office, Carolina Inn, on Saturday morning, June 4, at 9 o'clock. The desk will remain open on Saturday, Sunday, Monday and until 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, June 7. Room assignments and keys will be given upon arrival of guests.

The rooms will be supplied with bed linen, towels, etc. No charge is made by the University for such accomodations.

Choral Rehearsal Set for 3 Today

A special rehearsal of the Chapel Hill Choral Club has been called for this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The rehearsal will be held in Memorial Hall, instead of Hill Hall as previously announced.

Johnson Says Grant Screening Is 'Rotten'

Senate Kills Measure To Abolish Segregation

Student Solons From Throughout State Disagree on Proposal; 143 Participate

RALEIGH, May 14—The 13th annual session of the North Carolina Student Legislature adjourned here late this afternoon after killing a dynamite-laden bill to abolish segregation on all public carriers and in library reading rooms.

The Senate actually defeated the bill twice, spelling its doom this afternoon by cracking down on a slightly-amended version by a vote of 16 to 8. It voted the bill down yesterday by 16 to 14, while the House passed it by an overwhelming vote.

The Legislature, a mock General Assembly held each year to bring out college thought on actual and potential state legislation, was made up of 143 students from 18 colleges and universities throughout North Carolina. It first convened at noon yesterday, and held four sessions in each chamber, finally adjourning at 4:30 today.

The two houses of the assembly got together on another racial issue bill today, however. A measure abolishing segregation for graduate students in state-supported schools was passed by strong majorities. An amendment tacked to it which was passed by the House yesterday was approved by the Senate today to make all private schools not admitting Negro graduate students relinquish their tax exemption, which is granted to all educational institutions.

The graduate student bill caused an hour of debate in both the Senate and the House, but the real fireworks hit when the question of lowering discriminatory bans in common carriers went on the floor. Herb Mitchell of the University led the successful fight to kill the bill in the Senate, while its strongest opponents in the House included Dortch Warriner, Ted Leonard, Bill Duncan and Dave Sharpe.

Arguments against the bill claimed that the South was not ready for abolishing segregation on the level of common carriers yet. The place to start, some of the bill's proponents argued, was in higher education, such as graduate schools, referring to the bill which had already passed the body.

Six Professors Called Reds By Committee

U. of Chicago Prexy Is Called by Illinois

CHICAGO, May 14.—(UP)—Six University of Chicago professors and the President of the school's Board of Trustees were called upon by a state legislative commission today to answer charges of Communist-front membership.

Subpenas were issued for the six professors to appear before the Illinois Seditious Activities Commission next Thursday. Laird Bell, President of the Board of Trustees, was "invited" to appear with them.

The professors are Harold C. Urey, one of the nation's' top atomic scientists; sociologist Ernest W. Burgess; Wayne McMillen, Professor of Social Service Administration; Rexford Guy Tugwell, political scientist; Malcom Sharp, Professor of Law; and Robert J. Havighurst, Professor of Education.

At Springfield, Ill., State Sen. Paul W. Broyles, chairman of the investigation commission, acknowledged that the subpenas "probably weren't necessary." The men had expressed a desire to defend themselves before the commission.

They were accused by Howard Rushmore, writer for the New York Journal-American, of belonging to Communist front organizations. Rushmore testified before the commission at Springfield last month.

Chancellor Robert M. Hutchins of the University disputed his testimony, and after the hearing the six accused professors filed affidavits denying Rushmore's charges.

The Commission decided last Monday to give the professors a hearing.

Tugwell, former Governor of Puerto Rico, said he has received his subpena but knows "nothing" about the case.

"I haven't been told anything about it yet," he said.

Seniors Must Sign For '49'er Picnic

Seniors who plan to attend the '49'er picnic at Hogan's Lake Thursday afternoon should sign up tomorrow and Tuesday in the YMCA lobby from 9 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, a Senior Class spokesman said yesterday.

Only those making reservations will be able to attend the picnic, the spokesman said.

The picnic will get under way at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, and will feature swimming and games in addition to entertainment by the Bull City Nighthawks from 6:30 to 10:30.

Food will be provided by the Senior Class from the Senior Class fund, the spokesman said. In the event of rain, the picnic will be cancelled.

Young Cancels Glee Club Meets

Paul Young, Director of Glee Clubs, announced that the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs will not have their regular meetings on Monday and Tuesday, respectively, of this week. However, the Glee Clubs will have regular meetings later in the week, the Men's Glee Club on May 18, and the Women's on May 19. These meetings are very important, and it is urged that all members attend.

In addition to its regular meeting on Monday night of this week, the Chapel Hill Choral Club will have a special rehearsal this afternoon in Memorial Hall from 3 to 5 o'clock.

Preregistration Held This Week

Preregistration will be held tomorrow through Saturday of this week for those students who do not plan to attend summer school, but who will return for the Fall Quarter, 1949.

Students attending Summer School who are planning to attend in the Fall, 1949, will be given an opportunity to preregister during the summer for the fall quarter at a date to be announced later.

SEC Claims No Connection in Giving Grants

WASHINGTON, May 14—(UP)—Sen. Edwin C. Johnson, (D.-Col.), said today there apparently was "rotten and vicious screening" of applicants for atomic energy scholarships.

Johnson referred to charges that the government had granted fellowships to known Communists.

"I'm very much opposed to granting scholarships to Communists," he said. "I don't know why we should teach Communists the science of atomic energy."

Johnson said he did not propose any legislation to ban such practices, and added "it would seem that no one would need any legislative supervision" in such matters.

The fault, he said, lies with "rotten and vicious screening" by those in charge of the program.

The Atomic Energy Commission has pointed out that it has nothing to do with the award of fellowships to any students. It turns over its fellowship funds to the National Research Council which makes the actual awards.

"The commission does not influence the selection of the fellows, and does not require FBI investigation if the training program proposed by the applicant is non-secret work," the Commission said.

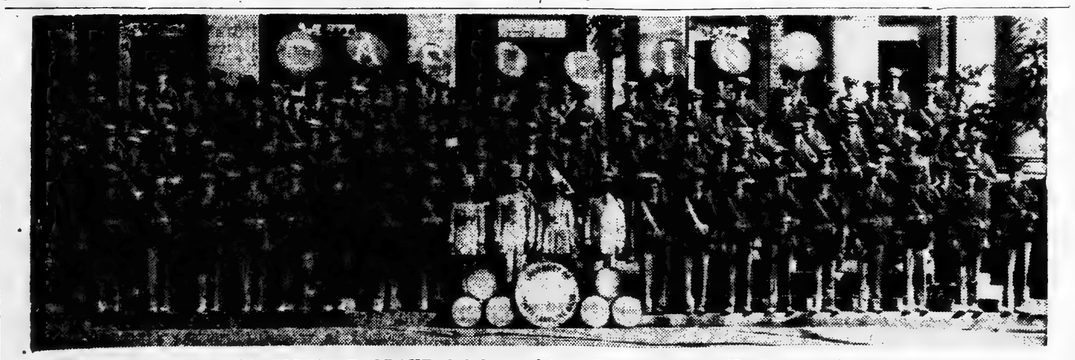
Rep. W. Sterling Cole, (R.-N.Y.) has identified Han Freistadt, an Austrian-born physicist of the University of North Carolina, as a Communist. He recently was awarded a $1,600 commission fellowship for advanced scientific study. Freistadt admitted he is a Communist.

Cole said today he does not think it necessary to investigate the loyalty of every student who receives a scholarship or fellowship from the Commission.

"I think it is necessary only to investigate those whose studies might involve secret data," he said.

"However, where an individual has been brought to the attention of the Commission, then I think his loyalty should be investigated and his scholarship revoked if he turns out to be a subversive character."

Meanwhile, Chairman Brien McMahon, (D.-Conn.) said his Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee will begin hearing May 23 on the Commission's practices in the matter of scholarships.



Dancers Present GM Show Today

Lib Stoney and the Carolina Modern Dance Group will be featured on the program at the regular meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club this afternoon.

After a program of folk dances by the group the club will see movies of the dances of Latin America.

Following the movies Foster Fitzsimmons, head of the Modern Dance Group, will lead a discussion of folk dancing. Demonstrations of native dances will be given by members of the club from Denmark, the Virgin Islands, the Philippine Islands and Latin America. Music for the dances will be furnished by records of native music.

At the conclusion of the meeting in the Roland Parker Lounge tea will be served to those present.

THE UNIVERSITY BAND PICTURED ABOVE, led by assistant director Hubert Henderson, will present a concert today at 5 o'clock near Davie Poplar. In case of rain the concert will be held in Hill Music Hall. The second in a series of lawn concerts, the program is to include classical and semi-classical compositions. Students and townspeople are invited.

Intellectual Difficulty

The only "intellectual difficulty" which causes man to refuse to acknowledge God's Lordship over his life is the difficulty caused by the vanity of his imagination concerning himself. The only "intellectual problem" which keeps a man from entering into personal relations with God is the problem occasioned by man's delight in thinking more highly of himself than he ought to think. Man keeps himself from God because he is unwilling to renounce his pride and acknowledge his past irresponsibility and disobedience toward God. Man's false imagination concerning himself keeps him unwilling to ask God's forgiveness, without which he cannot enter into fruitful personal relations with the One Whose will he flaunted and to Whom he has refused to be responsible. For such a man, there are always "intellectual difficulties" involved in accepting God's lordship over life. Such a man has already busied his intellect in the service of his pride and arrived at an interpretation of life which enables him to evade some embarrassing facts about himself. Some of these facts are:—Man is a creature of God, created to live in responsible obedience toward God. Man is free, but God has set limits to his freedom. Man, when disobedient, knows himself guilty before God and fears that he might have to make costly restitution. And, the very evils which beset man are rooted in his disobedience.—How readily the intellect serves pride, and with what finesse the intellect can do pride's bidding, are illustrated in the multitude of "intellectual interpretations of life" which obscure these facts about man and his relationship with God.

In contrast, the Hebrew-Christian tradition honestly faces these unpleasant facts about man and makes them the starting point of God's work among men. According to the Hebrew-Christian tradition the relationship between God and man begins to become fruitful as soon as man repents of his irresponsibility and disobedience and accepts the forgiveness offered by the God before Whom he has hitherto acted according to the vanity of his own imaginations concerning himself. Repentance and forgiveness are the keywords in the Hebrew-Christian message to men, and the humble acceptance of this message issues in salvation, in deliverance from sin.

Because repentance is such an unfamiliar behaviour pattern in our society, there is a strangeness about that which is the actual starting point of a fruitful relationship between man and God. We are not, however, without an illustrative example. In dealing with a limited phase of man's "lostness" and bringing salvation into the lives of such men, Alcoholics Anonymous is illustrating some of the basic facts about man's return to that God-relationship for which he was created. Here, in the words of one who went "along the way," is a description of the "steps" along the way from bondage to victory: . . .

> "We admitted that we were powerless over alcohol—that our lives had become unmanageable. We came to believe that a Power greater than ourselves could restore us to sanity. We made a decision to turn our will and our lives over to the care of God, as we understood Him. We made a searching and fearless moral inventory of ourselves and admitted to God, to ourselves, and to another human being the exact nature of our wrongs. We were entirely ready to have God remove all these defects of character and humbly asked Him to remove all our shortcomings. We made a list of all persons we had harmed, and became willing to make amends to all of them. We made direct amends to such people wherever possible, except where to do so would have injured them or others. We continued to take personal inventory, and when we were wrong we promptly admitted it. We sought through prayer and meditation to improve our conscious contact with God, as we understood Him, praying only for knowledge of His will for us, and the power to carry that out in our lives. Having had a spiritual experience as the result of these steps, we tried to carry this message to alcoholics, and to practice these principles in all of our affairs."

There, in contemporary action, is repentance, beginning with the renunciation of pride. It is behaviour such as that which the Hebrew-Christian tradition continues to proclaim as fundamental to men who would live in fellowship with God.

The WASHINGTON SCENE

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 14—President Truman must have an extremely moderate idea as to the prices being commanded by high - class entertainment these days. He'd drive a 10 per cent theatrical agent crazy.

At his birthday party, after he had rendered a batch of piano solos, and been entertained in turn by Jose Iturbi, Jessica Dragonette, old Maestro Barnee, and met warbler Robert Merrill, the President beamed at his host, Attorney General Tom Clark, and said naively:

"You couldn't see a show like this for $10."

I don't know how the professionals really felt about it, but they managed to smile. There was a general suspicion, however, that they didn't feel so modest about their entertainment value as the amateur.

The President knocked off a thing called "Minuet in G," which, my musical spies tell me, Paderewski used to play pretty good too. His next offering baffled the professionals.

"What is it?" Miss Dragonette asked pianist Iturbi.

"Blessed if I know," admitted the latter.

The President revealed it was composed by a party named Chopin, whom some of the more elegant guests seemed to have heard of, although they tell me he hasn't done much lately. "I'm not too sure of the right name," added Mr. Truman. "I call it 'The Battle of Waterloo.'"

All the customers—I mean guests—murmured admiringly at the President's musical knowledge, declaring he'd be a cinch to run off with a quiz show.

This gave Presidential Assistant John Steelman a chance to do some nifty apple-polishing.

"A man doesn't get to be President by accident," hosannaed the astute Dr. Steelman. "He can do the same thing with history."

The guests had never heard Mr. Truman play any history but they seemed to take the good Doctor's word for it.

The President always plays sitting down, in contrast to that other great pianist, Jimmy Durante. Consequently there was no situation such as developed the last time I heard Mr. Durante perform. In his gyrations he backed into the piano, causing it to emit a solid chord.

"That's strange," commented Mr. Durante. "I usually play by ear."

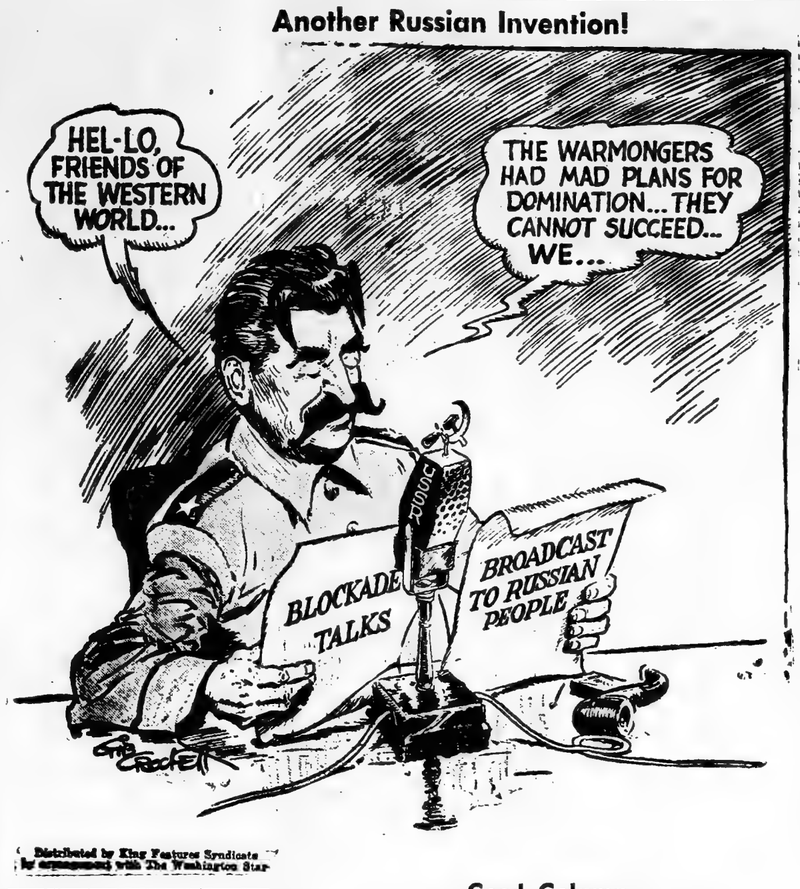
The rest of the menu was fair too, consisting of jellied soup, cheese mousse (Printer: Please spell that with two s's because it ain't the singular of mice), filet of beef, and strawberries with ice cream. The champagne had 1942 stamped on it, which my gourmet friend, Society Kid Hogan, assures me wasn't a particularly good vintage year.



Scotch and Bourbon went before the champagne; brandy after. But no one started any arguments, such as could Leslie Biffle, in his prime, have beaten Joe Louis?

Speaking of Mr. Biffle, the distinguished Secretary of the Senate was sprung for that one evening from Bethesda Naval Hospital where he is undergoing treatment for bursitis. He went right back to the hospital next morning, and is still there, although he insists the party had nothing to do with it.

Biff sat at the President's table. Others who rated the head trough were Gen. George C. Marshall, Speaker Sam Rayburn, and White House Jester George Allen. Very likely the President wanted some laughs.

The other notables, including the Chief Justice, sat at lesser tables. Mayor O'Dwyer was down from New York and acted just like any other good Democrat.

Another Russian Invention!

To The Editor

PRAISE FOR YE EDITOR

Editor:

We would like to congratulate you on your editorials and the position you have taken on the Freistadt affair. For a long time Carolina students have let their school's reputation be formed by a few loud-mouthed radicals that have the State, if not the nation, convinced that Chapel Hill is a hotbed of Communist activity.

We're mighty glad to see that you had the courage and the audacity to publish the stand that you took as the newspaper of the student body. We agree with you on every point, except for one. We would go further than you suggest, and not only take this ungrateful (you wouldn't print it, so we'll just say "Blank") blank's atomic scholarship away from him, but we would also take his citizenship away from him and send him back to his native Austria.

Congratulations, once again, Mr. Editor. And, oh, yes! Don't let the wails the fellow travelers are going to cut loose bother you a bit. In fact right now, by carefully watching the letters to the editor during this period, the student body could learn the identity of every Communist on the campus!

Saturday Moans

By Harriet Williamson

Moans and groans accompany Saturday classes—while students complain, "Ugh, another day in that class," the professors are muttering, "Must I look at them again!"

"For its one, two three beers you're out at the old Curve Inn." Seen at the Patio last week was a most unusual hoe down where all jitterbugs were trying to outdo the other. Among those in the spotlight—by virtue of superior grace was Dusty Moore, while Harry Buchannan and Wick Andrews took the prize for contortionists of the hour. Harry had a step never seen before by man or beast.

We all want to get ahead in life and maybe even get a job. One enterprising coed, Liddie Bett Myatt, made an application (for a job the other day. Not being too certain of the technicalities involved, when she was asked her typing speed Liddie replied that she could type 85 words a minute. That made a visible impression on the prospective employer who next asked if she knew shorthand. Of course she did, but it was a system all her own. Egyptian heiroglyphich are back again, you know.

There was no work done in Chapel Hill last Friday. Soda jerks weren't jerking, clerks weren't clerking, and watiers weren't waiting. Instead, everyone was out in front of the Varsity Shop observing whether it melted from the top fastest or from the bottom. If you could squeeze between legs or walk over heads, you might have spied a straw hat encased in a huge block of ice on National Straw Day. The contest entries guessed at what time the hat would touch the pavement when the ice melted. As there were four winners, just what is Art Weiner going to do with his share—one fourth of a straw hat?

Troubles, nothing in this world but troubles for Ruth Whalen, chairman of the May Day festivities. May Day is usually celebrated in the Forest Theater, but due to play practices Samuel Seldon said, "The Forest Theater is simply out of the question—totally so!" In a spur of inspiration, Ruth thought of the Arboretum, but alack, the botanists said, "BLACKBALL!" Why, their careless feet might trample on a precious African toothpick-lilly or a rare specie of Agropopus Annonymous. Now May Day is to be held in front of McIver. Want to make something out of it?

Along this vein, the foremost question is who will be May Queen? The pageant theme will be "Alice in Wonderland" and all the characters from Humpty Dumpty on down to the Mock Turtle will be there.

Convocation honoring the new Phi Betes was a great event, although one hapless youth sauntered in a little bit late. He saw a group going to the front of the auditorium, so he went along too—Fred Covington wishes to explain he wasn't trying to be a Phi Beta Kappa—after all, they looked just like everyone else.

—CPU Roundtable—

Will Depression Come?

One of the major problems confronting our economy today is whether we shall continue in a period of near full employment and prosperity or witness another depression. In approaching this very pertinent subject, we shall attempt to set forth, in an objective manner, a few points favoring each side of the question.

Reasons why there will not be a depression:

1. Much controversy has developed because of the layoff of workers in the textile and other soft goods industries. In some quarters this appears as a definite trend toward a depression; however, close observation of the matter proves the contrary. The real reason why the textile, shoes, and soft goods industries are experiencing a decline in sales cumulated with unemployment is because consumption of these goods is beginning to return to normalcy.

As soon as the manufacturers again foresee a market for socks, shirts, etc., some of the laborers will be rehired by the industries as permanent employees, because the new market will require a medium but steady flow of goods. The other workers not rehired by these industries will be absorbed by other industries which require more workers because of the already increased and increasing demand for other goods.

A simplified approach to the problem is to study how much is being produced, and how much will be produced. How many persons are producing the goods? What is the ability of their purchasing power?

Study of these questions will show that they all relate to the principle of the, "consumer upholds the market." If the consumer has the ability to buy, he creates the demand. If the consumer has the demand production takes place. Therefore, if the consumer has the purchasing power, production occurs. As long as production is carried on and goods are brought, a depression will never occur.

Reason why there will be a depression:

1. "The Marxists state that the ultimate cause of all crisis in capitalistic societies is the restricted purchasing power of the masses of the people, and that such is the cause of the approaching crisis in this country today."

The CPU will discuss this issue in detail tonight in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial, beginning at 8:00 o'clock. We wish to extend an invitation to all, who are interested in discussing this topic, to attend the meeting tonight.

On Politicians

By Jimmy Rutherford

Politics, Politics, Politics. That's all you see now anywhere you go. That's all you hear. No more can one go through the Y court and gaze at a pretty girl without some one telling about her party affiliations. Why it's getting so you don't look at atheletes anymore; these politicians hog the Y light.

Politics are divided up into four things. Political bed-fellows are those who like the same bunk. A political leader is one who finds out which way the crowd is going and jumps ahead of it. A politician is one who stands for what he thinks the voters will fall for. And the political platform is not to stand on but to get on.

Politics is not a life to lead. Take it from me. My grandfather was a politician and though he didn't run for any thing except the Mexican border, it took many years off his life. He was a cheap politician, but he cost the city plenty. They fired him from public office because his youth was spent. They found out how he had spent it. He was very conceited. Whenever he won an election he sent his parents a telegram of congratulations.

A politician's life is a rough one. Always you have to be on the move. Making speeches and kissing babies. You pay good dollars to spend a night in a hotel and get poor quarters in return.

A politician has to fool the public. I heard one girl who thought her politician friend was kind and considerate because he gave his shirt to a horse that was scratched in a race. He has to be the type diplomat that can tell you to go to hell so tactfully that you look forward to the trip.

I heard one woman politician ask a man to support her. That would have been outrageous because he already had a wife and three kids.

Politics, honest politics, have a place in the future. No one has been able yet to find a place for it. One excited politician came up to me and said: "I just won the election!" "Honestly!" I said. He frowned and said: "Aw why did you have to bring that up?"

Yes, politics has a future. Many promising young politicians are always promising. A suggested birthstone for a politician, no doubt, would be a blarneystone.

In closing I would like to relate the story of the brilliant politician who lived in the days of Nero and the lions. He was a Christian and one who had agitated Nero to no end in his orations. Nero had saved five of his most ferocious lions for this Christian. As the politician was led out into the Colosseum, Nero let out five of the most hungry lions ever seen.

By and by the crowd grew angry as each lion refused to eat this politician as he whispered something in each one's ear. Nero, disappointed, promised him a full pardon if the Christian would tell him what he had said to the lions that made them refuse to eat him. The politician told Nero: "I said to them that if they ate me, they would be expected to say a few words after dinner."

To The Editor

OPEN LETTER

Editor:

I should like for you to print this as an open letter to my representative in the State Legislature.

I would like to see a bill passed denying admittance of avowed Communists to the University of North Carolina. Although few in number, they are giving the university a bad name, detracting from its true liberals.

I do not believe public funds should be used to give potential enemies of our government an education to be used against us. Although they may profess loyalty to this country, you may recall that Hitler said he wanted peace before the last war.

Seixas-Taylor Win; Baseballers, Golfers Are Downed

Kovaleski Defeats Vic Seixas For SC Singles Championship

By Joe Cherry

Carolina and William and Mary divided Southern Conference tennis honors yesterday afternoon on the local courts as the loop championship tournament came to a close, with the Indian's Fred Kovaleski upsetting defending champ Vic Seixas of Carolina for the singles crown, and the Carolina team composed of Seixas and Clark Taylor capturing the doubles title by defeating Kovaleski and Howe Atwater.

Kovaleski and Seixas treated the gallery of over 1200 spectators to a fine exhibition of top-flight tennis in the hard-fought, nip and tuck singles match, with the William and Mary star finally winning out, 6-4, 11-9, 6-4.

The tall netter from Williamsburg was forced to come from behind in all three sets for his victory. Seixas, Carolina's varsity captain and seventh ranking singles amateur in the nation, did not seem to be in best physical condition for the match.

Seixas seemed to have things well in hand for the first six games of the opening set, holding a 4-2 advantage at one time, but Kovaleski staked a terrific comeback to take the next four games and the set before the Tar Heel could win again.

After taking the first set, the William and Mary netter continued his red-hot play and extended his win streak to the first two games of the second round, which was destined to go twenty games before being won by Kovaleski, 11-9.

However, Seixas came out of his slump before further damage could be done to capture the next three games and a short-lived, 3-2 lead. From then on the spectators were to witness a terrific see-saw battle between the two aces.

Seven times Seixas went ahead by one game and seven times Kovaleski came right back to deadlock the count. Twice the Tar Heel netter had golden chances to win and even the set at one-all, but both times he was unable to take the points that meant the set.

In the fourteenth game, with Seixas out in front seven games to six, the score was duce, with Kovaleski winning to deadlock the score again.

Going into the twelfth game, the Tar Heel was ahead, 6-5. In that game the tally was duce four times, and twice it was Seixas' add; however, he was unable to take the point that might have enabled him to win the match, and Kovaleski emerged the victor.

In the final set, Seixas struggled valiently to stay in the running. He took the first game, dropped the second, and then captured the next one to go ahead, 2-1.

The big Virginian came back to annex the next three rounds and take the lead for good. With Kovaleski holding a 5-3 advantage, Seixas rallied to win the next game, but that was his last victory, as Kovaleski won the next game, the set, the match, and the championship.

The Tar Heels managed to break even with the Indians when Seixas and Taylor combined to stop Kovaleski-Atwater, 6-2, 6-1, 6-4, in the doubles finals.

The Tar Heel pair had little trouble in disposing of the William and Mary doubles combination, winning the first set, six games to two and the second, 6-1.

The Indians managed to make a better showing of themselves in the last set, winning four games in a desperate attempt to keep in the running, but their efforts were in vain, as the locals turned on the heat to win, 6-4.

W&L Lacrossemen Down Tar Heels In Local Contest

By Arthur Greenbaum

An alert Washington and Lee lacrosse team swamped the host Carolina team yesterday on Navy Field by a score of 17 to 1. The General's fast-moving attack infiltrated in among the Tar Heel defensemen and scored almost at will.

Ryer, Washington and Lee midfielder, started the scoring in the opening quarter, when he scooped up the face-off and shot it past goalie Kavanaugh at eight seconds. The Generals racked up nine more goals before Carolina could score.

The Tar Heel offense took fifteen shots at the goal, but Sommer was the only Carolina man to net a goal. Ryer was high scorer for the Generals with four goals while Gray and Jones had three each.

Although Tommy Tongue was not the high scorer, he thrilled the Carolina fans with his dazzling style of play as he scored two goals and made four assists. The game was marked by clean play by both teams which is very seldom found in the Indian game of lacrosse.

The Tar Heel defense seemed to come to life in the second half, as they held the opponents to five goals, but were at quite a loss when it came to clearing the ball.

Bob Kavanaugh, stellar goalie, played an excellent game as usual as he cleared the ball time and time again without the aid of his team mates.

Other scorers, MacDonald, Corbin, Guthrie, and Fenhagen were ably assisted by Pacy, Porterfield, and Lear.

Soccer Prospects Are Downed 1-0

Highlighting yesterday's activity in the soccer clinic was a practice game between the Tar Heels and the N. C. State Wolfpack. The Blue and White dropped the meet by a score of 1-0.

The clinic was conducted in order to promote soccer in North Carolina and Virginia. It was sponsored by seven of the leading southern colleges. Lectures were given by coach Bill Jeffrey of Penn State and by James Walder, soccer official of Philadelphia.

Tracksters Win Again; Tnump Virginia Tech

BLACKSBURG, Va., May 14—Setting two new stadium records and capturing 11 first places, the University of North Carolina's touring track team made it two overwhelming victories in as many days by soundly thumping Virginia Tech. 83 2/3 to 47 1/3 before 2,000 fans here today.

The speedy Tar Heels, Southern Conference indoor champs this winter, wound up their dual meet competition for the year here today and headed back to Chapel Hill where they will defend the outdoor title, which they copped in 1948, on Friday and Saturday. The Tar Heels are overwhelming favorites to successfully defend that crown.

Four tracksters turned in double wins today, three of them members of the winning team. Tar Heel co-captain Julian MacKenzie stepped off a 4:36 mile and then came back shortly thereafter to run a blazing 1:57 half.

Bob Seligman, senior weight man, ran off with both the shot put and discus with throws of 48 ft. 8 in. and 146 ft. 8 in. respectively, the latter good for a new stadium record. Carolina freshman ace Bill Albans ran a winning 24.3 in the 220 lows and won the broad jump with a leap of better than 22 ft. Tech's Bill Merriweather won the 100 in the very fast time of 9.9 and clipped off an even faster 220 in 21.7.

Virginia Tech's coach Lou Honesty said after the meet that he was "very pleased with the showing of our team, but they (Carolina) were just too good." Coach Honesty added, "We are always pleased to run the Carolina boys."

Carolina athletic director Bob Fetzer and track coach Dale Ranson, both of whom made the trip with the Tar Heel thin-clads, were very pleased with the fifth consecutive dual meet victory for the undefeated winners.

Both coaches described the track as "perfect" and the day "very good for track." The competition was very keen as was shown by the two records set by the Tar Heels. Seligman's discus toss erased a long-standing record and Sam Magill, Carolina distance ace, clipped off a 9:38.2 for the eight-lap two-mile run.

Carolina's ace pole vaulter Bob House won for his second straight time today when he sailed over the bar at 12 feet to capture first for the visitors. Rusty Russell and Bill Patterson of the Tar Heels were involved in a three-way tie for third while Bell of Tech took second.

Co-captain Billy Joyner tied Tech's Bob Monroe at 6 ft. 1 in. for first in the high jump. Carolina's Jack Moody was third.

Blue Devils Defeat Tar Heels, 11-9, In Wild Contest

By Buddy Vaden

One crucial decision in the fourth inning was the difference between victory and defeat yesterday as Chapel Hill's Tar Heels bowed to Duke, 11-9, in the final game of the Duke-Carolina series. Previously the Carolinians had won three decisions over the last place Blue Devils.

Duke, acting the part of ungrateful guests, poured on nine runs in the second inning that sent Tar Heel pitchers Ray Blair and Bill McGinn scurrying for shelter in favor of Andy Tranavitch. A total of 14 men went to bat for the Blue Devils in the fat second inning. Blair walked Stu Erickson and Red Lucas, the first two men to face him. Jerry Frye sacrificed them up a base. Then John Falwell smashed a fast ball to deep right center that bounced off the telephone pole, good for a three-run homer.

Still Goin' Strong

Not satisfied with that, Pitcher Bud Ayers singled and John Hancock and Bill Bergeron did likewise. That was the end of Blair. With bases loaded McGinn came in and walked in Hancock. Sires was out on a fly to short left and Erickson and Lucas walked again. Tranavitch came in and allowed Frye to single. Falwell walked. Ayers hit into a fielders choice and Frye was out at the plate to end the disaster.

In the Carolina third, the local boys showed Duke's pitching staff that a ten run (Duke had scored once in the opening frame on a triple and a single) lead doesn't mean much with the league's leading hitters stalking the basepaths.

Ten Tar Heels came to bat in the third inning effort that credited the Carolina side of the scoreboard with a big round five. Tranavitch started the ball rolling with a single. Don Ward and Stan Goodman followed with more of the same. With bases loaded Rip Ryan and Sid Varney walked. Ed Lamb and Jim Ballou followed with two well-placed singles and the Carolinians went out to rest with only a three run deficit.

Only Two Guesses

In the fourth inning Carolina started acting up again. Ward was out as an attempted bunt hit him. Goodman walked and Ryan was safe on what was meant to be a fielder's choice. But Goodman was standing on second before the ball got to second baseman Frye. Varney walked to fill the bases. Then Ed Lamb came up and smacked a long ball down the third base line. All three baserunners scored and Lamb stayed at third.

Varney, Goodman, and Ryan walked into the dugout to wait for their next time at bat. But they went back to their respective bases when plate umpire Fuquay reversed his decision and called Lamb's hit a foul. He had clearly signalled a fair ball on his first guess, but after ten minutes fo argumentation with everybody but the Lenoir Hall staff, he changed his decision and called the Tar Heel trio back to the bases. That meant the ball game.

By losing to Duke, the Tar Heels handed the Big Four title to the potent Demon Deacons of Wake Forest who are riding on the crest of a 9-0 record in League play.

Monday the Carolinians will play host to those Champion Deacons in a four o'clock game at Emerson Stadium.

Carolina Linksmen Take Third In Conference Tournament

WINSTON-SALEM, May 14—Duke University set a new low scoring record here today as they successfully defended their Southern Conference golf championship won last year. Wake Forest was second and the University of North Carolina was third.

Wake Forest's Arnold Palmer won medal honors for the tourney with a 69-67—136 for the 36 holes. Par for the Old Town Country Club championship course is 71. Art Woll of Duke was second in individual scoring with a 67-71—138.

Carolina's Harvie Ward placed third with a 140. Ward, usually red hot on the shots on the green, couldn't seem to drop his putts, and was forced to take third behind Palmer and Woll.

Playing under perect golfing conditions. Duke broke the Conference record set at 585 by Carolina two years ago with a 580. Wake Forest was close behind with 581. Carolina trailed with 584. State was ten points behind Carolina in fourth and VPI was in fifth spot with 596.

The Carolina team's leading scorers were Ward, Bob Cox with 147, Roy McKenzie with 148, and Oliver Sapp with 149. Other Carolina golfers whose score did not count were Frank Brooks with 152 and Jack Brantley with 155.

Palmer, who was knocked out of the North-South Amateur contest in the semi-finals by Frank Stranahan, completed the day's activities with a six under par 136. In the morning round he was two under with a 36-33—69. In the afternoon he was four under with a 35-32—67.

Frosh Diamonders Down Blue Imps In Breeze, 14-3

Carolina's freshman baseball team won its seventh game of the year in a 14-13 slugfest at Durham yesterday. Monroe Johnson, Tar Baby moundsman, went all the way, allowing seven scattered hits.

The Duke yearlings gave as gifts to the slugging Tar Babys nine unearned runs. They were credited with ten errors, eight of them by infielders.

Carolina scored two on the third when Mark Herring singled and was sent to second when Third Baseman Whitcheart walked. Charlie Overman advanced both men with a well laid sacrifice bunt and they scored later on Bob Smith's tremendous triple.

In the big fourth the Chapel Hill yearlings collected only two hits, but were credited with eight runs. Reeves started it off by reaching first on an error. Cheek walked and Johnson got on on an attempted sacrifice that ended with all men safe. Herring got on on an error and Whiteheart attempted to sacrifice, but pitcher Lynch fumbled the ball allowing Whitcheart to reach first and Reeves to score.

Overman grounded out and Smith got another error. Gene Smith was hit by the pitcher and Stewart singled. Reeves, up for the second time in the inning got on on a fielders choice and Cheek followed with a single.

After Cheek's single Johnson popped out to end the inning and the Tar Heels were in command with a ten to one lead.

Carolina scored four more in the eighth on three hits and a like number of errors by the obliging Blue Imps.

May Day Plans For Next Sunday Nearing End

Rehearsals and final plans for the annual May Day festivities, which will be held next Sunday at 3:30 in the lawn beside McIver Dormitory are being completed this week, Ruth Whalen, chairman of the May Day Committee, announced yesterday.

The festivities held in honor of the May queen, who will be crowned during the afternoon, will use an Alice-in-Wonderland theme. Following the afternoon activities, an open house celebrating May Day will be held by the Carolina Independent Coed Association in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial for all students and guests on campus.

The festivities will be highlighted by a modern dance version of the Alice-in-Wonderland story and ballet dancing by a children's class. The presentation of the May Queen's court and her crowning will climax the annual activities.

May Day is annually sponsored by the Carolina Independent Coed Association, the Pan Hellenic Council, and the Chi Delta Phi honorary literary sorority.

Chairmen of the May Day are: costumes, Barbara Lunsford; properties, Sally Woodhull; script, Phyllis Ann Gentry; costumes for the queen and her court, Kay Holden; and publicity, Caroline Bruner.

Miss Betty Doss, instructor of modern dance at the University, is in charge of the dancing for the pageantry.

About 41 children, from the ages of three to 11 years, will dance in the recital. Costumes for the affair will consist of white ballet outfits with sleeves and necklines of blue.

Invitations to the recital, which will be followed by a tea, were made by members of the YWCA, and sent to parents, faculty members and members of the Y cabinet.

Morning), and La Toile et Le Roc (The Web and the Rock), which were loaned to the library by Russell Clay, a student at the University, a collection of newspaper clippings on Wolfe, and copies of all the student publications for which he wrote. "The Tar Baby" has a 44-page 3-act play which Wolfe is suppose to have written in a single evening.

There is also an issue of the Saturday Evening Post which contains a short story, "The Child by Tiger," the only thing Wolfe ever sold to that publication. After the Post had bought this story Wolfe said, "Now I know how to make money!" but unfortunately for him, the Post rejected everything else he ever sent them.

1949 Dream Girl Is Honored By Pi Kappa Alpha

Gammon Stancill of Tarboro was proclaimed the 1949 "Dream Girl" of Pi Kappa Alpha at the annual Dream Girl Dance held at the Women's Gymnasium last night.

Chosen by secret ballot earlier in the week, Miss Stancill was introduced immediately following the presentation of the officers and their dates. She was given a Sweetheart pin and a bouquet of white orchids and lillies of the valley by PiKA president Charles Smith.

In addition to Miss Stancill, who was the date of John Sadler, sponsors were Sara Todd of Raleigh with Charles Smith, president; Margaret Lewis of Chapel Hill with Chan Pegram, vice-president; Virginia Nall of Danville, Va. with Wallace Kirby, secretary; Ruth Mabry of Hamlet with Joe Maurice, historian; Mona Williams of La Grange with Duke Willard, corresponding secretary; Lucy Morrison of Raleigh with Norfleet Umstead, pledgemaster; Helen Humphrey of Jacksonville with Howard Quinn, sergeant-at-arms; and Helen McWhorterd of Fredericksburg, Va. with Jim Phillips, intramural manager.

All officers and sponsors took part in a no-break dance immediately following the presentation of the dream girl and the singing of "The Dream Girl of PiKA" by Charles Bryon.

Annual Chi Psi Fete Closes With Formal

The annual spring Chi Psi house party, a weekend of informal parties and get-togethers which began Friday afternoon, was brought to a close last night with a formal dance in the dining room of the Chi Psi lodge. Herb Gupton and his orchestra furnished music for the occasion.

An informal reception in the lodge Friday afternoon, followed by a barbecue supper on the side lawn began the weekend. It continued Friday night with a "spook party" in the main lounge, which was complete with cob webbs and dark lighting. Green lights blinking on and off, a casket in the middle of the floor, and a caldron on the hearth completed the air of mystery.

After an afternoon of watching the Duke-Carolina baseball game and the finals of the Southern Conference tennis tournament yesterday, the weekend ended with the formal dance at which a "maid" of Chi Psi was chosen.

After the main festivities Friday and Saturday nights, an informal get-together was held in Avery Memorial in the rear of the lodge.

Independent Coeds To Hold Initiation

A permanent change in the meeting place of the Carolina Independent Coed Association, from the Y building to Roland Parker Lounge No. 3, Graham Memorial, will be effective Wednesday night, when an initiation service for four girls will take place. Assistant Dean of Students Bill Friday, speaking to the association, will highlight the ceremonies.

The traditional initiation ceremony will take place by candlelight. The girls to be initiated, Bobby Sockwell, Helen Strawn, Edith Winslow, and Gloria McLeroy, will wear the traditional green and white colors of the association, and will become members before a table decked with greenery and the CICA seal.

Following the ceremonies and a short business meeting, an informal party will be held for the new members.

Warriner Elected Council President

Helen Eppes Elected to Secretarial Post Of Greater University Student Council

The Greater University Student Council, meeting Sunday on the State College Campus in Raleigh, elected officers for the coming year and reviewed the work that it has done its first year of functioning.

Holding the first regular election under the constitution, the Council elected Dortch Warriner of Carolina as Chairman; Preston Andrews of State as Vice-Chairman; Helen Eppes of Carolina as secretary; and Glenna DeWitt of Woman's College as treasurer. The constitution states that each school shall have at least one of the elected officers and that the chairman and secretary shall be from the same school.

In viewing the work that it has done in the year of its birth, the Council looked back on such projects as the formulation of a list of qualifications that the Council thought the new president of the Greater University should have; vigorously protesting the tuition increase as proposed by Governor Scott, and passed by the Board of Trustees and the State Legislature; the laying of plans for a Greater University Day; and many other matters.

The tentative plans as made by the Council on Greater University Day, call for activities in which students from all three schools can participate, the State-Carolina football game, and a dance the night after the game. Arrangements are being made to hold the first of these days at the game next fall.

The Council also passed on a motion that next fall three students, one from each school of the Greater University, be allowed to sit with the Committee that is to select the new president. These students would have no vote on the committee but would engage in the discussion of possible candidates.

Violin Concert Is Scheduled This Evening

Classical Works To Be Featured

Music by Bach, Brahms, Mendelssohn, and Mozart will be heard this evening at 8:30 when David McAdams and William Tritt, violinists, will present a recital in Hill Hall. McAdams, senior music major from Burlington, and Tritt, junior music major from Fayetteville, are both pupils of Willis Gates.

McAdams is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha and Phi Mu Alpha, having served in the latter as National Councilman for this past year. He attended Mars Hill College and was awarded a scholarship to Oberlin Conservatory prior to war service. He has worked on his A.B. in music here at the University for the past three years. Charles Stevens, McAdams' accompanist, is a special B.M. student studying with Dr. Schinhan of the Music Department.

Tritt is a member of Phi Mu Alpha. Prior to the war he did a summer's work at Eastman School of Music. Barbara Tritt, who will accompany Mr. Tritt, is a graduate of Eastman and has been accompanist on numerous recitals given here. Both violinists have been prominent in orchestra and chamber music groups here in Chapel Hill and in nearby communities.

Seniors Seek Oratory Medal In Annual Test

Eight To Speak In Di Tonight

Eight students will compete for the Willie P. Mangum medal in oratory tonight at 7:30 in the Dialectic Senate Hall, Earl Fitzgerald said yesterday. The second since the war, the contest will feature seniors delivering orginal orations.

Seniors entering include Bill Miller, Sam Manning, Charles Dixon, Bob Ormand, Emily Baker, Don Shropshire, Bill Duncan, and Marion Woodbury.

Fitzgerald pointed out that the participants in this year's competition are typical of the past winners of this medal, in that they are well known in campus affairs, and most have frequently been heard in positions requiring speaking ability.

Last year's winner was Robert Coulter, a member of Phi Beta Kappa and the Order of the Golden Fleece. Faculty members who have won the award in the past include Fred Weaver, dean of men, and Dr. Albert Coates, director of Institute of Government.

The contest is sponsored by Dean E. L. Mackie of student awards and scholarship, who will preside over the program. Judges for the event are Gerald Barrett, of the Economics Department, Earl Wynn, director of the Communications Center, and E. J. Woodhouse of the Political Science Department.

Hans Freistadt Invited To Testify In Capitol

Admitted Communist Receives Wire From Chairman of Joint Committee

Hans Freistadt, Austrian-born graduate physics student and admitted Communist who received a $1,600 fellowship from the Atomic Energy Commission, yesterday received an invitation to testify before the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy in Washington.

Freistadt said last night he had received a telegram from Sen. Brien McMahon, chairman of the committee, asking him whether or not he would like to appear before the group.

Freistadt wired McMahon that he would like to testify, and asked the committee chairman to notify him of the date.

The full text of McMahon's telegram read:

"Since your name was mentioned at an open meeting of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy this afternoon I consider it only fair that you be given an opportunity to testify before the committee at your earliest possible convenience.

"Should you so desire, please notify me if you wish to testify and a date will be arranged."

Freistadt said last night he was very happy to get the opportunity to go to Washington and tell his side of the story to Congress.

Phi to Choose New Officers At Meeting

Group to Consider Three Amendments

Election of officers and consideration of three constitutional amendments will be the business of the Philanthropic Assembly at tonight's meeting in Phi Hall.

Constitutional amendments to fine tardy members, lower initiation fees and quarter dues, and to put election of officers on an annual, instead of a quarterly, basis will probably be considered. The new officers will serve for the Summer and Fall quarters.

Retiring officers of the Assembly include, Bill Duncan, speaker; Emily Baker, speaker pro-tem; Hugh Griffin, treasurer; Douglas Carter, clerk; Bill Dawkins, sergeant - at - arms; Peter Gerns, parliamentarian, and Graham Jones, critic.

Also scheduled for tonight's session are reports from the various committees. Emily Baker will give a resume of all debates held this quarter, Gerns will make a report on the activities of the Carolina Forum and the Debate Council, and Griffin will report on the financial status of the Assembly.

Plans for the annual Di-Phi banquet, at which Senator Frank Graham will be presented the first Di-Phi award, will be made, and proposals for the summer sessions will be considered.

Speaker Duncan urged all members to be present for tonight's session.

Lilienthal Says He Is Against Loyalty Check

'It Would Hamper Science Progress'

WASHINGTON, May 16.—(UP)—Chairman David E. Lilienthal said today the Atomic Energy Commission might hamper scientific progress if it required security checks on students receiving fellowships in non-secret atomic research.

"There is no question of national security at issue here," he told a hastily-summoned meeting of the Joint Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee. "The sole issue is how best to operate a fellowship program."

He was backed by Dr. A. N. Richards, president of the National Academy of Science. Richards said such a security requirement would be "akin to Russian bureaucracy" and would discourage young scientists who are on the sensitive side from seeking fellowships.

The Committee was called into emergency session to review the loyalty issue in the midst of a Congressional furore over the discovery that two known Communists had been granted fellowships by the Atomic Energy Commission.

Rep. Carl T. Durham (D.—N.C.) introduced a bill today to block use of atomic energy funds "for the education of subversive science students." Fellowship applicants would be required to fill out a "personnel security questionnaire" and testify to their loyalty.

Rep. Lawrence H. Smith (R.—Wis.) demanded the resignation of "every member" of the Atomic Energy Commission.

"The Congress is on notice," he said. "It should act at once by demanding the resignations of those responsible for this attack on our national security."

The two Communist students are Hans Freistadt, a $1,600-a-year fellow at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. And a second, as-yet unnamed student who holds a $3,600-a-year fellowship at an Eastern university. Sen Bourke B. Hickenlooper, (R.—Ia.) revealed the second case.

Lilienthal said his commission gave "long and careful consideration" to the question of requiring security clearance for such students but finally decided against it.

State Symphony Is Written Up In Time Section

An article entitled "On the Move," in the music section of "Time" Magazine, tells the story of the fourth annual tour of the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra.

The story includes the highlights of the concerts played by the Orchestra in Laurinburg, and has a two-column picture of Director Benjamin Swalin conducting the Orchestra in a ball park.

A paragraph under the subhead "Beethoven in the Ballparks" says: "Last week with his orchestra mid-way through its fourth annual tour, Conductor Swalin was proud to boast that 'in North Carolina, the word symphony is no longer something to be afraid of' . . .

"Ben Swalin had had his big idea for a traveling symphony while teaching music appreciation at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. There was hardly a city in the state that was large enough to support a regular symphony. Swalin decided that if people couldn't come ot the music, then the music should be brought to them."

University Is Featured In Holiday Mag Article

The University of North Carolina is featured in the June issue of Holiday as the institution which has earned Chapel Hill the label "Capital of the Southern Mind." The issue will go on sale here tomorrow.

A 4800-word article, written by Jonathan Daniels, describes the University as "a place with an ardor for romance and for reform." Even during Civil War days, says Holiday, the University's combination of "high ideas and hilarity" brought it the next-to-largest student enrollment in the country.

The article points out that the University's purpose is people and not merely students:

"Chapel Hill, with a new four-year medical school, will be the teaching center of a state health and hospital program adopted in a ballyhoo campaign in which alumnus Kay Kyser helped sell the state's health like his sponsor's flour. Its Institute of Government today provides study courses in working democracy for politicians and small officeholders from court clerks to cops. Institutes are held for and by bankers, newspaper publishers and labor organizers. A new, well-heeled Business Foundation is providing funds for training young Southern business executives."

Eighteen illustrations accompany the Chapel Hill article, among them photographs of "Y" Court, the Old Well, South Building, Manning Hall, and Lovers Lane: The Carolina Playmakers, the student legislature, a creative writing class outdoors, and a Sadie Hawkins Day celebration.

Student Solons Kill Anti-Red Bill

Both Houses Pass Wage, Labor Bills

Buried in the heavy load of legislation passed and defeated by the 13th annual North Carolina Student Legislature in Raleigh over the weekend was a bill which was crushed by an overwhelming vote of "nays" in both houses of the mock General Assembly.

Even though proponents of the bill waved pictures of the University's Han Freistadt over their heads and ranted long and loud about cleaning all Communists out of state educational institutions, few of the legislators in either the upper or the lower chamber would give an affirmative vote to the motion to force all students and teachers in state-supported schools to take non-Communist oaths.

Other legislation passed by the 143 white and Negro students on capitol hill included many bills which the representatives of 18 North Carolina schools debated at great length in fiery sessions of the assembly.

One such was the proposal to set the North Carolina minimum wage at 75 cents per hour. The original bill set the minimum at 65 cents per hour, and was defeated in the House after a stormy debate. The Senate not only did defeat the bill, but amended it to read 75 cents.

Forces for the passage of the bill were marshalled when the measure, as amended, was sent back to the House, and it was passed in the same form as in the Senate.

Other legislation passed by both houses included a bill to authorize the union shop in North Carolina. The measure prohibited the closed shop and yellow dog contract, however.

Capital punishment in the state was abolished, and the governor was given a limited veto power. A bill to provide for stopping the pollution of the state's rivers and streams was passed.

Two resolutions passed the body after much discussion. The first favored federal aid to education and the second favored federal world government.

Both houses approved a bill to set up yearly state automobile inspection, and defeated a measure to lower the state voting age to 18.

The affair is a Commencement Ball in modern dress, and will be an informal dance featuring the music of Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra. Free refreshments will be furnished by the Senior Class, and decorations will be on the 49-er theme.

Today is the final day for signing up for both the picnic and the dance. Thursday's picnic is free to all seniors and their dates, and will include swimming, games, and entertainment by the Bull City Night Hawks. Food will be furnished by the class, and only those who have made reservations may attend.

The commencement weekend dance is a University tradition for graduation though this year's will probably be somewhat different from those of by-gone days. In a biography of a Chapel Hill woman, Mrs. Cornelia Phillips Spencer, creative writing instructor Phillips Russell gives a description of a commencement ball in 1818. The quotation comes from General Edward Mallett, member of the graduating class of 1818.

"My coat was broadcloth of sea green color, high velvet collar to match, swallow tail, pockets outside, with lapels and large silver plated buttons; white satin damask vest, showing the edge of a blue undervest; a wide opening for bosom ruffles, and no shirt collar."

The Carolina gentleman of 131 years ago continues, "The neck was dressed with a layer of four or five three cornered cravats, ar-

Interviews Set For She-Marines

Coeds who may be interested in a career as an officer in the regular Marines or the Marine Reserve should contact the Placement Office immediately for interviews tomorrow morning, May 18, Joe Galloway, director of the Placement Office, said yesterday.

Colonel Katherine A. Towle, the first Director of Women Marines, will be here at that time to explain the program in detail to interested faculty members and students.

The Secretary of the Navy has approved the organization of the Women Officers Training Class as the sole source of women officers for the regular Marine Corps and the Marine Corps Reserve.

A.E.C. Scholarships

(Reprinted from the New York Times)

The case of young Hans Freistadt, an Austrian who became first an American citizen and later a Communist, has aroused Congressional ire and made the Atomic Energy Commission again the target of attack.

It was the National Research Council that awarded Mr. Freistadt his Atomic Energy Commission scholarship — an award which must have complied with the council's conditions. Though the scholarship calls for work in relativity, Mr. Freistadt has undoubtedly learned all that his professors and the standard texts can teach him about nuclear physics. There is no chance that either the professors or the texts revealed anything that is secret—or "classified" in official parlance. Indeed, professors have been complaining that ever since the authorities clamped down on them they have not been able to teach their advanced students in nuclear physics the results of research that must be kept secret. Besides, we have Mr. Lilienthal's assurance that before any scientist is granted access to classified or secret information his political beliefs, his affiliations, his loyalty to the country must be established with the aid of the FBI. There is not the slightest chance that as an avowed Communist Mr. Freistadt will ever set foot in a laboratory where research in nuclear physics is carried on secretly for the Government or that he will have access to information that is not available to anyone who can read a public document.

The issue raised by his case is larger than that which has stirred some of our Congressmen. Mr. Freistadt is to pursue his advanced studies at government expense. He is a public educational charge. Considering the role which Communists now play in the international scene, are we justified in educating them in free colleges maintained by taxation or granting them scholarships out of public funds? It is our purpose of education to train students for citizenship, with all that citizenship implies. We are therefore faced with this dilemma: We cannot deny an education at public expense to residents of this country, especially if they are born here or if they are citizens, yet if they are Communists at heart education for citizenship and for democracy is not only futile but contrary to the national interest. The Chancellor of the University of North Carolina, where Mr. Freistadt studied and taught, knows of "no sanction in taking any action on the political beliefs of students," and Professor Henry DeW. Smyth, still to be confirmed as a member of the Atomic Energy Commission, holds that the National Research Council is right in ignoring the ideologies of those who apply for scholarships. It is not easy to settle the issue. We cannot afford to depart from democracy in education. But can democracy in the form of public education run the risk of strengthening communism?

Astounding Disclosure

Loyal Americans everywhere were astounded that an acknowledged Communist graduate of the University of Chicago had been awarded an Atomic Energy Commission scholarship worth $1,600 to study relativity at the University of North Carolina.

Many alumni of the University and other North Carolina citizens must have been dumbfounded that such a thing could happen.

This disclosure is enough to further shake the confidence of the people in the Atomic Energy Commission and any other agency that had any part of the responsibility for selecting this Austrian Communist for a scholarship when his record and background could so easily have been obtained merely by asking the Federal Bureau of Investigation to look at its file.

This development raises the question, Why does the Atomic Energy Commission award such scholarships? The only valid answer would be to aid and encourage men to qualify for service to the country in the development of atomic energy. If that be the case, then why should the Atomic Energy Commission not learn something of a candidate's loyalties and ideologies before he is awarded a scholarship?

According to Chairman David E. Lillienthal, such awards are made without a security check-up, when no atomic secrets are involved, because otherwise "freedom of inquiry and education" would be menaced. Moreover, he makes the alibi that the scholarship program of his commission is administered by the National Research Council.

No such explanations or alibis will be accepted as valid by people who own and support the University of North Carolina nor by loyal Americans generally.

Not only is the student, Hans Freistadt, scheduled to study during the next year under the Atomic Energy Commission

The WASHINGTON SCENE

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 16—A railroad president who seems to have dedicated himself to sticking the needle into other railroad presidents shook a finger at me and declared:

"I predict the total collapse of this country's railroad industry within five years unless something radical is done right away."

The prophet of doom was Robert R. Young, bossman of the Chesapeake & Ohio, who has been screaming that his fellow railroad heads are as up to date as the dinosaur. He's the fellow who railed against the anachronistic changing of trains at Chicago with the slogan: "A hog can cross the United States without changing trains, but you can't."

The place where we were talking did not look much like a refuge for the bankrupt, being a hostelry at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., called the Greenbrier, which appears quite opulent indeed. But Mr. Young explained he was talking about railroads, not hotels.

"Passenger business," he declared, "is killing the railroads. The industry lost more than $600,000,000 on passenger business last year alone. How long do you think we can keep that up?"

I agreed that this seemed a sizeable chunk to drop in a twelve-month and asked Mr. Young what was to blame.

"Some of it's our own fault; some not" he replied. "State Public Service Commissions force the railroads to continue operating unprofitable branch lines; and the bus and airlines are receiving preferential subsidization. But we're to blame for continuing with junky, old equipment."

I asked Mr. Young why the roads didn't buy some new equipment then.

"I tried to do something about that," he replied. "I made a proposition that we buy 6,000 old cars from the Pullman company and junk them; then place a mass production order for new ones. The deal was blocked—and do you know what excuse was given? They told me they were afraid I'd lose my money!"

The little man with the big needle added: "No new Pullman cars have been ordered in a year. I predict there'll never be another one ordered."

This seemed pretty tough predicting. I asked what would happen if his total collapse prediction came true.

"I don't know," he admitted. "Nationalization of the railroads, maybe. But this would be one of the greatest calamities the country could suffer.

"However, the railroads have got to be kept going. To let them go to ruin would be catastrophic. If we get into another war we've got to have the railroads. In the last war railroads accounted for 90 percent of troop movements in this country.

"Troops can't be moved by plane or bus in sufficient numbers. Airlifts would amount to only fleabites in a time of national emergency. And if we tried to transport in large numbers by trucks our highways would break down too."

I asked Mr. Young why railroads weren't allowed to increase rates and discontinue losing branch operations.

"Because Government Public Service bodies are more vote than railroad-conscious," he said. "You may hesitate to believe this, but in one case where we sought to discontinue a branch line, the public service commission granted grave atttention to a witness who declared he listened for the train whistle every morning and that if he couldn't hear it he would have to rearrange his whole life."

Music Reviews

Sunday Busy Musically

By "Wink" Locklair

There was music for every taste on campus last Sunday afternoon and night, and it was merely a question of what you wanted to hear and where you wanted to go to listen—in Hill Hall, under Davie Poplar or in Memorial Hall.

The afternoon began with a piano recital by Charles Somers, who has studied in New York and is now a pupil of Miss Virginia Hare. The program, which started at 4 o'clock in Hill Hall, included Handel's "Harmonious Blacksmith" Variation, Bach's Prelude and Fugue in C Minor, and Beethoven's Sonata in D Minor, Op. 31, No. 2 during the first half.

It seemed that Mr. Somers played mechanically with little attention given to shading or interpretation, and there were lapses of memory in the Bach fugue and in the Beethoven which gave the impression that the music was not prepared as thoroughly as it might have been. (Mr. Somers is a French major, not a music major, however.)

Included in the last half were Papillons by Schumann, two dances by the Frenchman, Darius Milhaud, and Nocturne and Scherzo by Chopin. Schumann's music for piano is seldom brilliant or extremely difficult to play, but it has charm and appeal which Mr. Somers projected. The Chopin Nocturne in D Flat is one of that composer's most passionate musical utterances—highly romantic. Sunday's recitalist, although missing some of its subtleness, pleased the audience with it and they recalled him at the end of the program for an encore: a Brahms Rhapsody.

BY THE TIME Mr. Somers had finished in Hill Hall, Hubert Henderson and the University Band, playing their second in a series of three May lawn concerts near Davie Poplar, had finished a Sousa march and were half way through a Bach fugue. The audience, which was of considerable size, was almost as entertaining to watch as the music was pleasant to listen to.

It was a peripatetic crowd, many of whom arrived by Kitty-Car, and the little tots lost no time in exploring everything within walking and/or crawling distance. One very small lad, dressed in a bright blue suit, kept the spectators highly amused as he imitated Conductor Henderson's gestures.

The band played several Sousa marches, an overture by Von Suppe, the first movement of a symphony for band, Hoagy Carmichael's Star Dust and, in conclusion, Hark the Sound. It was a perfect afternoon for the concert and everyone enjoyed it very much.

THE FINAL EVENT of this Sabbath Music Marathon was a concert by Johnny Satterfield and his Orchestra in Memorial Hall, an event which has become an annual affair. The first half of the program was devoted to original compositions and arrangements by Carolyn Satterfield and members of the eighteen-piece outfit, including two suites for wind orchestra by Sam Andrews and Frank Justice; Carolyn Satterfield's Prelude in Satin, which opened the program; Tom Allred's "Night Song," which has some nice rhythm in the middle section; Satterfield's five-part Catawba Rhapsody, which was well received; and a very clever setting by the orchestra's leader of an old German Round, Dona Nobis Pacem, arranged for bass, guitar and three trombones.

After intermission, the orchestra did some wonderful things with Duke Ellington's Things Ain't what They Use to Be and I Let a Song Go Out of My Heart. Ruth Justice, a tall, handsome girl with a pleasantly-sultry voice, sang Gloomy Sunday, Gershwin's The Man I Love, and Johnny Green's I Cover the Waterfront.

Jim Duke, one of the band's two bass players, got a good workout on 'Stompin' at the Savoy, as did Sam Andrews, tenor sax, with his Body and Solo. The program ended with a rousing Luther Minton arrangement of On the Alamo.

The program was enthusiastically received and Graham Memorial, which has been offering an interesting and entertaining series of Sunday night programs, should be commended for sponsoring it.

Quarterly Is Best Yet

By Jonathon Marshall

The third edition of the Carolina Quarterly will go on sale this week, and from advance rumors it is the best yet.

Some recent sloppy reporting created a false impression in some circles about the organization of the Quarterly. It was stated that this year's editor had appointed his successor for next year. This was not true.

The Carolina Quarterly has a faculty advisory committee consisting of Phillips Russell, Walter Spearman, Lyman Cotton, Harry Russell, and Charles Eaton. This committee meets with the past editor and business manager and considers all applications for the positions of editor and business manager. The committee chooses the new heads of the Quarterly.

It has been interesting and gratifying to watch the new literary magazine grow during its first year of existence. At first few people thought that it could survive, and many people even opposed the venture.

The two issues that have already been circulated have been read in all parts of North Carolina, in many other States, and even in several foreign countries, and they have received much favorable comment in the press.

In its regular feature, The Southern Writer, the Quarterly has an article this time about Tennessee Williams that is one of the most interesting pieces of reading seen on this campus in a long time.

The faults of our University-run telephone system were brought home to this columnist the other day when trying to reply to a long distance call that had come in while the writer was out.

At 9:03 PM this columnist dialed the operator, and received a loud buzz over the receiver. The same thing was repeated on trying again a few minutes later.

After attempting futily to reach the operator for some 20 minutes, the writer tried to call information to find out whether the phone company was still in existence. After another six minutes the supervisor was reached. She cheerily said, "They must be busy, just keep trying."

It was 9:36 that the operator finally connected me with long distance. 33 minutes after dialing the operator for the first time.

If it had been an emergency someone could have died, a house could have burned down, or Hans Freistadt could have thrown the atomic bomb that everyone is worrying about.

Although many complaints have been made about the local phone system, nobody in the administration has yet publically given a good reason for the University retaining control of the Chapel Hill telephones.

It's about time we turned over to the good old "business managed" Bell Telephone Company. This socialist business can go to far—or should we call it communism?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

100% AMERICANS

Editor:

In regards to the local controversy over a certain member of an unorthodox political party, I wish to say that the whole thing sounds rather amateurish and childish in the extreme.

How can one person use the phrase "100% Americans" when any school child knows that this refers to members of the Indian race. Now what Indians do you propose for the scholarships? Well, after all, Feller has much on the ball and could probably revolutionize study in atomic energy.

Now there is no doubt that danger exists from subversive forces but no one has yet proved that the Commies are interested in violent overthrow of the government. Wiser people than you have not decided this yet in the courts and until such time no law exists to prosecute them. Which we cannot prosecute we seem to persecute.

I will say I admire your courage and forthrightness on coming out on such a strong stand for an unpopular cause. You have joined the small ranks of anti-communist editors which are valiantly struggling against their advertisers best advice to stem the flow of Communism which has such a powerful hold on such a vast majority of our people. Struggle on! The battle is not yet lost! Pip pip and carry on!

Well, I could go on like this for days, but there are such things as libel laws and obscenity and profanity restrictions for materials sent through the mails.

Your hysterical attack was incredibly boring—spending one whole editorial column in writing what could have been cut to three sentences. (1) "Freistadt is a Communist" (This is news?); (2) "Freistadt is an instructor in physics at U.N.C." (News?); and (3) "Freistadt has a scholarship" (So what?).

In conclusion I think Mr. Hans (Commrade) Freistadt will with maturity change, so I have some hope for him. But you, sir, I now conclude are hopeless if not helpless. We seem doomed to the prospect of a degenerate (D. Jenrette) newspaper!

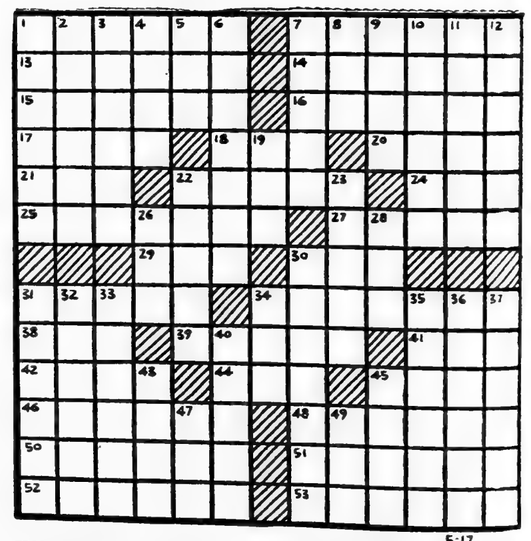
CONDOLENCES

Editor:



I should like to add my condolences to those of my liberal friends on campus at the [illegible] parent demise of liberalism [illegible] our paper's policy, and join [illegible] Mellon in appealing to Ca[illegible] students to take immediate [illegible] to stamp out the ever-spreading reaction that is gradually ch[illegible]ing our way of life, called democratic.

At the risk of being la[illegible] in the usual color for the [illegible] of my Carolina career, I shou[illegible] like to state a few opinio[illegible] mine. It was extremely dis[illegible]aging to witness the Woodhouse-Freistadt debate on commu[illegible] 11 May. Professor Woodho[illegible] made capitol of popular opini[illegible] in his advocacy of outlawing the Communist Party. I call his r[illegible]soning demagogic, reactionary appeals to emotions. It wa[illegible] couraging to note that 13[illegible] the audience voted to outlaw communism, and only 33 [illegible] to outlaw the party. According to my ideas, that means [illegible] votes against democracy wo[illegible] only 33 for democracy. I sincerely hope the 136 have thought of the day when the Democratic Party might be outlawed, along with the Communist and Republican and Socialist. Are [illegible] going to cut out our very heart to relieve a little irritation [illegible] the hand? Outlawing communism will not strengthen democracy, but only seriously weaken it.

If the editor wishes t[illegible] something for democracy, I suggest that he contribute his shamefully-used editorial space for advocacy of equal educational freedom for minority groups. Your editorials on Hans Freistadt were naive, demagogic, uncalled-for, extremely reactionary, and undemocratic. Frankly, there is no question in my mind of Freistadt's loyalty to this country.

If a philosophy of government is good and useful, it will stand free competition in the battle ground of words. If the advocates of that philosophy become hysterical at interference, and try to preserve it by "legally" doing away with the interference, then I really doubt that the philosophy is worthy of preservation. Let us be as ardent and sincere workers for democracy as others are for communism. With democratic backing Democracy, working for Democracy, and most of all, living Democracy, it will stand against any competitor on the earth.

Tar Heels Edged By Deacons; Netmen Lose To Indians

Deacons Beat Tar Heels, 3-2; Mustian Bests Cassell In Duel

By Joe Cherry

Wake Forest's powerful Demon Deacons turned the trick at Emerson Stadium again yesterday.

The new Big Four champions from Baptist Hollow took their third win of the season, 3-2, over Carolina's never-say-die Tar Heels, but not until they had been forced to come from behind twice in a tight mound duel between Dean Cassell and the Deac's Vernon Mustian.

The alert Deacons, playing headsup ball all the way, were quick to take advantage of several mistakes by the Tar Heels and several close decisions by the umpires in posting their tenth Big Four win.

Vernon Mustian, who hurled the first seven innings for Wake Forest, was credited with the victory, although the winners sent ace Harry Nicholas into the fray for the last two stanzas to insure victory.

Allows Seven Hits

Dean Cassell, on the mound for the Tar Heels, allowed only seven well-spaced hits, and with a couple of the breaks that seemed to frequent the Wake Forest side of the scoreboard, he might have emerged on the winning side.

Umpires Stallings and Veazy drew the ire of the crowd on several close decisions, and as soon as the game was over they were surrounded by a crowd of angry fans, but after spending a few minutes in the Carolina dugout they were able to leave the field without further trouble.

The locals grabbed a one-run lead in the third inning when Don Ward tripled with two out and nobody on, and Stan Goodman followed with a timely single to chase the Carolina leftfielder across home plate. Wake Forest centerfielder Kersh made an attempt to pull in Ward's drive on the run in deep centerfield, but the ball bounded off the end of his glove and went for three bases.

As the innings passed, Carolina's one run looked bigger and bigger, but in the top of the sixth, the visitors managed to even the score. Kersh came to the plate with one out and none on and hit a line drive into right-centerfield.

Gets 4 Bases

At first the blow looked good for two bases at the most, but the ball got by rightfielder Ed Lamb and rolled to the fence. By the time the Tar Heels had relayed the ball back to the infield, Kersh had a home run and the Deacs had a tie ball game.

Carolina wasted no time in getting up front again. In the last half of the same inning, the locals took advantage of two singles, an error by Wake third baseman Gene Hooks and a long flyball for their second and final run.

Goodman led off with his second hit of the afternoon, a drive into centerfield. Hooks made a wild throw to first on Rip Ryan's bunt, both runners were safe, and the Tar Heels seemed to be on the verge of a big inning.

Sid Varney followed Ryan at the plate, but before he could get a good pitch the ball got away from Russ Batchelor, Deac catcher, and Goodman broke for third. Batchelor promptly tossed him out on a good throw to Hooks, and the Carolina uprising was quelled for the moment.

Varney then singled past first base, advancing Ryan to third, and Lamb lofted a long fly to Joe Fulghum in left field, allowing the Tar Heel short stop to tag up and score on the play.

The Deacons came bouncing back in the seventh for a pair of runs that meant the ball game. With one out, Hooks pulled a surprise drag bunt that caught Senter off guard, and the Carolina third baseman made a wild peg to first.

Charlie Teague followed with a freak single that hit about ten feet in front of home plate and bounced high in the air. By the time Senter had recovered the ball, Hooks was safe on first and Teague had a base hit to his credit.

Cassell managed to retire Fulghum on a grounder, for the second out, but Paul Livick, Wake leftfielder, followed with a game-winning single into centerfield, driving in both runners with the tying and winning markers.

The Tar Heels threatened again in the ninth, when Lamb singled with one out. Jim Ballou fanned for the second out, but Gurganus, pinch-hitting for Senter, gained life when Warren dropped his pop fly. With the tying run on second, Will Hobbs struck out to end the ball game.

Fetzer Field Will Be Scene Of Loop Meet

Fourteen of the sixteen member schools have filed entries for the Southern Conference Track Championships to be run off on Fetzer Field here Friday and Saturday.

The schedule calls for trials on Friday in six running and four field events. The running events are the 100, 220, 440, 880, high and low hurdles. The broad jump, shot put and javelin and discus throws are the field events which will require trials.

All finals will be run off on Saturday afternoon with each event restricted to six men except the mile, two-mile and mile relay in the running category and the high jump and pole vault in the field events.

Schools which have notified the athletic office of the intention of entering the conference meet are Carolina, Maryland, Duke, Virginia Tech, State, Davidson, Wake Forest, VMI, William and Mary, Furman, Richmond, South Carolina, Clemson and Washington and Lee U.

Officials and observers are expecting some of the best competition in many years and Carolina has been installed as overwhelming favorite to successfully defend the crown which the Tar Heels won here last May. An outdoor win would give the Tar Heels a clean sweep as they won the indoor meet here in February.

Several records will probably fall during the two days of competition. Some of the records which are in danger are the high jump, two-mile, discus throw, 100-yard dash, and the 120-yard high hurdles.

Starter for the meet will be Mr. Frank Dobson of the Newport News Apprentice School.

Indians Down Tennis Team, 8-1; Kovaleski Beats Seixas Again

By Buddy Vaden

Fred Kovaleski of William and Mary tennis fame defeated E. Victor Seixas of North Carolina tennis fame yesterday as the potent crew from Williamsburg stretched their consecutive win streak to 74 matches and cut the Carolina win streak at 23. Team score was William and Mary 8, North Carolina 1.

Kovaleski, who defeated Seixas in the finals of the Southern Conference singles championship tourney last week-end, went 18 games in the first set before edging the faltering Tar Heel. The battle was nip and tuck all the way until the 17th game when Kovaleski broke through Seixas' service and then held his own to win two successive games and the set.

Kovaleski took the second set and the match, 6-4. Seixas won his own service in the first game and then dropped the next three games to Kovaleski. It was Seixas' weak net play that was the difference between the two. Time and again the sharp shooting Kovaleski would pass Seixas at the net for a crucial point.

The Handsome Tar Heel, who usually has a service hard to touch, faltered on his serves today, continually missing his first chance and was forced to let up on his speed and power to place the ball accurately in the service area.

Clark Taylor was the only winner for Carolina. He defeated Howe Atwater in three sets, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2. It was Atwater that knocked Taylor out of the Conference tournament three days ago with a 6-3, 6-4 win in the quarter finals.

Taylor, suffering from the strain of three days of tournament play, was taken sick soon after he completed his singles victory and was unable to compete in the number one doubles contest. Because of this fact, the Carolina team forfeited the top doubles match to Kovaleski and Atwater.

Lasley Dameron, filling in at the number three position for ailing Stan Gruner, played an excellent match against William and Mary's Bob Galloway. Dameron lost the match in three sets, 6-1, 6-8, 6-0.

The Tar Heels lost the first three matches over for the day. While Seixas and Taylor were still fighting it out in the first two courts, Jim Macken won the number four match over Charlie Rice, 6-0, 6-2 and Dick Randall took the measure of Tar Heel Duke Wilder, 6-0, 6-2. In the last singles match Howson Cole defeated Stan Gruner, 6-3, 6-0.

In the first doubles match played, Macken and Randall had little trouble in winning over Dameron and Winstead, 6-1, 6-0.

Rice and Wilder pushed Galloway and Bill Ozenberger to three sets before losing, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.

Yesterday's matches was the season's finale for the Carolinians, leaving them with a record of 23 wins and one defeat.

The summary:

Singles: Kovaleski (W&M) defeated Seixas, 10-8, 6-4; Taylor (C) defeated Atwater, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2; Galloway (W&M) defeated Dameron, 6-1, 6-8, 6-0; Macken (W&M) defeated Rice, 6-0, 6-2; Randall (W&M) defeated Wilder, 6-0, 6-2; Cole (W&M) defeated Winstead, 6-3, 6-0.

Doubles: Kovaleski - Atwater (W&M) won by default over breger (W&M) defeated Rice-Wilder, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3; Macken-Randall (W&M) defeated Dameron-Winstead, 6-1, 6-0.

Tar Baby Nine Triumphs, 9-6 Over Wake Forest Frosh Team

WAKE FOREST, May 16—North Carolina's hard - hitting freshman nine came from behind in the late innings here this afternoon to hand Wake Forest's Baby Deacs a 9-6 defeat.

Lefthander Henry Schacht pitched the Tar Babies to their eigth win of the season, with Bridgers relieving him in the eighth.

The visitors put the game on ice in the eighth with a four-run uprising, topped off by Reeves' three-run home. Gene Smith had led off the inning with a triple.

Besides his four-bagger, Reeves had a pair of singles to pace the winners at the plate. Overman, Gene Smith, and Stewart each had two hits in the Tar Babies' twelve-hit barrage.

The Tar Babies pushed across a single run in the first frame, but the home team came back for two in the third, and managed to stay ahead until Carolina's eighth inning rally.

The visitors deadlocked the count in the top of the seventh, but Wake Forest countered with a run of their own in the bottom of the same stanza.

The losers collected 13 hits off the offerings of the two Carolina hurlers, while the Tar Babies were getting 12 bingles off of Sheets and relief pitcher Hardison, who took over in the eighth.

Student Requests For 'Star Music' Asked by Capps

Ballot boxes to receive dedications which will be played Sunday night at the University Club presentation of Jimmy Capps and his "Our Best to You" program will be placed in the YMCA and Graham Memorial today, tomorrow and Thursday until noon, "Stars" committee chairman Nemo Nearman said yesterday.

Capps will appear here Sunday night from 9 until 11 o'clock and play students' dedications from the porch of Graham Memorial. Men and their dates, and men without dates as well, will be able to sit on the grass before Graham Memorial and listen.

Capps would like a minimum of 40 requests, Nearman said, and added that Capps will visit Chapel Hill Thursday afternoon to pick up the dedications. The dedications should be as nearly like those of "Our Best to You" as possible, he said, giving the name of the song, from whom and to whom the number is dedicated.

Town Girls to Be Dance Hostesses

Members of the Town Girls' Association will serve as hostesses at the Pine Room dance Thursday night. A meeting will follow. The group will entertain the high school seniors at the town girls' room Wednesday afternoon.

In elections held recently, the organization chose Janet Ellington as president, Becky Huggins as vice-president, Madge Crawford as secretary, Mary Mac Kerr as treasurer and Dot Sloan as social chairman.

Late Permission Not to Be Given

The Women's Interdormitory Council announced yesterday that there would be no late permission for coeds wishing to see the Quadrangle theater presentation of "Hamlet." There are 3 o'clock shows every afternoon through Saturday and 8:15 shows on Friday and Saturday nights that may be seen before coed hours.

Russell's book, entitled "The Woman Who Rang the Bell," gives the story of the woman for whom Spencer Hall was named. She lived as a girl in the house now occupied by Chancellor R. B. House, and wrote her books in the house across the street at the corner of Franklin street and Battle Lane. She was probably the first of Chapel Hill's writers. The book will be published by the University Press this week.

University Scholarship Committee Gives Chi Psi Award to Bob Evans

The University Scholarship Committee has awarded the Chi Psi Scholarship for 1949-50 to Robert George Evans of Cressgill, New Jersey, Edwin Lanier, director of student aid, said yesterday.

Evans, a rising senior, was elected to Phi Eta Sigma, freshmen honorary fraternity, in the winter of 1947. He has served as treasurer of the local Chi Psi chapter, as member of the Executive Council, and is at present chairman of the Chi Psi House Committee.

In 1947 Trustees of the Chi Psi fraternity Educational Trust established a fund from which awards of $200 would be made each year to colleges and universities at which there are chapters of the Chi Psi Social fraternity. This $200 is to be awarded by the faculty committee of the institution which awards all scholarships to students at the respective schools to a Chi Psi member on the bases of good scholarship, qualities of leadership, extracurricular activities, and all round worthiness as demonstrated by influence in the fraternity.

scholarship, but he is also scheduled to be a part-time physics teacher in the University, even though as a student at Chapel Hill he played the role of host recently to one of the Communist leaders now on trial in Federal court for conspiracy to overthrow the government.

Senator Hoey spoke for most of the people of North Carolina when he criticized the commission and said it had failed to make proper investigation of students chosen for nuclear studies.

Not only is a congressional inquiry in order, but the scholarship award to the acknowledged Communist student should be revoked. He declares he is loyal to the United States, but we all know that no person can be loyal to this country and at the same time serve a hostile Communist government which is committed to the destruction of all that America stands for?

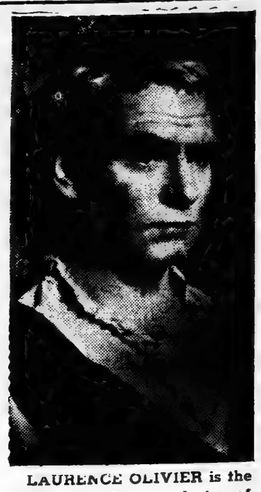
'Pops' Concert To Be Thursday In Memorial Hall

When the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Benjamin Swalin, plays a "pops" concert here on Thursday, the lobby of Memorial Hall will display the work of the orchestra's musicians in an allied art.

The concert is to be played as a benefit for the sustaining fund of the symphony and is scheduled to begin at 8:30 in Memorial Hall.

When not playing concerts or rehearsing, many of the members of the orchestra paint or sketch. In the course of the fourth annual tour of the symphony, they have had the opportunity to catch seashore and mountain scenes, as well as other North Carolina landscapes.

These paintings and sketches will be on exhibit in the lobby the evening of the concert. Many of the pictures are by Arthur Knebel, violinist, and Joseph Slechta, violinist. Knebel recently married Theodora Mantz, concert mistress of the orchestra who has been with the group for the past four years. Knebel and Slechta will arrange the exhibit.



Featured on the "pops" program will be "The Worried Drummer" by Schreiner. The composition gives the drummer a busy time, for it calls upon him to play the drums, tympani, and other percussion paraphanalia in quick succession.

The "Worried Drummer" in person is Warren Hard. This has been Hard's first season with the symphony, and Director Swalin declares he has a fine future. Conscientious and serious, Hard began practicing the number for the concert during the Little Symphony tour in February. This number was previously featured by the New York Philharmonic.

Vets Should See Adviser on Bills

All veteran graduate students who expect to submit bills for typing of theses and dissertations to the Veteran's Administration should contact the veterans adviser's office, 315 South Building, immediately, Veteran's Adviser F. C. Shepherd announced yesterday.

Veterans in graduate school who will receive degrees in June or August and have not yet turned in bills or contacted the veteran's office are urged to see the veteran's adviser at once.

LAURENCE OLIVIER is the director, producer and star of the $2,000.00 film production of "Hamlet," which opened in the Quadrangle Theater, Page Auditorium, on the Duke campus yesterday for a six day run. Special student discount rates of $1 are available through the English and Dramatic Arts Departments.

The award, inaugurated last year, was made on the basis of the vote of the entire membership of the chapter. John H. Jordan, Jr., Winton, now on the staff of the Attorney General's office in Raleigh, received the award last year.

Joint Recital Is Set In Hill Hall Tonight

Pianist, Chamber Trio to Present Concert of Classical Works at 8:30

In a joint recital at 8:30 in Hill Hall this evening, Robert MacDonald, pianist, and a chamber trio composed of Dwight Price, French horn player; William Tritt, violinist; and John O'Steen, pianist, will perform works by Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Brahms, and Poulenc.

MacDonald, junior music major from Little Rock, S. C., and student of Virginia Hare of the Music Department, was heard earlier this quarter in a joint recital with three other pianists. He is an accompanist for the University Men's Glee Club and was recently elected secretary of the Alpha Rho Chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, national honorary music fraternity.

Dwight Price, senior music major from Clinton, is graduating in June and plans to enter the teaching profession as a high school band director in the fall. He entered the University Music Department in 1939, studied French horn first with Earl Slocum and the following year with Harris Mitchell.

In January, 1942, he entered the Navy as a musician and graduated from the U. S. Navy School of Music in Washington, D. C. While in Washington, Price studied horn with Ottilio De Palma, solo hornist with the Philadelphia Symphony. After serving for three years with a navy band in the South Pacific on the battleship U. S. S. Indiana, he spent two years as assistant director of the Navy band at Long Beach, Calif. Price resumed his studies at the University in January, 1948, and since that time has studied horn with Gwynn McPeek.

Tritt, a junior music major from Fayetteville, is a pupil of Willis Gates and a member of Phi Mu Alpha. Prior to the war he studied at Eastman School of Music and has been prominent in orchestra and chamber music groups in and around Chapel Hill.

O'Steen, of Washington, D. C., is a piano pupil of Dr. Schinhan and has studied with Luigi Amidio at the Conservatory in Florence, Italy, and with Franz Sauer at the Mozartiem in Salzburg, Austria. He received the Kay Kyser scholarship in piano in 1941, has served as organist at the Episcopal and Presbyterian churches of Chapel Hill and has done organ and piano accompainments for university choral organizations.

Grail Donates Grant Funds To Five Men

Scholarships Are Worth $150 Each

The Order of the Grail has again donated funds sufficient to award five scholarships of $150 each for the 1949-50 school year, Edwin Lanier, director of student aid, said yesterday. Winners of the scholarships, as announced through the University Scholarship Committee, are as follows:

Edwin Harrison Dixon, Jr., Monroe; Luke Robinson Corbett, West End; Donald Vance Thurber, High Point; Jesse Thomas Terrell, Yanceyville; and John Edwin Duke, Goldsboro.

Of the winners for 1949-50, John Duke is the only student who held a Grail scholarship last year.

Several years ago the Grail endowed a number of scholarships for students at the University. From time to time since the establishment of these scholarships the Grail has been able to add to the original endowment from net receipts from dances given for the benefit of the entire student body.

Grail Scholarship Awards are made each year on the basis of (1) high scholastic record; (2) participation in outside student activities and contribution to the welfare of the student body; (3) need for earning part of the University expenses.

Seniors Will Go To Lake at 4:30

Trucks will leave the Y court at 4:30 and 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon for Hogan's Lake and the 49-er picnic, Ed Davenport, Senior Class president, announced yesterday.

Those who signed up for transportation should meet in the Y court at either departure time. Return trips will be made at various times during the evening.

Dorm Residents Sign Fee Papers

Petitions to reinstate dormitory social fees have been completed and sent along with other necessary comments to assistant Dean of Students W. C. Friday by the Men's Interdormitory Council, Pete Gerns, Interdorm Council President, said yesterday.

The petitions signed by 1,500 male students living in dormitories, call for a social fee of 50 cents to be levied with the beginning of the Fall Quarter.

Student Recital Scheduled Today

A student recital will be given this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Hill Hall, with the following program to be presented: "Sonata in B flat major" (Mozart), Charles Stevens, piano; "Prelude in G minor" and "Prelude in C sharp minor" (Chopin), Betty McNeely, piano; and "Alborado del gracioso" (Ravel), Robin Scroggs, piano.

The public is cordially invited.

Visiting Rules Are Released By HP Board

One Change Made In New Agreement

The House Privileges Board Visiting Agreement has been drawn up and will go into effect after summer school starts with only one change as compared with last year's, Andy Cornish, chairman of HPB, said yesterday.

The Agreement stipulates that a fraternity housing "members only" will be allowed the privileges that are set forth in the agreement.

All fraternities wishing to subscribe to the agreement must register their respective house at the beginning of each summer session with Katherine Carmichael, Dean of Women, stating that no "non-members" are residing in the house. This means that only members of that respective fraternity are living in the house, Cornish explained.

The agreement must be turned in to the office of the Dean of Men by Saturday, June 11, at 12 noon. It will go into effect Monday, June 13, 1949, at 12 noon and expire Thursday, August 25, at 12 midnight.

"It is understood that the person signing this agreement has properly oriented all his members on this agreement," Cornish said. This also applies to coeds signing it, he continued, explaining that it was the duty of the dormitory presidents to discuss the agreement with the girls.

"It is through the cooperation of both parties that this agreement is made possible. It is not a permanent thing, and may be removed at any time if it does not function properly," he added.

Racial Committee To Hold Meeting

A non-partisan committee, organized to inform the campus and the state of the inadequate facilities for North Carolina Negroes, will hold an open meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the Horace Williams Lounge in Graham Memorial. Interested students and faculty members are invited to attend.

The committee was formed last Friday after hearing Harold Epps from the North Carolina College Law School in Durham speak on the Negro problem. It was then proposed that the committee function as an educational, informative group, and as an aid in securing equal educational opportunities for all students.

Last Chance to Splash

Rustic Seniors Will Go Naked Around The Feet as of Friday

Friday is the day. Seniors from "A" dorm to Whitehead and from the Y court to the Bell Tower will be feeling tradition in its most literal sense, as they tread the gravel paths barefooted.

Barefoot Day has for many years been the order for graduating seniors, in a last attempt to hold the gaiety of youth before old age and its dignity settles upon them. All 49-ers on campus are urged to take advantage of the opportunity.

Rumor has it that 49-ers who appear with even the scent of shoe leather hovering about them on Friday will be severely punished. Neither sandals nor socks will be permitted. Bunions and corns must be displayed in their own naked beauty.

If arrangements can be completed, a manicurist will be employed to pretty up the pedals of any bashful seniors desiring the service. She will set up business in the Y court today or tomorrow.

Practice in manipulating puddles expertly enough to splash those walking near one will be allowed today and tomorrow, and a special hardening process for tender feet will be released as soon as the Atomic scientists have perfected it.

Tradition has it that Carolina men and maidens have respectively bigger and prettier feet than those of any other race on earth. It was when this fact was discovered many years ago that Barefoot Day was begun, and it has been carried on through the centuries since then.

Yacks Are Here

The 1949 Yackety-Yack arrived on campus yesterday afternoon, 3,200 strong. Distribution to students will begin today, Ted Fussell, Yack business manager said. Students may obtain their copies by calling personally at Horace Williams Lounge in Graham Memorial from 2 o'clock to 5 o'clock, Monday through Friday. Distribution will continue until all Yacks have been passed out.

All University students who have been in attendance during the past school year may pick up their Yacks without charge, Fussell said. The yearbook has been paid for those students through their fees. Students who have not been in regular attendance will be required to pay a fee of $1.50 for each quarter they were not here.

Summer Faculty To Have Visitors In Two Schools

A number of specialists from various sections of the country have accepted appointments as members of the staff of the School of Education for the 1949 Summer Session in the University, it was announced here today by Dean Guy B. Phillips, Director of the Summer Session.

Dr. Wallace H. Moore of Pasadena, Calif., a member of the staff of Occidental College, will teach in the field of secondary education and curriculum. Dr. Moore has an outstanding record on the West Coast in educational leadership and has served as a member of the faculty in the University of California.

Miss G. Marian Young of the staff of the Experimental School in New York City will teach in the field of child growth and development and elementary science for teachers.

Miss Ruby M. Schuyler, Director of Curriculum of the public schools of Glencoe, Ill., will be on the faculty during the first term to work in the general field of child growth, development and reading. Dr. L. R. Johnson, principal of the East Orange, N. J., High School, will return to the Summer Session staff for the fourth time, and Prof. Doris L. Kimball of the Lorain, Ohio, public school system, will be making her first visit to Chapel Hill.

One of the members of the music staff during the second summer term will be Dr. Carl Parrish of the Westminster Choir College. Dr. Kester Svendsen from the University of Oklahoma will join the English staff for the second term.

A number of other leading scholars will be members of the staff, Director Phillips said.

Peacock Chosen Phi Bete Head

Alvin Ward Peacock, University junior, has been named president of the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity for the coming year. The position is awarded in the honorary scholastic society on a basis of the highest grade average during the past year. Peacock maintained an average of 97.3.

The vice-presidency, which is awarded on the same basis went to Eugene Dwight Blackwelder, another junior, who maintained a grade average of 97.21.

W. Page Harris of Durham was elected secretary in a general vote by members.

To be initiated into Phi Beta Kappa a student must average 92.5 on all courses. The fraternity took 106 new members during its recent spring ceremonies—the largest number on record.

Di To Debate Freistadt At Meet This Evening

Open Forum Discussion to Consider Three Problems of Grants Question

"Should Hans Freistadt's fellowship be withdrawn?" will be the subject under discussion at an open meeting of the Dialectic Senate at 9 o'clock tonight in New West Building.

Freistadt, an admitted Communist, is scheduled to receive a $1,600 fellowship from the Atomic Energy Commission for further work in the Physics Department, effective July 1. The revelation of his scholarship raised a storm of protest and comment in Washington.

Di Senate spokesmen said yesterday that the group will discuss several resolutions tonight. They are:

1. Should Freistadt's fellowship be withdrawn?

2. Should an investigation of Freistadt's loyalty be made so that he may be vindicated or proven disloyal by due process of law?

3. Should candidates for AEC fellowships be screened on the basis of their membership in a political party?

All students and other visitors have been invited to attend and participate in the discussion.

NY Alumni Hear House, J.M. Saunders

Yankee Tar Heels Hold Annual Feed

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

NEW YORK, May 17—Chancellor Robert House and Alumni Secretary J. Maryon Saunders of the University of North Carolina spoke at the annual dinner meeting of the University graduates in New York last night.

The meeting was held in Town Hall Club, James L. Harrison, president of the New York Alumni Association, said. Several hundred alumni in the metropolitan area made reservations for the dinner.

Tuesday House spoke on "My Responsibility as an Individual Citizen" at a dinner meeting of the Citizenship Conference, sponsored by the Department of Justice.

Recently, New York alumni under leadership of Harrison, A W. Haywood, and William A. Whitaker raised funds to purchase for the University library the entire collection of materials relating to Shakespeare gathered together by the late Dr. Samuel A. Tannenbaum, who for many years was secretary of the Shakespeare Association of America and editor of its bulletin.

Both House and Saunders will return to the University Thursday.

University Club Selects Officers

Three rising seniors were among those officers elected to four top posts in University Club elections held at the Club's regular Monday night meeting in Graham Memorial.

John A Holcombe, Trenton, N. J., was elected president of the club to succeed Ike Rolader, while Charlie Foley, Charlotte, was named by acclamation to succeed vice-president Tookie Hodgson.

Charleen Greer of Tulsa, Okla., won over a field of four candidates the post of secretary, and Harold Bursley, senior from Charlotte was elected treasurer.

Final plans for the University Club picnic to be held at Hogan's Lake next Monday were discussed and outlined by entertainment committee chairman Wick Andrews. He reported that transportation to the Lake will be available for all those members in need of it. Members desiring transportation were requested to assemble by the Old Well Monday at 6:30.

An assessment will have to be made, Andrews stated, and added that cards are being sent to club members as a reminder. The assessment should be turned in to him no later than Saturday, Andrews cautioned.

Vesper Service Planned Tomorrow

The first in a series of weekly non-denominational vesper programs for the campus, sponsored by the YWCA and the YMCA will take place tomorrow night at 6:30 in Gerrard Hall. Dr. Claiborne S. Jones, professor in the University's Zoology Department, will lead the service.

BSU Picks Ray As Representative

James W. Ray, state Baptist Student Union secretary, will represent the Carolina BSU at the World Baptist Youth Conference to be held this summer in Stockholm, Sweden.

The Baptist State Convention and the Baptist students of North Carolina will share equally Ray's expenses for the convention. All Baptist students on the campus will be given an opportunity to contribute to the fund. Letters are being sent to all Baptist students explaining the purpose of the Stockholm meeting and requesting contributions for the Chapel Hill $100 share of the expense.

Boxes are in all dormitory offices for donations and all students who attend the Baptist Church Service Sunday morning will be able to make offerings at the service.

UP Steer Group Will Meet Today

A very important meeting of the University Party Steering Committee is slated for 4 o'clock this afternoon in Roland Parker Lounge 2, Graham Memorial, Chairman Fletcher Harris said yesterday.

The main business of the final UP get-together of the school year will be the election of party officers for 1949-50. Harris said that a vice-chairman, secretary, treasurer, qualifications chairman, and publicity chairman will be elected and requested all Steering Committee members to be present for this very important meeting.

Committee Hears Promise By Bronk

Research Group Head Says Checks Will Be Made on Suspect Students

WASHINGTON, May 17—(UP)—Senate investigators today exacted a promise from Chairman Detlev W. Bronk of the National Research Council, that he will try to prevent young Communists being educated in science at the government's expense.

The Council, a private organization of distinguished scientists and educators, handles the Atomic Energy Commission's $5,000,000-a-year program of fellowships for non-secret research in basic science.

The Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee is investigating the program because one of the fellowships was awarded to Hans Freistadt, a Communist and student at the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Bronk, who also is president of Johns Hopkins University, agreed in testimony before the committee that Freistadt was a "poor selection." He said he will recommend that the council screen future fellowship candidates more carefully.

Bronk said he will call a meeting of the council's 50-member fellowship committee as soon as possible to consider changes in the program.

He told a reporter later that he will consult the fellowship committee before deciding whether steps should be taken to withdraw Freistadt's $1,600-a-year grant.

of the nation's foremost atomic physicists and head of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, N. J., said in a letter to the Senate-House committee that loyalty investigations are "repugnant" to American traditions of liberty and should be restricted to jobs involving "real issues of security."

Committee Chairman Brien McMahon (D.-Conn.) announced that Freistadt himself will appear before the committee tomorrow.

Meanwhile Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D.-Wyo.), Chairman of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee which has charge of funds for the atomic commission, said his group also will look into the matter.

In a letter to commission Chairman David Lilienthal, he pointed to federal laws forbidding payment of government wages to any person belonging to an organization advocating violent revolution.

He argued that recipients of government research fellowships come under that provision and should at least be required to sign a loyalty affidavit.

Bronk told the atomic committee he is willing to recommend that the council require every fellowship candidate to sign a loyalty oath and to state whether he has ever been a member of the Communist party. He said he would be willing to reject any candidates who disclosed Communist ties.

But he strongly opposed demands of some congressmen that all fellowship applicants be investigated by the FBI. He said such strict security precautions are not necessary for students who do not have access to secret research, and that such a program would open the door to dangerously far-reaching government intervention in the whole field of education.

Lilienthal took the same stand in testimony before the committee yesterday. He asserted that scientific progress would be hampered if the government imposes tight security rules on non-secret fields of study.

Rep. Paul J. Kilday (D.-Tex.) told Bronk he sees no reason why loyalty checks should "infringe on academic freedom."

Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R.-Ia.) indicated he still favors FBI checks.

Freistadt Flies To Washington For Testimony

Will Appear Today Before Committee

Physics student Hans Freistadt flew to Washington from the Raleigh-Durham Airport at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon to testify today before the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy.

The Austrian-born admitted Communist will testify at 10 o'clock this morning on the facts pertaining to his receiving a $1,600 fellowship from the Atomic Energy Commission to continue his advanced physics work at the University.

Freistadt received a telegram Monday from Sen. Brien McMahon (D.—Conn.), chairman of the joint committee, inviting him to appear before the group "since your name was mentioned at an open meeting this afternoon.

"I consider it only fair," McMahon continued, "that you be given an opportunity to testify before the committee at your earliest convenience should you so desire."

Freistadt replied that he would be happy to appear and asked the senator to name the date. The reply came yesterday that "you are invited to appear as a witness at an open hearing of the Joint Congressional Committee at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning."

Freistadt said before he left yesterday that he had also sent a telegram to radio commentator Fulton Lewis, Jr., asking him to give the 23-year-old Communist a portion of his radio time whenever it was convenient to answer the charges that Lewis made against him.

Freistadt said he recently sent a letter to Sen. Clyde R. Hoey (D.—N.C.) which he asked be inserted in the Congressional Record.

He told Hoey that although he was a Communist, he did not think that meant he was not a loyal citizen of the United States.

"I don't think it is fair to deprive a person of a general academic scholarship because of his political views," Freistadt continued.

'Music Under the Stars'

Jimmy Capps, master of ceremonies of the WPTF week-night feature, "Our Best to You," will present his regular format for University students from the porch of Graham Memorial Sunday night, 9 to 11 o'clock. Capps' appearance is part of the "Music Under the Stars" series, sponsored by the University Club. In order that his record-spinning be as nearly like that of his "Best to You" program, Capps has asked that students request at least 40 numbers for him to play. Dedications should be placed in ballot boxes which will be located in the YMCA and Graham Memorial until noon Thursday.

Keep Paul Young Here!

From over in Hill Hall come rumors that Paul Young, the music department's very capable director of the Glee Club, may be leaving the University to accept a position at another college. It seems that the University of Illinois has made Mr. Young an offer which he can hardly afford to turn down. While the exact details are not available, the offer probably will be better than any that this University can come close to matching.

If the University lets Paul Young go, it will be losing a man who has brought the Carolina Glee Club up from virtually nothing to the point where it has a concert scheduled in New York and possibly Washington next fall. If Young leaves, all these plans likely will fall through, along with the other good work which he has done with the Glee Club. He has gone a long way toward bringing the Carolina Glee Club into national prominence.

Each of the programs which Paul Young staged has been highly successful. And what possibly is even more important is the fact that he is well-liked and respected by all his pupils.

Young is an associate professor at Carolina, and the University cannot make an offer to equal that of Illinois. But if a raise is possible, it should be given to him, for his work certainly merits far more than he now receives. Controller Carmichael, commenting in the absence from town of Chancellor House, stated yesterday that he believes "every effort will be made to keep him here." But he was dubious about the University being able to match the attractive Illinois contract.

So it looks like the music department may lose a highly valuable man. One solution would be supplemental aid from some alumnus interested in keeping good professors at Carolina, but thus far no one has come forward.

If Young leaves, the school would not be able to get a successor of equal ability for the price it now pays him. And even if it were so lucky, the new director would not be able to take up immediately in Young's footsteps.

Paul Young likes Chapel Hill, the University, and the students, but it is expecting too much to ask him to turn down a job like that at Illinois just because he likes his present environment. The new offer is good enough to take care of that.

It is regrettable that the State continues to allow the University's professors to be underpaid. If Young leaves, he won't be the first valuable man to be lured away from Carolina by other schools which can pay more.

Carolina claims to be the great education center of the South. It can't continue to be this if the men who can further this reputation are consistently attracted by other colleges.

Summer School Government

During last Thursday night's meeting of the Student Legislature, a vitally important measure was passed which will determine the form of student government during the forthcoming summer school sessions. The new plan has received relatively little publicity when one considers its significance. Its passage was made necessary because there is no provision in the constitution for student government during summer school.

Bill Mackie, president of the student body, gave this explanation of the workings of the plan. "It sets up a board of six men and five girls to carry out all functions of student government during the summer. Since there are no executive or legislative functions except in case of emergency, most of the work will be judicial. The whole board will sit as one court on honor council cases. On campus code cases, the six men will try cases involving men students only. The five women members will try coed violations of the campus code."

The next question which this brings to mind is how this important governing committee will be chosen. Mackie says the "board will be appointed by the president with the advice of a committee of six, three of whom come from the student legislature, and one each from the men's honor council, women's honor council, and student council." The constitution gives the president power to appoint all special boards, but Mackie added that "no appointment will be made without the approval of the committee, since we will be doing the job together."

Since the legislature approved the measure there have been numerous objections voiced, and yesterday Ted Leonard, speaker of the legislature, indicated he would call a special session of the legislature on Monday night. The body ended its regular meetings for the year last week.

There are several interesting points for discussion on the matter. First, the plan is illegal from the start, since no provision is made for summer school government in the constitution. But on the other hand, anything that the legislature does will be unconstitutional even if it does substitute for the present plan. This rather confused situation makes one wonder why no amendment to the constitution was brought up for the students to vote on during the recent spring elections. Some amendment certainly should have been proposed. The government last summer was actually not legal and everyone was aware of this. Yet the student leaders allowed the inadequacy to drag by all year, until summer is near again and the same old problem arises, with no consittutional solution.

As Mackie has said, most of the activities over the summer will be in the judicial field, for example honor council of-

The WASHINGTON SCENE

By George Dixon
(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 17—Fourteen years ago Congress authorized a duck sanctuary in Puget Sound and directed the Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service to select a specific location.

The directive commanded Fish and Wildlife to investigate various proposed spots before leaping to a decision. Apparently it took this literally. Fourteen long years passed by during which the ducks went as unsanctuaried as the rest of us living creatures.

About two weeks ago, Rep. Henry M. Jackson, of Washington, decided Fish and Wildlife had had sufficient time to make up its piscatorial and zoological mind as to the location. He introduced a bill to make action mandatory.

Fish and Wildlife immediately communicated with Washington's senior Senator, Warren G. Magnuson, asking if he had any location preference. But Mr. Magnuson had other things besides ducks on his mind at the moment.

He was concerned with more pressing matters such as Taft-Hartley repeal and millions in appropriations for our unfeathered friends in Europe. So he wrote a routine letter to Fish and Wildlife asking it to hold the matter up for a few days until he could give it his undivided attention.

The next day he received a return reply from Fish and Wildlife, signed by Oscar H. Johnson, Acting Director. The solon read through it and almost doubled up with hysterical laughter.

The letter reviewed the 14-year history of the case in infinite detail, even including the instructive information that migrating waterfowl migrate. The Acting Director then allayed any fears Mr. Magnuson might have entertained, by adding comfortingly:

"I can assure you, Senator, that the Fish and Wildlife Service is not going to rush into this thing blindly."

The Fairest Flowers of Journalism, meaning our ladies of the Women's National Press Club, were rehearsing in their usual flower-like way for the Club's big annual stunt party at the Statler the other night. They were giving their all to the performance.

The stellar stunt this year was a skit in which the reportorial charmers portrayed various Washington notables, such as President Truman, cabineteers and others whose names appear in the public prints. For instance, Mrs. Ruth Montgomery played the part of Perle Mesta although she bears about as strinking a resemblance to Perle as I do.

President Truman was played by Mrs. Frieda Wyatt Everett, who bears a superficial resemblance to our Chief Executive. She has two cars, one on each side, and a face.

The Journalistic Janes go to intense pains to make their characters as authentic-looking as possible. They even borrowed one of Mr. Truman's 10-gallon gift hats for Mrs. Everett.

The rest of her outfit was authentically-Trumanesque too; double-breasted suit, knife-edged trousers, bow tie. With the thick spectacles it was difficult to tell her from the original.

Mrs. Everett rehearsed and rehearsed until her make-up was runny. She retired to the ladies' powder room to repair it.

Forgetful that she not only looked like a man but THE MAN she strode into the feminine sanctuary.

You should have heard the screams as other fair occupants came running out.

Chollie's Follies

Yack! Yack! Yack!

By Charlie Gibson

Duncan done it! Both Robert Ripley and another section of the Daily Tar Heel should carry the unbelievable news that the '49 Yackety Yack is to be given out today on time. No one is more pleasantly amazed over this meta-deadline miracle than Editor Bill Duncan himself, a very business-like guy who organized a hard-working staff to paste up and put out a lively 510-page reminiscence of Carolinantics.

And inside the attractive dark green and silver cover is a yearbook that hardly suffers at all from the hastey job this staff had to do much earlier this year. Page one clearly announces an appropriate theme—"Carolina—Yesterday and Today"—that is worked up cleverly over twenty pages, showing small historic photographs in green to contrast with full pages of modern Universights. The effect does compensate for a rather drab and uninspired flyleaf—a map of North Carolina in 1795, the year that the Davie Poplar suddenly girded a campus around its limbs.

Then there is the lengthy rogue's gallery of all the classes with the two-hundred-page monotony of pretty people broken-up by nostalgic double-page inserts on the various departments of learning here. These, the most novel innovations of the '49 yearbook, are so well-written that no one can complain too loudly when discussions by buildings leave Playmaker-maker Sam Selden deserted in a foreign language section. But when a snapshot of the Daily Tar Heel staff that belongs on page 430 swaps places with an English classroom shot that should be on page 79, the most I-gave-up-on this-one caption in the annual asks, "Is the English Correct in the Daily Tar Heel?"

It is these humorous captions, however, on later snapshot pages that are the mainstay of the books. For instance, what are all the dozens of guzzling scenes tagged but a repeated "Tea-time!" In fact, by page 472 the Yack staff has gone so snap-SHOT that there is a subtle 2-L-wiff-it parody entitled "The Staff's Last Yaff," a parody in which everything is purposely so haywire that the beauty queen is a monstrous mixture of Sadie Hawkins and Whistler's mother-in-law. Highly amusing, ch, Alice Denham?

In the real beauty section local photographer Francis Lavergne Johnson has made fifteen coeds evidence that John Powers knows this pulchritude picking after all. This time the beauties are pictured in excellent bust views although it is unfortunate that Queen Claudia Lee's should be the poorest and most artificial cut in the lot after Judge Powers fell all over himself, too, to call Claudia "the most natural beauty I've ever seen."

The fraternity and sorority sections are so much better organized this year that maybe no one will complain about the unflattering pictures of the frat houses or that embarrassing snapshot of six future Tri Delts being rushed by the ADPi's. The athletic section is well-written and well-laid out, too, so that no one should find fault there with the possible exception of William Benbow, the wrestler in the frantic caption scribbler confront row for whom some jured up the merciless monnicker "Basil Kosinsky."

But all in all, the Yack is on time and terrific. So here're three cheers for "Bully" Duncan. BEER! BEER! BEER!

The YMCA received notice that it might make some pen money by selling PHT pins to campus husbands whose working wives might want to form a sort of extra-curricular sorority to be known as the "Put Hubby Through." LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

PLEASE CONSIDER

Editor:

Before you formulate a new policy governing the Write-away letters that will be printed please consider a few things other than that column itself. I have no grounds to believe that your changes will be anything more than technicalities to aid in printing, but there is a possibility that you may be contemplating a restrictive policy.

The majority of your columnists are members of the "Graham Memorial Publications Brotherhood" and rather closely observe the frateral spirit. Consequently the subject matter and even the style of writing suffer somewhat from the lack of variety.

The write-away column on the other hand is next to "Little Abner" in the number and intensity of surprises. Certainly much of the "come the revolution" and the "back to the good ole days" stuff is tiresome reiteration and can become nauseating. Yet most of the letters are written because someone feels that some situation needs to be brought before the students, and therefore reflect more thought. The difference is between a column for a column's sake and a column for the subject's sake.

Also there seems to be an attitude among the students that the campus politicians are knit closely to the Graham Memorial crowd. (Here I sand bowed awaiting correction!) If this is so, any indication that the Tar Heel is not the students paper, but rather the binding element of an exclusive club, will strike a killing blow at student government.

Judging from the editorials, the Tar Heel is dedicated to arousing interest in student government. It would be inconsistent to make the "speaking of one's mind" an involved and uncertain process.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Editor:

Is the rumor true that William Randolf Hearst now owns the controlling shares of the Daily Tar Heel?

Is this other rumor true that Fulton Lewis writes your editorials?

I have a last question—since Lewis is a fascist and paid propagandist of NAM, what does this make those who follow his line?

Finally, is it true that you are resigning?

Pitching Overshoes

In Spotlight

By Tom Wharton

It looks like old Chapelina has finally broken into the Washington spotlight. It was our dubious honor to be the subject of comment from the very distinguished columnist, Fulton Lewis, regarding Hans Freistadt and his "nuclear research." If there was ever any doubt in the minds of the folks back home that their sons and daughters in Chapelina were in school with a hotbed of communists and pinkish activities, there should be none left.

A week before last fall quarter during the week of orientation of the new incoming freshmen, it was the experience of more than one of the orientation councilors to have the question put to them very frankly by some of their freshman orientees about the communists in Chapel Hill.

Two freshmen asked this columnist if he were one, and if not, how did he manage to become an orientation councilor. Their fathers (most of them good, voting, if not influencial alumni) had specifically instructed them not to join the communist party or associate with any of the many red personalities around here, or else they would be jerked right out of school. Now with this Freistadt scandal, and his constant writing to the DTH, it will be surprising if we get any new freshmen in this school next fall.

There would seem to be something wrong with the function of the administration or the student government or something when so many good, loyal American students in this university want to keep what little good name the university now has and have this filthy fluke "infiltrated" out of here, and still they have to suffer under the reputation this "mild-mannered" crackpot is earning for us now on a national scale.

"Mild - mannered" Freistadt makes the statement that he would fight for this country in anything except an "aggressive war." What a loophole that is. Hell, he could define any kind of war as an aggressive war just like the Russians have been labeling every action of the United States since the war as "aggressive." If Russia landed troops on Wrightsville Sound and took over the Tradewinds, Freistadt would call that an altruistic gesture of old hirsute Uncle Joe, but if the U. S. Army took steps to shoo them away he would scream "bloody ... gression."

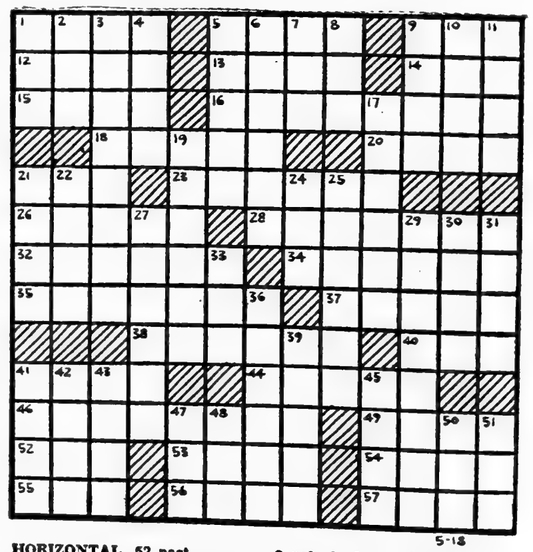
Only one girl, a dark-haired indoor-type, beauty from Florida, condescended to offer a kind remark regarding this column. This girl is apparently in favor of the boys wearing T-shirts, dungarees, and brogans, so this columnist has decided that he will try to get in the habit of wearing these items himself in the hopes that maybe that way he can get a date with her.



It had been most interesting to note just which of the girls on this campus felt affected enough by this last week's Pitching Overshoes to offer their vehement criticism. In some cases it was even surprising, however, in most cases it was not particularly surprising.

Publications circles are getting a little anxious to see what the new Kerr-style Tarnation is going to be like. Indications from the inside are that it has good prospects of being the best issue to be turned loose on us is some time. Earlier, Editor Kerr expected to get out two more issues before the end of the school year. This was made impossible by some planetarium information that got priorities on the press and left Tarnation waiting for a while to be printed. However, instead of being the 24 page job that it was originally scheduled to be, it will be the old 32 page issue that is the customary size.

Especially featured in this editon of the humor mag is the scoop that is Tarnation's exclusive story that the State College Wataugan has been trying to get hold of, but has been unsuccessful although the story took place first on their campus.

Speaking of coming publications, the 1949 Yackety Yack is due out sometime this week according to the latest word. Rumor has it pretty substantially that Bill Duncan has done a fine job on this year's book, which isn't too surprising considering Bill Duncan and the excellent staff that has been slaving on that job this year.

Bill Albans Suffers Ankle Injury; Lost to Track Team for SC Meet

Carolina's chances in the Southern Conference track meet this weekend received a serious blow last night when it was learned that ace Bill Albans, the star of the team and one of the favorites to crack several records in the meet, badly sprained his ankle yesterday and will definitely be out Friday and Saturday.

The lanky speedster from Cranford, New Jersey hurt his ankle while high jumping yesterday afternoon in prepration for the big meet.

The coaches at first were afraid that the ankle might be broken, but infirmary officials said late last night that they thought that a sprain was the extent of the injury to Albans' ankle. An ex-ray will be taken this morning according to university doctors.

THE SPORTING PICTURE

By BILLY CARMICHAEL III

On the Subject of Coeds

THOUGH MEN ARE not supposed to know enough about women to understand them, let alone write about them, the male has always been critical enough of the opposite sex to comment, knowing full well the wrath that might be incurred. Such is the preface to remarks on the affairs of the current Coed sports program, which to the outsider would look to be in dire need of a great deal more than remarks.

This is written in the old spirit of turnabout is fair play since the Coed athletic department, names withheld in inquest, has long sought the why and wherefore of the lack of Daily Tar Heel coverage of Coed athletic happenings. The truth of the matter is that so often the reporters of the sports department don't know exactly where and when to go in search of coed sportsmen who might be taking part in sports proceedings at the time.

The organization of the coed sports program during the past year has been rather spasmodic and spur of the momentish which has weakened the activity by preventing the use of publicity to press the program with a seemingly interested group of coeds. Too often arrangements of tournaments etc. have been left until the last minute, and then the details of informing the press left to the coeds themselves who are many times too burdened with other work to provide for the best results.

A Sharp Contrast

IN CONTRAST, the Men's Intramural department, realizing the value of aid and comfort given the DTH, has bent over backward to assist in the coverage of all sports. The result is as full a mural coverage as current space limitations will allow. And under this setup, little is left for the participants to do, but take part in the actual performing of the activities. The coeds, it seems, must carry the brunt of the paperwork in addition to the play—the former work that might be done for them.

For some atomically-hidden reason, the working of the Coed sports department has long been a mystery to many. The sports played in and out of regular gym classes total an impressive number which includes golf, tennis, archery, basketball, softball, volleyball and the like. But the program has never seemed geared for the most part to the interest that is being shown by the coeds.

An incident of note occurred last fall with a University Club-sponsored Powder Bowl attraction to be played among Coed grid stars. The event, admittedly organized without Coed faculty sanction, never did receive such sanction of any nature and eventually died a gasping death for similiar causes. The coeds seemed none too happy about the whole affair.

Let 'em Play

THE WOMEN WHO CALL the plays in the Coed athletic department didn't like the football idea at all. It was too rough they said, and wasn't the type sport suited for the type coed on this campus. The female Faculty to the Dean backed the refusal to allow the game right up and down the line in a true display of real sisterhood. The coeds remained none too happy about it, and the Coed sports program suffered in the rush.

The game was being played on other campuses throughout the country without serious repercussions. Some said the refusal came because of definite lack of interest in field hockey, the sport department heads were pushing at the time. The male population wondered if women were not dangerous enough without putting sticks in their hands. If they played hockey, why not football.

A complete athletic program contains activities fitted to the wants and needs of the participating groups. If the coeds want to play football next fall instead of hockey why not adopt rules scaled to the abilities and limitations of the girls, and then put instructors on the field to teach the coeds how to play correctly in order to protect themselves and attain the most from their participation.

At a school where athletics for all is not a dream, but a reality, the coed athletes must not be overlooked or slighted. They must be given a well-planned program to fit their energies and tastes alike, and that program must be well-executed for the fullest success. The Woman's athletic department should get in step with its progressive big brother in athletics.

MAN SWEARS
By Better Razor Blade

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., May 17—
Plenty of men swear at their razor blades, but here's a man who swears by his!
When reporters called on Joe Muldoon, they found him whistling in the bathroom. "Boys," he said, "just tell my public I'm razor blade happy. After years of trial and error, mostly error, I finally found my blade — just a 'feather-touch' and so long whiskers! Why, shaving with Pal Hollow Ground is as easy as flicking the top off lemon meringue pie."
Mr. M forgot to say that Pal Hollow Ground still gives you 4 for 10¢ (or 10 for 25¢, 21 for 49¢, 44 for 98¢). He uses Double Edge. Single Edge cost the same.

Tar Heels To Meet Wake Forest Today

Carolina Nine Out For Revenge At Wake Forest

Carolina's varsity nine will have one last chance at Wake Forest's potent baseball machine this afternoon when the Tar Heels journey to Baptist Hollow for their fourth contest with the Deacs.

Coach Lee Gooch's strong aggregation has already clinched the Big Four championship, while the locals are fighting it out with State for the runner-up spot.

In winning this year's championship, the Wake Forest nine has been pushed to the limit in ecking out three tight decisions over the Tar Heel.

In their first meeting, the Deacs staged a five-run rally in the seventh inning to overcome a 5-1 Carolina lead and win, 6-5. In the next game between the two clubs, at Chapel Hill, the visitors took another hard-fought battle, 4-2. Wednesday the Deacons took advantage of several breaks to edge the locals 3-2.

The Deacs are expected to start Lefty Moe Bauer or right-hander Dick Vander Clute on the mound, while Coaches Bunn Hearn and Walter Rabb will probably start Andy Tranavitch on the hill for Carolina.

The Tar Heels now have a record of four wins and six losses in Big Four play and an overall average of twenty victories seven defeats, and two ties.

Today's starting lineup should be the same as usual, with Sid Varney behind the plate, Will Hobbs on first base, Stan Goodman on the keystone sack, Rip Ryan at short stop, John Senter at third, Don Ward in left field, Jim Ballou in center, and Ed Lamb in the right field position.

Archery Continues In Coed Spotlight

The WAA co-ed archery tournament continues today with teams from Pi Beta Phi and Alpha Delta Phi shooting at 4:00 p.m. in Kenan Stadium.

Badminton competition was closed last week when Pat Winslow, representing Town, won by a forfeit over Doris Beasley.

The WAA also announced yesterday that its annual picnic will be held May 24 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. The program has not been definitely formulated yet but will be announced later.

However, tickets may be obtained for $.35 from Mike Merker, Pi Beta Phi; Ruth Baine, Alpha Delta Pi; Mussette Brown, Chi Omega; Betty Dixon, Delta Delta Delta; Lucille Reiley, Alpha Gamma Delta; Dot Casey, Kenan; B. A. Pope, Alderman; Nina Eustler, McIver; and Mildred Koon, Smith.

Today's Sports

BASEBALL

The Varsity baseballers will meet Wake Forest there this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The freshmen will encounter the Deacon frosh on Emerson also at 4 o'clock.

PRACTICE SESSIONS

Practice sessions continue in soccer, lacrosse, and track.

Intramural Swimming Prelims Underway at Bowman Gray

The Intramural spotlight shifts to Bowman Gray pool this week where qualifying trials in all individual events of the annual mural swimming meet are being held.

These trials began on Monday and continue through today. The mural department cautions that today will be the last day for qualifying attempts in the individual events.

Tomorrow from 4 to 6 o'clock trials in the relays and diving events will be held and the following Monday, the 25 and 50-yard semi-finals will be reeled off.

Next Wednesday, May 25, finals in all events are scheduled. Men qualifying for semi-finals and finals competition will be notified through the weekly notice sent out to mural groups this weekend.

Each individual will be limited to three swimming events. Anyone with an A medical record who has not earned a varsity letter or is not a member of the varsity or freshman squad is eligible for entrance.

One relay team in each relay and two divers from each team may enter. Places will count 6, 4, 3, 2, 1, in the individual events and diving, and 10, 8, 6, 4, 2, in the relays for scoring the meet.

Four men make up a team for receiving the 40 entrance points, but independents are encouraged to enter in their specialty.

Records May Fall in 25th Annual Loop Track Meet This Weekend

Six recods are in danger of being broken this weekend when the Fetzer Field track will be the scene of the 25th annual running of the Southern Conference track meet starting Friday and continuing through Saturday.

The two records which are in greatest danger of passing into history are the two-mile run mark of 9:33.2 set by Liddell of VMI last year and the 152 ft. 2¾ in. discus standard accomplished by State's Zori in 1936.

Sam Magill, Tar Heel distance ace, and Bob Seligman, Carolina field event star, are rated as good chances to better the present records. Both turned in better performances at the recent Penn Relays.

Other records which are endangered are the hurdles marks of 23.5 set in the lows by Kinzle of Duke in '38 and 14.3 set in the highs by Carolina's Corpening in 1939, Jack Moody's high jump mark of 6 ft. 3 in. and the 100-yard dash record of 9.8 held jointly by six performers and dating back to 1928.

Carolina's star-studded team is the big favorite in the meet, but much competition is expected in some quarters from the talented fhinclads of Maryland. Duke and Virginia Tech may give both teams trouble.

The Tar Heels, winners of the Southern Conference indoor meet here in February, will have the same performers who sparked that winning performance plus several others who did not compete in the indoor meet for various reasons.

Carolina's team, unbeaten to date this year, has scored dual meet victories over Princeton, State, Duke, Virginia and Virginia Tech. In addition the Tar Heels were outstanding at the Florida, Carolina and Penn Relays, meets in which no team score was kept.

Bill Albans, 23-year old Navy vet and first year man for Carolina, won five firsts in the indoor meet and is expected to repeat in most of the corresponding events here this weekend..

Taylor Elected

Clark Taylor, rising senior from New Haven, Conn., was elected captain of the 1950 tennis team yesterday. He replaces Vic Seixas, Tar Heel number one man and former Southern Conference singles champion.

Taylor teamed up with Seixas to win the Conference doubles title last week end. The Carolina tandem defeated Ted Kovaleski and Howie Atwater for the title. Taylor is Carolina's number two singles man and will move up to the top spot next year.

Frosh Cop Third In Raleigh Meet

The Tar Baby tracksters placed third last night in the annual Freshman Invitational Track Meet held at State College. They copped only 51 points while Duke, the winner, racked up a total of 92½.

The baby Wolfpack took second with 61½ points while Davidson placed fourth with 9 tallies. Last place Wake Forest only managed 8 points. Most of the races were closer than the score indicates with first place being hotly contended.

This ends the season for the frosh. Their record stands at three wins and four losses in dual meet competition.

Frosh Baseballers End Home Season

The Blue and White frosh baseballers will play their last home game today when they meet the baby Deacs from Wake Forest on Emerson Field at 4 o'clock. Pitch Paschal is slated to go to the mound for Carolina while Overman will attend to the chores behind the plate.

This will be the twelfth start for the Tar Babies; their season's record stands at eight won, two lost and one tied. In Big Four play they hold a better record than their varsity brothers having downed Wake Forest twice, tied Duke once and beaten them twice, but they have dropped two decisions to the Wolfpack.

Theta Chi Men Will Reactivate Local Chapter

Following an informal banquet at the Carolina Inn Monday night, the Alpha Eta chapter of Theta Chi national social fraternity was reactivated with 23 members after being inactive on campus for 10 years.

Special guests at the banquet, which featured as decorations the traditional red carnation of the Theta Chi fraternity, were Dr. Samuel Hobbs, professor in the University's sociology department, George Chapman, national executive secretary of the fraternity, and a delegation from the Duke and Wake Forest chapters of Theta Chi. Dr. Hobbs was a faculty advisor to the fraternity before it was deactivated in 1939.

The installation service, which concluded the evening's entertainment, was conducted by the delegation from Wake Forest and Duke, assisted by Chapman.

Theta Chi members on campus are: Ralph H. Bowen, William A. Buchan, Glenn B. Bailey, William F. Brock, James A. Croom, William B. Cregan, Drew Colbard, William B. Duke, J. Ray Edmundson, John D. Eason.

Thomas R. Hall, Wiley Hall, Lotes L. Holmes, William J. Lee, James C. Montgomery, Clarence E. Pickard, Henry E. Phelps, Waster A. Spibey, Robert Walsh, William Wheeler, Wallace Warren, Earl Warren, and Arthur Xanthos.

A meeting of the fraternity will take place tonight to elect additional officers, Bill Wheeler, newly elected president said. Other officers are: James Montgomery, vice-president, and John Eason, secretary.

ADPi's Mark Day At Gala Banquet

The Carolina chapter of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority held its annual Black Diamond Founder's Day Banquet in the ballroom of the Carolina Inn Monday night, celebrating the 98th anniversary of the founding of the original ADPi chapter. The first chapter was founded at Wesleyan College May 15, 1851.

The celebration, which especially honored seniors in the sorority, included a talk by Patricia Denning on ADPi traditions and toasts made by the newly elected officers to the outgoing executives.

Decorations for the entertainment followed the traditional ADPi theme with the candles and greenery on the tables arranged in the diamond-shaped sorority symbol.

Following the presentation of gifts to Catherine McMillan, outgoing president, Miss Olivia Rambow, sorority housemother, and patronnesses, the celebration concluded with the singing of sorority songs.

fenses. If someone gets kicked out of school, there may be a big fuss, for having only one body to try the case removes the appellate power which students enjoy during the regular year. The only body which a student could appeal his case to would be back to the same governing committee or to a faculty committee.

There have been charges that the committee has almost dictatorial powers and that it deprives the school of the traditional "checks and balances" system. On the other hand, no one really thinks the committee will pull some "coup de etat" and in fact there is very little business for the government over the summer. Then too, it is well nigh impossible to get enough experienced men to continue the legislature and all the other committees over the summer.

From a practical point of view, the committee idea might well be the most efficient plan. But there also many virtues in continuing the regular government system, which includes an honor council and a student council to which one can appeal decisions.

The Daily Tar Heel will not attempt to take a stand on which system is the superior, but two things should be apparent to all. (1) Some action should have been taken on summer school government before the final session, and there should have been more discussion of the implications of the new plan. (2) The constitution should have been amended in the recent elections so as to provide a legal setup for summer school government.

SELECTIVE STERILIZATION

WHY IS IT NEEDED?

The responsibility of parenthood requires a sound mind and a healthy body. Even though some children born to mental defectives may possess normal minds, they are seldom given the training needed to produce well balanced adults who will be an asset to the community.

Morons are now doubling their number with each generation; over half the hospital beds in this country are occupied by mentally ill or mentally defective patients, and overcrowded institutions cannot begin to accommodate their increasing numbers. (In Connecticut 1500 mental patients produced 498 defective children while they were awaiting admission to state institutions.)

In 1930 the White House Conference on Child Health pointed out: "There should be no child in America that does not have the complete birthright of a sound mind in a sound body, and that has not been born under proper conditions."

Selective sterilization can help to attain this goal.

WHEN SHOULD IT BE USED?

- Whenever lifelong protection from parenthood is needed;
- Whenever mothers need permanent protection from a pregnancy which would be fatal;
- When children must be shielded from being born to a heritage of insanity or feeblemindedness;
- When defenseless children must be saved the suffering and unhappiness of being brought up by an insane or feebleminded parent.

WHAT EFFECT DOES IT HAVE?

The person sterilized, whether man or woman, can detect no effect except that children are not born. The sexual characteristics remain unchanged. Sterilization permits many persons with mental deficiency to live outside of institutions, to enjoy a measure of independence, and to marry without the psychological and economic overload of parenthood and child care.

Studies in California, New Hampshire and elsewhere have shown that sterilization does not increase sexual delinquency.

The effect on the community is far reaching: Sterilization reduces the number who must live in our overcrowded, understaffed institutions; it decreases the number of children who must be taken from insane or feebleminded parents to be raised in foster homes at public expense; it protects the next generation from a needless and tragic heritage.

HOW IS IT PERFORMED?

Sterilization in both men and women is performed by tubectomy — the closing of the tiny tubes through which the life-producing cells must pass in order to unite. Nothing is removed from the body.

The male operation—vasectomy—is extremely simple and can be performed under local anesthetic in a doctor's office in ten minutes or less.

Sterilization in women — salpingectomy — requires an abdominal incision not more than two inches long. The ovaries are not disturbed and menstruation continues normally.

The risk in either operation is slight, there is no mutilation and the individual's emotional life is in no way altered. There is no change in physical appearance nor in voice tone.

WHERE IS IT LEGAL?

Sterilization is legal in all states. Twenty-seven progressive states and Puerto Rico provide for the sterilization at state expense of persons suffering from insanity or feeblemindedness which may be inherited by their children. These states are:

Arizona	Kansas	Nebraska	South Carolina
California	Michigan	New Hampshire	South Dakota
Delaware	Maine	North Carolina	Utah
Georgia	Minnesota	North Dakota	Vermont
Idaho	Mississippi	Oklahoma	Virginia
Iowa	Montana	Oregon	West Virginia
			Wisconsin

Other countries which provide for the sterilization of the mentally defective are: Canada, Denmark, Finland, Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland.

WHO MAKES THE DECISION?

Each individual need for this operation at state expense is carefully reviewed by a state board of medical and sociological experts and the consent of the patient or the patient's family is sought. If not satisfied with the board's decision, the patient may carry the matter to the civil courts. Such legal action is seldom taken, however, as the protection is almost always welcomed by those immediately concerned.

It has been argued that legal sterilization might be abused and become a political instrument. The same objection can be applied to almost every legal regulation. Even prison parole, tax levies and school boards can be abused, but it is not suggested that these beneficial agencies be abolished because they can be occasionally misused. 50,193 sterilizations have been reported by state institutions in the 27 states without indication of abuse, 2,152 in North Carolina.

CHARLIE BARNET

Spring Germans Open On Friday Night In Gym

Charlie Barnet Will Provide Music For Two Dances, Saturday Concert

With the exciting new band of Charlie Barnet slated to play for two dances and a concert, the German Club is presenting its annual Spring Germans on Friday and Saturday in what promises to be one of the year's best weekends.

Barnet will play from nine to one on Friday, eight to twelve on Saturday and will present his long awaited concert from three to five on Saturday afternoon.

This will be the third and last of the quarterly affairs sponsored by the German Club which this year has previously brought the bands of Elliot Lawrence and Tommy Dorsey to the campus.

Having recently played dates at Washington and Lee, North Carolina State and Cornell, the Barnet band has become one of the most popular college "prom bands" in the country. The likeable leader has built up a versatile organization which is capable of playing both sweet and swing.

Barnet in a statement to Metronome Magazine recently declared his intention of not becoming a "typed" band. His library of arrangements includes both progressive jazz and the smooth dance music for which he became famous.

Probably the most outstanding musician in the new band is dynamic Eddie Safranski who has been selected top bassman in the country in the Metronome and Downbeat Magazine All Star Polls.

Safranski's powerful bass figures have formerly been the driving force behind the bands of Hal McIntyre and Stan Kenton. His own arrangement of his famous recording "Safranski" will be a feature of the two hour concert. Drummer Cliff Leeman and Trumpeter Doc Severenson will also be spotlighted.

The Ellington-like style for which Charlie Barnet was renowned has been replaced to a large extent by his modern dance arrangemnets. Dave Matthews, Ralph Burns, and Jerry Gray have given new twists to Barnet perennials like "Cherokee," "Pompton Turnpike," "Redskin Rhumba" and "Night and Day." As a result the band is the most well-rounded of all of his bands and is setting records in attendance at theatres and hotels throughout the country.

Band to Turn In Uniforms at Hill

All Band members not participating in the Commencement Band should turn in their uniforms immediately to Hill Z, as announced by Director Earl Slocum yesterday.

The Band Concert to be presented this Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock on the lawn will be conducted by Director Slocum. In case of rain, the concert will be held in Hill Hall.

Dean, Smythe Assume Stand On Fellowship

Promise to Keep Reds Off Grants

WASHINGTON, May 18.—(UP)—Two members-designate of the Atomic Energy Commission promised Senate investigators today that they will try to prevent any more research fellowships going to Communists.

Gordon Dean and Dr. Henry Dewolf Smythe, who have been nominated by President Truman to fill vacancies on the five-member commission, took that stand in testimony before Senate members of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee.

The full committee heard Hans Freistadt, Communist student who was awarded a commission fellowship for non-secret physics research at the University of North Carolina, testify that he would not fight "if we attack Russia." But he said he would defend this country if Russia does the attacking.

The views expressed by Dean and Smyth appeared to indicate Freistadt's $1,600 grant may be withdrawn. Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) chairman of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee which votes Atomic Commission funds, already has served notice Freistadt or any other Communist.

Dean, former Justice Department attorney, told the Senators he believes the atomic program has been "set back" by the award of a fellowship to Freistadt, and "I see no reason why we should have a Freistadt case arise again."

Smyth, chairman of the Physics Department at Princeton University and author of the famed "Smyth Report" on the atomic bomb, put his feelings in these words:

"I feel that membership in the Communist Party indicates at best a fuzziness of mind, a lack of mental maturity, and at worst a loyalty to another government.

"I therefore feel that you are taking more than a little chance of educating a traitor if you undertake to educate a member of the Communist party."

He said he would not like to see the government embark on a program of loyalty investigations of all persons studying non-secret phases of science but that he would not object to requiring fellowship applicants to swear that they are not members of a subversive organization.

Fall Preregistration Will Close Saturday

All students who are not planning to attend summer school must preregister for the fall quarter by noontime Saturday, May 21 the Registration Office announced yesterday.

SAMUEL ANDREW

Sam Andrew Will Present Piano Recital

In his senior piano recital this evening at 8:30 in Hill Hall, Samuel Andrew, music major from Albemarle, will feature "Chaconne" (arranged for the left hand), Bach-Brahms; "Sonata in C Major," Beethoven; and "Three Preludes," Gershwin. For the past four years he has studied with Dr. Schinhan of the Music Department.

In high school Andrew was awarded Collegiate Diploma and Young Artist Diploma by National Guild of Piano Teachers. In 1940, he won the title of State High School Typing Champion and ranked third in the nation. The same year he was captain of Albemarle American Legion Junior baseball team that won the National Championship. In 1943-44 he was awarded the Kay Kyser Scholarship in music at the University.

Early Rush Gets 1,500 Yearbooks

Over 1,500 Yackety Yacks passed over the counter yesterday as students flocked to the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial for their yearbooks.

Yack Editor Bill Duncan yesterday advised students to come early today if they wish to get their copies this week. There will be no more Yacks after this supply is exhausted until next week sometime when the remainder of the shipment will arrive in Chapel Hill, he said.

Yack representatives will be in the Horace Williams Lounge again today from 2 o'clock to 5 o'clock, and every day except Saturday and Sunday until the present supply is distributed.

LATE NEWS BULLETIN

J. R. Cherry, Jr., veteran student and resident of Victory Village, admitted last night that he had caused the atomic scholarship storm in Washington by tipping off Sen. Clyde R. Hoey (D.—N.C.) that Hans Freistadt had been awarded a fellowship by the Atomic Energy Commission.

Hoey said he was told of Freistadt's award by a "fine, patriotic North Carolina GI student," but did not identify Cherry on the floor of Congress. In a letter to Cherry, Hoey complimented him for "rendering a fine service to the country by notifying me of the affair."

Cherry said he did not think of whether the publicity he would cause would hurt the University or not. "I placed the safety of the country before all else," he explained.

Students Are Sought For Orientation Job

An open meeting for applicants to fill the 75 positions as orientation counselors will be held in the student government offices on the second floor of Graham Memorial Thursday night from 7:30 until 10:30, and Sunday night from 8:30 until all interested students have been interviewed.

The announcement, made by Charleen Greer, Clerk of the Campus Orientation Committee, asked all students who will be in school next fall and who are willing to return to Chapel Hill one week early to apply for the responsible positions. Those with past experience are particularly encouraged to apply, but experience is not necessary. A large number of those who will fill the positions will probably be unfamiliar with the duties of a counselor, and a class will be held to familarize them with the post.

The Orientation Committee, which will make the selections, has requested that as many of the applicants as possible be present at the Thursday night meeting so as to give the Committee more time to consider the applications.

North Carolina Symphony Will Give Concert Tonight

Dr. Benjamin Swalin, Director of the North Carolina Symphony, has chosen a different and refreshing program of music for the "pops" concert the Orchestra will play in Memorial Hall tonight.

In the music to be presented, there is a definite theme of lightness and modernity, characteristic of popular concerts. The program will open at 8:30 with a rousing Sousa march, "Stars and Stripes Forever," followed by the First Movement of Shuman's Symphony No. 1. Familiarly known as the "Spring" Symphony, it was sketched in four days in January in 1841. The following March it was given its premiere in Leipzig with Mendelssohn conducting.

The string section of the Orchestra will be featured in the third composition of the evening, "On the Trail" from The Grand Canyon Suite. Another popular favorite on the program will be "Clair de Lune," Debussy's romantic work, written while he was a student in Paris. Also included on the program will be "The Worried Drummer" by Schreiner.

A clear trumpet passage will introduce Berlioz' Hungarian March. Berlioz built this march on an old national tune of Hungary. The old tune was said to have been written by a gypsy in honor of a prominent Hungarian family which had defended the land against the Turks. Since its first performance, this march has been a favorite with audiences.

Following the intermission the program will continue with the gay and lilting Overture to the Gypsy Baron by Strauss. A modern work, "Saturday Night" by Sanders will follow the Strauss selection. Mr. Sanders is Dean of the Department of Music at Indiana University.

An old English folk melody, "Greensleeves" will feature the harp on the "pops" concert program. The folk song has been arranged and amplified for symphony orchestra by the English composer, Vaughan Williams.

Robert Russell Bennett, the arranger of the music for the current musical hit, "Kiss Me, Kate," did the orchestra arranging for Joseph Daly's "Chicken Reel."

Following "Chicken Reel," the Orchestra will play Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine." The program will conclude with Polovetzian Dances, from Prince Igor, by Borodin.

Interdorm Council Re-elects Three

Sid Turner, Harry Aycock, and Al House were elected hold-over members of the Men's Interdormitory Council for the school year of 1949-50, at Monday night's meeting.

The three men are presidents of Manly, "C", and Alexander dormitories respectively. Their election followed the adoption of a constitutional amendment by the student body in the Spring elections.

Aycock and House have served on the Interdormitory council all year. Aycock recently succeeded Frank Kilpatrick as secretary of the Council, and House is a member of the committee which has attempted to secure greater interest in intramurals in cooperation with the Gym's intramural staff. Turner has served on the council since the beginning of this term and succeeded Bob Birer as president of Manly.

The Interdormitory council also passed an election bill which provides for the election of all dormitory officers on Ocotber 3.

PAUL YOUNG

Young Quits To Take Job At Illinois U.

Glee Clubs Head To Leave in June

Paul Young resigned yesterday as chairman of vocal instruction and director of the Combined University Glee Clubs to accept a position as professor of music and director of choral activities at the University of Illinois.

No successor has been considered and it may be several weeks before one is chosen it was learned. Young will assume his new duties in September, and will leave here in June.

The possibility of canceling a proposed Carnegie Hall concert during the Notre Dame weekend next November was discussed for one hour at a meeting of the Men's Glee Club in Hill Hall late yesterday afternoon.

A straw vote heavily favored dropping any plans for a New York concert, but a final vote will not be taken until Monday afternoon. The Women's Glee Club will vote on the matter this afternoon at 5 o'clock. Young said whether the trip is made or not rests entirely with the Combined Glee Clubs.

Young said, "Mrs. Young and I are reluctant to leave Chapel Hill since it has been such a pleasant and profitable period here. I appreciate the many expressions of loyalty, friendship and good will that has been expressed concerning our leaving."

Weaver to Speak At Coed Meeting

The final meeting in the coed student adviser training program will be held tonight in room 207 Phillips Hall, Chairman Charleen Greer announced yesterday.

Dean of Men Fred Weaver will speak to the group, and discussion of the adviser's activities will be led by Miss Greer. Such topics as how the advisees are to be met, the scheduling of information booths at the bus station and the dormitories, and the program for Orientation week will be discussed.

Next year's program for entering students, Miss Greer said, will be a coordinated effort betwen men's and women's groups.

Murphy Elected President of SDA

Dick Murphy, rising senior from Baltimore, Maryland, was elected President of the Students For Democratic Action Tuesday night. Murphy succeeds Bob Lindsay as chairman of the junior ADA group on the campus.

Other officers elected to the slate for the coming year include Dewey Hinkle, vice-president; Nat Magruder, Secretary; and John Harris, Treasurer.

The members elected at large to the steering committee were Bob Hennessee, Jack McCall, and Harry Sherrill.

Commie Says Will Defend United States

David E. Lilienthal Challenges Policy

WASHINGTON, May 18.—(UP)—Hans Freistadt, Communist student who was awarded a government research fellowship, told Congressional investigators today he would not fight if "we attack Russia" but would defend this country if Russia does the attacking.

He testified before the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee which is investigating the $1,600 grant he received from the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission to finance postgraduate studies in non-secret phases of nuclear physics at the University of North Carolina.

Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) announced meanwhile that he will try to see to it that no public money is spent to educate Freistadt or any other Communist. He heads a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee which will meet tomorrow to pass on the Atomic Commission's operating funds for the coming fiscal year.

Commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal referred to the controversy indirectly tonight in a speech to the American Booksellers Association. He said scientific progress would be hamstrung in this country, as it has been in Russia, if Americans permit fear of Communism to stampede them into extending "political and bureaucratic domination" into non-secret fields of education.

Freistadt, a slightly-built, curly-haired youth of 23 who was born in Austria and came to this country in 1941, testified that he considers himself a loyal American. He said he "would not be a member" of the Communist Party if he believed it planned to overthrow the U. S. government by force.

He said he hopes to repay this country with "scientific contributions" for the benefits it has given him, but emphasized that he would not use his scientific training to work on "aggressive weapons."

Freistadt was invited to appear before the commitee after members of Congress demanded to know why the government was financing a fellowship for a Communist.

Rep. Charles H. Elston (R-O.) asked Freistadt if he would be willing to work on weapons if this country "needed your aid in its defense."

"In defense of my country's security, I would do that," he replied.

"What position would you take in event this country went to war with Russia?" Elston contin-

A unique Carolina version of the Gold Rush of '49 will begin today as 49-ers and their dates make their way to Hogan's Lake for the Senior class picnic.

Senior activities will continue tomorrow with the traditional Barefoot Day, when all 49-ers will attend classes sans shoes. Final social activity planned by the class committee is the dance June 4 in Woollen Gymnasium.

Trucks will leave the Y court at 4:30 and at 5 o'clock this afternoon for those desiring transportation to the Hogan picnic Swimming and games will provide the afternoon entertainment, with the Bull City Night Hawks scheduled to play from 6:30 to 10:30 in the evening. Food and entertainment are provided by class funds.

In case of rain the picnic will be held in the Tin Can, beginning with supper at 6 o'clock, followed by dancing to the music of the Night Hawks.

Paintings Displayed Here

Artist Joseph Albers Most Happy When Color Acts Against Its Will

"I am most happy when I make color act against its will," said Josef Albers, German born painter and teacher of art at Black Mountain College, whose exhibit of abstract paintings is on display here at Person Hall Art Gallery until May 22.

Albers came to Black Mountain College in 1933 as the first Bauhaus teacher in America having taught at the Bauhaus in Wimar, Dessau and Berlin for ten years. He studied art at the Royal Art School, Berlin; Applied Art School, Essen; Academy, Munich and Bauhaus in Wimar. He was born in the industrial Rhur district of Germany at Westphalia.

He has given courses and lectures in this country at Harvard University, the Museum of Modern Art in New York and other universities and schools.

In the past 12 years he has held 60 one-man exhibitions and his work has been widely exhibited in Europe and the Americas. He has held exhibitions in Germany, Holland, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia, Italy, France, England, United States, Cuba, Mexico, Brazil and Canada.

The exhibits of his work on display here were taken from his shows in the Janus and Egan galleries in New York City. The paintings in the latter exhibit were all in black and white.

"I make a difference between self-discipline and self-expressions," he says, "In my paintings I adhere to what in other arts is considered a matter of course. Namely, that performance is prepared by rehearsal, that exercise precedes recital, or plans or execution. It is still a good habit in music and dance and the theater, in architecture or typography. It remains a good procedure in sculpture. And it was a rule with the old masters of painting."

Josef Albers is leaving Black Mountain College this summer for a trip into Mexico. His exhibit will remain here on display until the exhibition of University student paintings goes on display May 22.

Importance of Orientation Committee

Among the most important activities of the school year are those of the Orientation Committee, which each fall undertakes the difficult job of acquainting the incoming freshmen with life at Carolina, school traditions, and customs. Al Lowenstein, who will head this committee next fall, yesterday issued a call for students to apply for the various counsellor positions which must be filled in order to carry out the program. The Orientation Committee will meet tonight and Sunday night in the Student Government offices for the purpose of interviewing candidates for these jobs.

This year applications for the counsellor jobs are not being limited to those persons recommended by the Orientation Committee. Chairman Lowenstein emphasized that he was interested in persons who "are genuinely friendly and interested in getting Carolina ideals over to the inment always proves helpful to an orientation counsellor, Lowenstein pointed out that "detailed knowledge is not as important as character."

Being a member of the Orientation Committee is a real honor, and the counsellors can have the satisfaction of knowing that their work is directly contributing to the welfare of the University. The honor does not come without work. Each counsellor will have to return to school about a week early and will attend a class refreshing them on the various student activities.

No matter how well-planned the orientation program may be, in the final analysis it is the counsellors who determine its effectiveness. If you think you have the ability to instruct a group of freshmen in University traditions, then by all means attend the interview tonight. The committee must get capable counsellors.

On Dorm Social Fees

If everything goes according to plan, it is almost assured that residents of the men's dormitories will have an additional fifty cents attached to their room bills next year to cover the cost of the Interdormiory Council's proposed social program.

The matter has been turned over to Dean of Men Bill Friday and if he approves of the plan, as he is expected to do, it will be sent along to Dean of Students Weaver and Chancellor House for their approval. If they give the green light to the program, then the extra assessment will be ordered. Approval is expected since a majority of the dorm residents signed petitions favoring the plan.

According to the IDC's plan half of the expected four thousand to forty-five hundred dollars to be collected, will remain in the dormitories to be used as each dorm sees fit. The remaining funds will be controlled by the IDC and it will be used for dances and other social functions for dormitory men.

This fee is nothing new as the assessment was standard procedure until it was suspended temporarily by Dean of Men Bradshaw in 1943 and was never reestablished. The reason for dropping the fee at that time was because of the large number of Navy students living in dorms.

Much of the credit for any success which comes to the IDC plan should go to Pete Gerns, energetic president of the IDC, who has spent long hours working with this plan.—F.A.

Letters to the Editor Policy

In order to make the Letters to the Editor column as representative of the student body as possible, to make it as fair as possible to all concerned, and to aid the staff and the printers, a definite policy for the column has been decided upon. Anyone who is interested in writing letters to this column should pay close attention to the policy stated below.

First, no letter will be accepted for publication unless it bears the signature and address of the author. No names will be withheld by request unless the letter contains information of a nature to bring harm to the writer if his name were known. Letters criticizing individuals must be signed. If someone is criticized, he certainly deserves the right to know who is doing it.

All letters sent in for publication must be typewritten and double spaced. This will prevent any mistakes possibly made in copying the letter, as some handwritings can be very hard to decipher. Many times, also, members of the staff do not have the time to stop their other work to copy the letter, and it must be typewritten and double spaced before it goes to the printer.

Lastly, letters sent in for publication must not exceed 300 words. If any letters are printed that go over this word limit, the Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to edit them for publication; however, the editors can disregard any letters that exceed this length if they choose. It is the object of the column to represent as many as possible, and letters of excessive length prohibit the printing of other letters, since space is limited, until they are out of date and have to be discarded.

The WASHINGTON SCENE

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 18—I had a long, revealing, talk with Mr. David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, today and came to the conclusion that if Congress does not adjourn by midnight of June 30 we are going to have some badly squashed congressmen.

On the morning of July 1, no matter what the legislative situation, workmen are going to begin tearing up the House and Senate chambers, and if any senators or representatives are still loitering around they're going to get torn up too.

Mr. Lynn declared that the work of remodeling the two chambers so that they will no longer look like wells for dry porpoises will begin on schedule—whether Congress is ready to vacate or not. The job is expected to be finished by about Dec. 15.

In the likely event that the legislators will still be legislating on July 1 they will have to find other debating chambers—and there aren't many large enough in the Capitol.

The Senate hasn't yet made up its mind whether to use the caucus room in the Senate Office Building or the old Supreme Court chamber in the Capitol. The House is undecided whether to use its caucus room or the quarters of the ways and means committee.

Unable to obtain a satisfactory answer, Architect Lynn has gone ahead with tentative plans to move the Senate to its caucus room, and the House to the ways and means committee.

There being only 96 senators it won't be too great a problem getting them seated, although it will leave little room for CIO lobbyists, admiring visitors from the home states, and the recording angels—ahem!—of the press. And if the newspapermen can't get in, the average senator won't feel it is worth his while to talk.

The tough problem is going to be in the House. Architect Lynn has got to find squatting space for 435 representatives in a room that never squatted much more than half that many before. The fellow with the mace is going to have to hold it high over his head, or somebody is going to get painfully prodded.

The floor of the House is 116 x 67 feet, or 7,772 square feet. The ways and means committee room is only 68 x 77 feet, or 5,236 square feet. This means the representatives will have 2,536 less feet of floor space.

Satterfield, Others

By "Wink" Locklair

John R. Satterfield of Spencer is currently rounding out his first decade as a combination student, musician, orchestra leader, arranger and composer in the University of North Carolina!

"I've been around here longer than The Old Well," he said, easing himself into a chair as we were beginning to have lunch in the Monogram Club one afternoon this week. "I came to Chapel Hill from Danville, Virginia, when I was fourteen years old. Taking a post-graduate course in High School.

"Charlie Wood had a band here and he let me sit in with him one night. I liked it fine. After I got back to Danville, Charlie sent me a wire saying I could have a job if I wanted one. I wanted it, so I came back and enrolled in the University," the popular maestro recalled.

Mr. Satterfield went on to say that Wood had an automobile accident in 1940 and sold the thirteen-piece band to him. "Those were some days. Four dollars a night for local dances, five dollars a night for out-of-town dates," he said.

In 1942 Mr. Satterfield joined the Army where he remained three years, and in September, 1947, formed the present eighteen-piece outfit which gave such an enjoyable concert in Memorial Hall last Sunday evening.

There are many people on campus and in this area who consider the Satterfield orchestra the best in these parts. And we believe there are several feasible arguments to substantiate those claims. First, about one-third of the group is majoring in music, including leader Satterfield, who plays piano and is also studying trumpet with Hubert Henderson.

Second, a good percentage of the band's members had the opportunity to study their instruments under Mr. Hazelman at Greensboro High School. He is an exceptionally thorough instructor and if anyone has even a smattering of talent, Hazelman will see that his pupils develop it properly. Third, the vocals are safely entrusted to the good hands, voice and appearance of a very attractive young lady named Ruth Justice, who has been singing with the band since last January.

And fourth, the Satterfield crew seems to be blessed with a half-dozen men who can write imaginative, intelligent music for a modern dance orchestra, as well as arrange other compositions in new and original settings. Examples of this gift were demonstrated Sunday evening when the entire first half of the program was made up of new music written by and for the orchestra personnel.

As a matter of fact the director's five-part Catawba Rhapsody (named for that county in North Carolina) has been in the works for six years, since the first sketches were made in 1943. Most of the melodies for the Rhapsody were completed in 1944, but he re-orchestrated some parts, and the Chorale, which he originally intended for the entire group, is now heard as an effective piano solo. Music by Sam Andrews, Carolyn Satterfield, Tom Allred and Frank Justice was warmly received by the audience.

Tonight the band is completing a two-day engagement at the State Shriners Convention in Raleigh. Since most of the outfit plans to go to summer school here—Mr. Satterfield is going to get a degree at the end of the second session in August—they will be filling local dates as well as several already scheduled for nearby resorts.

During our conversation, Mr. Satterfield told us that of all the many enjoyable engagements the band had played, he thought a Christmas dance at Virginia Intermont, a small girls school, was best. After he gets his degree in August, he will begin advanced study in music here. The band will lose no one at graduation and the same boys will be back again in the fall.

DAVID McADAMS and WILLIAM TRITT two violinists, gave a joint recital Tuesday evening in Hill Hall which was well worth attending. The opening number, Bach's Concerto for Two Violins, has since 1941, received added popularity through its use as music for a ballet George Balanchine choreographed called Concerto Barocco. It was last seen around here when given at Duke University by the Ballet Russe with Ruthanna Boris and Marie-Jeanne in the leading roles.

The Largo movement of the concerto is considered one of Bach's most perfect themes, and he concludes the piece with a vigorous finale. Mr. Tritt, accompanied by Barbara Tritt, played Mozart's Sonata in B Flat Major and the brisk final movement of Mendelssohn's violin concerto. Mr. Tritt is a very conscientious young man who plays his instrument with a great deal of physical movement and motion. He did a particularly fine job in the final bars of the concerto.

For his solos, Mr. McAdams played the B Major Sonata by Brahms, and the Simchas Torah section of Baal Shem (three pictures of Chassidic life) by the Swiss composer who now lives in this country, Ernest Bloch.

Great Weekend Coming

By Bob Sturdivant

This week-end should be a great one for those of us who are inclined toward recreation at its dead level best. As a matter of fact, what with the Germans and all coming up, it will probably prove to be more fun than chasing communists even. The University Club has arranged a fitting climax to the festivities in the person of one Jimmy Capps who will Emcee a record show from the porch of Graham Memorial come nine o'clock Sunday.

The show is scheduled to last a couple of hours, and it will be modeled after Capps' popular program, "Our Best to You," which is aired over WPTF nightly. Requests and all the trimmiings will be in vogue, All in all, it looks like swell medicine for those Sunday night blues which invariably follow ye olde week-end. Y'es go, chillun!

The administration has just come forth with a new booklet on rules to be observed over the coming week-end, or so we were led to understand by a friend who has an "in" with a fearless student government leader who has an "in" with someone in venerable old South. According to nameless here for evermore, the little fun-chaser can be broken down into the following parts:

(1) Do not offer the fraternity president more than two drinks in the course of the evening.

(2) Refrain from putting old beer cans in Eddie Safransky's bass.

(3) Do not offer the fraternity president more than six drinks in the course of the evening.

(4) Avoid hawking your big brothers date. It may be his little sister.

(5) Do not throw golf balls at the Indians.

(6) Do not offer the fraternity president more than two fifths in the course of the evening.

The administration tells that if everyone follows these rules to the letter, much confusion and immorality can be avoided. Your cooperation is solicited.

With all the recent comment pro and con on the Atomic Energy Commission and so forth, we feel that a real problem is being lost sight of entirely. Therefore, it is our intention to inform certain seemingly interested persons that some of the boys are still going to classes in T-shirts. We feel that this matter should be cleared up before everyone goes off half-cocked in search of the reds. First things first, we always say.

Congratulations are in order for the members of the mock assembly held over in Rawlee a few days past. It's too bad that the state legislature can't pass much-needed legislation in the three months that they spend bickering back and forth; student counterparts manage to do it in a very few days. Leads one to contemplate on the advisability of allowing students to run things for keeps over on the the government's hill.

Orchids, also, to the Satterfield band and Graham Memorial for a great concert last Sunday night. It's too bad that we only have one of these per year. Thanks go to Graham Memorial for helping fill the breach that has developed in student entertainment. Heaven knows, somebody oughta!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OMITTED PARAGRAPH

Editor:

In my letter to the editor of 14 May there was included a paragraph which I noticed in the Daily Tar Heel of 17 May was either inadvertently or purposefully deleted as printed. Since I consider that paragraph essential to correct connotation of the theme of the letter, I add it here and should like to have it made clear that the paragraph was part of the original letter:

It read, after the sentence, "Frankly, there is no question in my mind of Freistadt's loyalty to his country:"

"From my limited association with him, I have become convinced that his ideas on socialism and communism are sincere and meant for the welfare of the United States. With many of his beliefs I disagree completely. My disagreement, however, or the disagreement of millions of our people, is not warrant for outlawing his right to believe."

I would appreciate it if this correction were made. Thank you very much.

J Hopkins

(Editor's note: Your paragraph was cut because the letter was too long for the space available. There was no reason that this particular paragraph was cut.)

THOUGHT CONTROL

Editor:

I should like to make two points with regard to your "Freistadt" editorial of last Thursday.

First, you admit that you had heard of the scholarship, but had "neglected to investigate the matter," waiting until it was revealed by Fulton Lewis, Jr. We must infer from this that you cannot judge what is newsworthy and that you must rely on a commentator who is a bitter enemy of former President Graham and has slandered him time after time for upholding free speech on this campus.

Second, you state that it doesn't matter to you whether Mr. Freistadt has a card in the Communist Party or not. "The opinions he espouses are enough to type him. He has all the earmarks of a Communist." In other words, whether a person says he is a Communist or not means nothing to you. You blasted Mr. Freistadt for having the "earmarks" of one, and thus you set yourself up as a judge to determine who is and who is not a Communist.

This means that from now on every critic of American foreign policy, every upholder of the civil rights of Communists, every person who speaks for peace with the Soviet Union must live in fear of an "expose" by you as having certain "earmarks." The effect of this campaign of judgment by editorial can only be to intimidate into silence a few more people who for one reason or another disagree with the present policies of our government.

You, Mr. Editor, have contributed your bit to the establishment of thought control in America.

John V. Myers

LOYALTY

Editor:

There has been much discussion about what constitute loyalty to our country. In an effort to show how difficult the question is, I would like to submit nine controversial questions any one of which, when discussed by two people, might lead each to suspect the loyalty of the other.

An examination of these problems should show that America means many different things to different people and that two people of very opposite views can be loyal to their respective views of America.

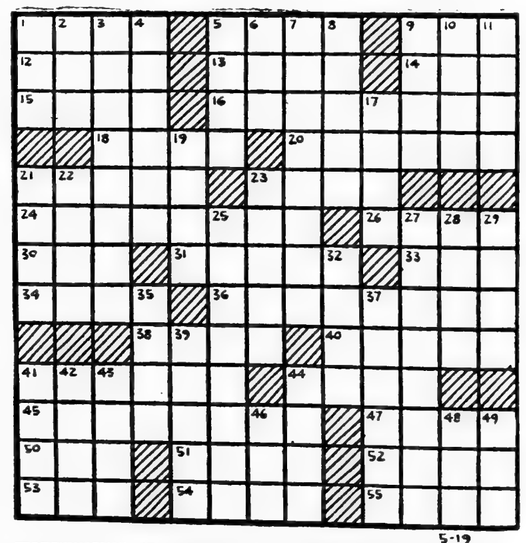
1) Should the Federal government under any circumstance give unsolicited aid to a State in the enforcement of the common law?

2) Is it possible to pursue a just policy of "separate but equal" in matters concerning racial minorities?

3) Are the words inscribed on the Statue of Liberty out of date?

4) Are there any circumstances in which the government has the right to deny the right to strike to the worker?

5) Does loyalty mean "my country, right or wrong?"



6) Is it disloyal to denounce American foreign policy at an international meeting?

7) Should America turn over atomic and other military secrets to the United Nations?

8) Should American capitalists be permitted to sell arms to allies?

9) Should American troops be used to protect allied governments from foreign-inspired insurrections?

Ace Dick Vander Clute Limits Tar Heels to Four Lone Hits

WAKE FOREST, May 18—Wake Forest College showed the style o a championship team here today as they handed the University of North Carolina Tar Heels their fourth straight defeat of the season, 2 to 0. Dick Vander Clute pitched four-hit shutout ball and walke donly one man.

Vander Clute was never in trouble as he successfully stymied an array of potential Big Four batting champions. Rip Ryan, Carolina shortstop, was the only man to reach second against the nifty hurling of Wake Forest's ace right hander.

Ryan got to second on a double in the seventh inning with none on. He was stranded there, however, as Sid Varney and Ed Lamb popped out and Joe Eldridge was out on a grounder. At the time Wake Forest was one small run ahead of the visiting Carolinians.

Wake Forest's Big Four champions touched Carolina hurler Ray Blair for seven hits which payed off with two runs. The first came in the fourth inning when Gene Hooks singled, Charlie Teague popped out to Centerfielder Eldridge, and Joe Fulghum singled, advancing Hooks to second. Paul Livick fanned and Charlie Kersh singled to left. On the play Don Ward muffed the ball, allowing Hooks to score and Kersh to go to second. Wiley Warren walked to put two men on.

Blair settled down and forced Catcher Russ Batchelor to pop up to Third Baseman John Senter for the final out.

Wake's second and final run came in the eighth when with one out Fulghum singled and Livick followed with the same. Kersh collected his second RBI of the day with a bingle, scoring Fulghum. Warren hit to Will Hobbs who threw down to second forcing Kersh. Batchelor ended the inning with a fly ball to left.

Blair pitched a good game, but Wake made every hit count in scoring their 11th Big Four win of the season. In the first three innings he pitched masterfully, allowing only one man to reach first.

The Tar Heels were never able to collect two hits in any one inning and hit only seven balls out of the infield. Vander Clute struck out five in his nine inning appearance. He faced only 30 men during the entire game.

Local Trackmen Still Favored In Loop Meet

Some of the South's most outstanding trackmen will be on hand this weekend for the 25th annual running of the Southern Conference track meet at Fetzer Field.

Although they will be running without the services of ace Bill Albans, the Tar Heels of coach Dale Ranson remain as the odds-on favorites to win the big meet. The Tar Heels won last year and previously copped the 1947 meet when they scored the record-breaking total of 83 points.

The University of Maryland thinclads, second to Carolina last season, are picked to give the locals a large amount of trouble. Coach Jim Kehoe's lads have run up an impressive string of dual meet victories over such teams as Navy and Virginia Tech and recently turned in the top performance in the District of Columbia AAU meet.

Kehoe said at the conclusion of last year's meet that his team would win this year and the other members of the Southern Conference coaching fraternity are not taking his words lightly. Duke, which finished only a few points behind Maryland in '48, is somewhat of a dark horse entry and may cause more trouble than observers are figuring.

Carolina's chances are rated so high because of the immense amount of reserve strength which the local team possesses. That strength was attested to in recent weeks by the overwhelming dual meet victories scored over State, Duke, Virginia and Virginia Tech while running below full strength.

Albans loss, while serious, will not hurt the Tar Heels to the extent that they will be the underdogs. In three of the five events in which Albans had been installed as the favorite, Carolina is expected to move second place men into the top spot.

Stickmen Pick Up Experience For Next Season's Contests

Although many of the players on the lacrosse squad had never seen or participated in a regulation game before this season, the majority of them have taken to this new sport like a fish does to water.

The last game of the 1949 season will be played Saturday against the University of Virginia, but it will be just another dress rehearsal for the Tar Heels, who will be preparing the "new look" for 1950. Many boys on the present team will return next year to attempt to bring the Blue and White into the win column.

Harold Taylor, a sophomore, stands five feet nine inches and weight 165 pounds. He is one of the Tar Heel's leading attackmen and is the second highest scorer with four goals. Hal was injured in the VMI game at Lexington and did not participate in the two following games. His best performance came in the game with the Annapolis Lacrosse Club, when he scored two quick goals.

Kirk Manning, one of the Carolina midfielders, proved to all opponents that he plays hard on both offense and defense. He stands five feet nine inches and weight 150 pounds.

Wildcats Defeat Durham Nine

Coach Bill Grice's Conference-winning Chapel Hill Wildcats swamped Durham County's baseballers, 23-3, yesterday on the losers' diamond.

The local high schoolers wound up their regular season with a record of 13 victories and one tie in North Central Conference play. They meet Kinston's Red Devils tonight at Kinston in the state quarter-finals.

Tom Maultsby hurled five-hit ball for the winners and added a pair of singles to the Wildcat's 17-hit attack. Fenne McGinty had a triple and a single and Ivalee Hill contributed a three bagger to Chapel Hill's stickwork.

The score by innings:

Netters Rolled Up 23 Victories But Lost Loop Crown to W&M

It was a great season that ended on a sour note.

This brief but fitting summary can be perfectly applied to recently completed season of the 1949 edition of Carolina's tennis team and also to the personal antics of the squad's ace, Vic Seixas.

From the last week of March and all through April and the most of May, the rampant Tar Heels, paced by Seixas's own individual conquests, burned up the local and distant collegiate courts by racking up a skein of 23 consecutive victories.

But to the dismay of the local partisans, the charges of Coach John Kenfield didn't have it when they needed it the most. In the last slated contest of the season, the one that decided the Southern Conference net championship, the Tar Heels happened to encounter William and Mary. Every tennis fan knows of the disastrous outcome.

The invaders from Williamsburg, Va. subjected the Tar Heels to a humiliating 8-1 setback and thus captured the conference crown from the defending title-holding Carolina crew and also ruined all Tar Heel aspirations of an all victorious season.

Seixas, the seventh ranking amateur netter in the nation, also met his present master in W&M's gangling ace, Fred Kovaleski. Sixas had gone through the season with an enviable unbeaten record plus the fact of not having lost a single set in match competition but Kovaleski gave the Carolina master a real test in defeating him in the finals of the conference singles tourney and also winning in last Monday's dual match.

In the final tabulations, Carolina's number two man, Clark Taylor, tied Seixas for individual honors, both having won 23 out of 24 outings. Taylor lost early in the season to a Michigan State man but pulled even with Vic by garnering Carolina's only point in the W&M contest by edging the Indian's second man, Howe Atwater.

The remainder of this year's squad all compiled better than average records in the course of the season and with four of the present netters returning for another try next year, mentor Kenfield still retains hopes for another banner year.

Captain-elect Taylor replaces the departing Seixas and Charley Rice, Jim Winstead and Laslie Dameron will move up to fill in the holes left by graduating Stan Gruner and Duke Wilder.—LEW CHAPMAN

Paschal Standout As Freshmen Win Final Home Stand

By Frank Allston, Jr.

The Carolina Freshmen exploded for five runs in the second frame and then coasted to a 14-6 win over the Wake Forest frosh in a wild and wooly game played in Emerson Stadium here yesterday afternoon. Roger Paschal, who allowed the Deacs only seven hits, received credit for the win.

The Carolina frosh were able to garner only eight bingles from the offerings of Deacon hurlers Cal Davis and Jim Young, but eight walks, two hit batsmen, four wild pitches and seven Wake errors made it easy for the locals to cross the plate almost at will.

Paschal was also the hitting star of the game, bashing out three safeties in four trips to the plate. Russell Whiteheart, Tar Baby third sacker, however, drove in five valuable runs, two in the big second inning.

Five of Davis' walks came in that disastrous second stanza and, combined with an error, a pair of wild pitches and Whiteheart's first hit of the game, gave Paschal a much needed margin to work with.

The Deacon yearlings bounced back with a single run in the top of the third, but Carolina added another in their half. In both the fourth and fifth frames, the Tar Babies outscored Wake, 2-1 and added four more in the sixth.

Ed Stacia, who banged out a double and a single in five trips at the plate, was the leading hitter in the Wake lineup. His long double which came in the top of the final inning was the only extra base hit of the game and might have gone for two or three bases had not Carolina right fielder Bill Labert fielded the ball superbly and fired it into third to halt Stacia's homeward advance.

The game might have been closer but for a beautiful running catch which Bob Stewart made of Werner's long drive in the eighth.

'Merchant' to Be Most Lavish Of Outdoor Playmaker Shows

ANNE MARTIN, Cherokee, as Portia, and Hal Shadwell, Wilson, as Bassanio, appearing in Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice" in the Carolina Playmakers' Forest Theatre, Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights, May 20, 21, and 22 at 8:30.

The Carolina Playmakers' production of "The Merchant of Venice" in the Forest Theatre this Friday, Saturday and Sunday will be the most lavish outdoor show yet attempted by the famed drama group.

Directed by Kai Jurgensen, the popular Shakespeare play of love, revenge, and the most famous court scene in the theatre, will be played in flexible settings on three revolving stages designed by Lynn Gault. The costumes are by Irene Smart, and the lighting is under the supervision of James Byrd.

Appearing in the romantic leads are Anne Martin, Cherokee, and Hal Shadwell. Wilson, playing Portia and Bassanio. Anne has been seen this year in a variety of roles, such as Cousin Jo in McLain's "Inherit the Wind," the MacIllwinnen-Lupino musical "Apple Tree Farm," and she worked as costumer and make-up assistant on "The Little Foxes." A graduate student at Carolina, she matriculated at the University of Tennessee and Winthrop College.

Hal Shadwell played Joseph Surface in the Playmaker tour production of "The School For Scandal," and has been appointed graduate assistant technical director with the Dramatic Art Department for next year. He took his undergraduate work at the University of South Carolina, and worked as technical director at the Town Theatre in Columbia, S.C.

John W. Parker, business manager, has urged all those planning to attend the Friday, Saturday or Sunday shows to arrive early enough to find the seats they like since there are no reserved seats in the Forest Theatre productions. If it should rain hard enough to spoil a performance, the play will be presented on the next clear night, Mr. Parker added. Curtain is at 8:30 p. m.

Air ROTC Summer Program Includes 55 UNC Students

With the end of school only eight class days away, 55 students in the Air ROTC unit are hastily preparing to depart for six weeks of summer training at Lowry Field, Colorado, with the United States Air Force.

The course will include training in statistical control and indoctrination of cadets in the routine of regular Air Force procedures.

All students in the Air ROTC program are required to take one six weeks summer training period, usually between their junior and senior years. During the time they are at camp, cadets will receive regular pay and allowances and will participate in actual statistical control operations.

Although the Air Force will provide travel pay for the students, no specified mode of transportation is called for and some of the students are planning to take their cars. Others will employ the favorite method of the majority of Carolina students and hitch-hike.

Marine Recruiting To Close June 1

Recruiting of men students for summer training as prospective Marine Corps officers will be closed on June 1. Major B. W. McLean, Marine Corps, announced today that a recent directive has increased the quota of applicants from the University and that several additional places are still open.

Male students, over 17 and under 25 years of age, in the Freshman and Sophomore classes and in good physical condition are eligible for the two six-week training periods at Quantico, Va., that lead to a commission in the Corps. Interested students are asked to contact Major McLean at the Naval Armory as soon as possible.

WALKOUT FUTILE

WASECA, Minn. (UP)—Frank Speight rolled up 1,252 votes unopposed for justice of the peace but the city council wouldn't declare him elected. It seems there isn't any such office under the city charter. City Attorney Franklin Stone said he'd have to investigate.

SAYS DON'T BURN GRASS

AMHERST, Mass. (UP)—Burning grass is just like sending money up in smoke, according to A. B. Beaumont of the Massachusetts soil conservation service. He estimates that $4 worth of valuable nitrogen is destroyed every time a ton of grass or leaves is burned.

"If, contrary to what I believe, Russia should attack us, I would use all my strength to defend this country," Freistadt replied. "If we attack Russia, I would not fight."

Freistadt said he joined the Communist Club at the University of Chicago shortly after he was discharged from the U. S. Army, as a sergeant, in April, 1946.

He said he was an active and outspoken member of the Communist Club at the University of North Carolina after he transferred there, and that his Communist beliefs must have been known to the two North Carolina faculty members who recommend him for the fellowship.

He identified his sponsors as Dr. Nathan Rosen and Instructor Wayne K. Bowers of the University.

(Candidates for fellowships are actually picked by the National Research Council, a private organization which handles the program for the Atomic Commission. Council Chairman Detlev W. Bronk told the committee yesterday that selections have been made in the past on the basis of recommendations from scientists, with no questions asked about Communist affiliation. He called Freistadt a "poor selection" and promised steps to tighten up selection procedures to screen out Communists in the future.)

Freistadt said he considers his fellowship a "Contract" and argued that "by cancelling it the government would be going back on its word."

He also asserted that "the whole concept of academic freedom" would be threatened if his fellowship is withdrawn "just because I happen to be a Communist."

Freistadt has not yet actually received aid under the fellowship. He will not begin his studies under it until later this year.

First Annual TMA 'Variety Night' Draws 150; Tumblers Take Crown

By Don Maynard

It was variety time in Memorial Hall Monday night for an audience of 150 who were on hand for the premier of the first annual Town Men's Association show, "Variety Night."

The Carolina Tumblers—Bob Hurley, Darrell Byerly and "Razz" Berry—took top honors in the Variety over two other entrants. The Tumblers presented their familiar routine of comedy mixed with acrobatics.

Tri-Delt and PiKA also contributed to the show, each presenting a skit. Tri-Delt presented the Sigma Chi Derby-winning "Sleeping Cutie" and the PiKAs gave a farce entitled "The Night the Ghost Got In."

Judges Lib Stoney, Rendezvous Room Manager; Vestal C. Taylor, Daily Tar Heel columnist, and Mark Barker, President of Sound and Fury, based their selection of the Tumblers as the winning group on the basis of the "best in entertainment value."

Ralph Hebb, newly-elected President of TMA, made the loving cup presentation to the tumblers. Nelson Taylor, past president of the Association, served as master of ceremonies.

"Only one loving cup was presented this year," Taylor said, "but next year we promise that three awards will be made. One will go to the fraternity division, one to sororities and women's dorms, and the third to men's dorms and other non-theater groups.

"This year the participation was small," he continued, "but we didn't anticipate many more entries than we received. We expect that interest will build up. Next year we will hold the Variety Night during the Winter Quarter and hope that participation will be greater and that interest will increase through the years until "Variety Night" becomes an entertainment institution on campus."

TMA entertainer J. C. Jordan appeared between the second and third acts with a "mental telepathy act" in which he named cards as they were picked at random by a member of the audience and held up, their backs to him.

Who are America's Most Successful YOUNG Men?
In anybody's book, one of them is Paul W. Trousdale. Said TIME's issue of December 2, 1946:

With a banker's natural curiosity, old A. P. Giannini wanted to meet the 32-year-old builder who had already borrowed $30 million from his Bank of America, and was now asking for $50 million more. So he made a special trip to Los Angeles, dropped in on Paul W. Trousdale, looked at his past projects and future plans. Banker Giannini's curiosity was apparently satisfied, for last week Trousdale announced that he was getting his $50 million loan.

Past Projects. The record which impressed Banker Giannini: during the war the Paul W. Trousdale Construction Co. had built 3,025 small houses, including seven big housing projects. Now it was hard at work on 2,000 houses for veterans and was turning them out at the rate of ten a day.

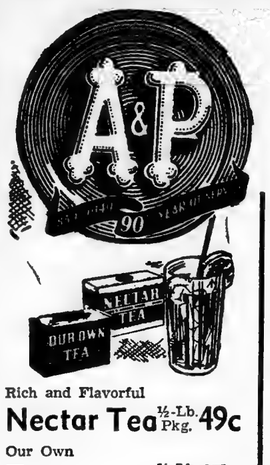
BUILDER TROUSDALE
A.P. took a look.

Paul Trousdale got into the Los Angeles building business by way of the University of Southern California and the ad department of Beech-Nut. After a year as an adman, Trousdale took a $125-a-month timekeeper's job with a local contractor, quit to form his own company with a $10,000 bank loan to finance it.



On each project, he and his stockholders put up the money to cover the cost of real estate, got Bank of America loans to cover all construction costs, had little trouble getting materials by his cash-on-the-line policy. Like most builders he formed a new corporation for each project, dissolved it when the project was finished. Thus his fat profits were taxable at only 25% as capital gains, gave him plenty of capital to expand. In all, he invested some $900,000 in his wartime projects, made another $900,000.

Future Plans. Well heeled at war's end, he decided the time had come to plunge. For this he picked one of the best pieces of undeveloped land in Southern California, a 625-acre tract at Baldwin Hills, a short run from downtown Los Angeles.

Now, with the Bank of America loan, Trousdale plans to build 8,000 rental units on 450 acres of it, along with a 26-acre super-shopping center. Eventually he hopes to build a hundred 13-story apartment houses on the rest of the land.

TIME
Builder Trousdale reads TIME each week —as do more than 1,500,000 other U. S. college graduates who find in TIME the news they can't afford to miss.

Dance Committee Announces Rules

German club dances tonight and tomorrow night and tomorrow afternoon's concert will be governed by Dance Committee rules, it was announced yesterday by committee spokesmen.

Rules for the week end events include:

1. Any girls desiring to leave the dance hall during the evening dance with the intention of returning must be accompanied by a chaperone.

2. All persons showing signs of drunkenness or bringing liquor to the dance will be dealt with at the discretion of the Dance Committee.

3. No smoking or serving of refreshments is allowed on the floor of Woollen Gymnasium.

The committee asked that for both the concert and the dances, students have tickets ready at the door so as to facilitate the work of the doormen.

Neal Patrick, chairman of publications for the committee, announced that a booklet, "So You're Going to a Carolina Dance," is now available for imports and may be obtained from members of the committee.

It has also been announced that the no flower custom will be in effect at the two dances.

New Honorary Fraternity Is Organized On Campus

Dean of Student Awards and Distinctions Ernest L. Mackie announced yesterday that the Circle of the Old Well, a new honorary organization, has been officially established and will conduct its first initiation May 25.

Mackie said the society will "recognize merit and achievement on a point basis." It was set up by Mackie, in cooperation with several students, during the winter quarter.

More than 100 seniors have been interviewed to determine eligibility for admittance under the point system "which has been carefully and impartially set up," Mackie continued.

"However," the dean explained, "with the means of selection available it is entirely possible that some members of the class of 1949 have been overlooked. Anyone who has not been notified who feels that he may be eligible through campus activities is cordially invited to come by 301 South Building at his earliest convenience.

"The committee will then check his activities to see if his total meets the minimum point requirement."

The organization is open both to men and women students, Mackie pointed out.

Points are given on the basis of self-help work, scholastic honors, participation in student government, publications, dramatics, music, athletics, and other campus organizations.

NCSPA To Reorganize At Meet Here Saturday

High School Journalists to Convene For First Meeting Since End of War

Editors and business managers of newspapers and yearbooks in North Carolina high schools have been invited to come to Chapel Hill Saturday, May 21, for a reorganizational meeting of the North Carolina Scholastic Press Association. Plans for the meeting were released today by Walter Spearman of the University Journalism Department, director of the institute.

The high school press institute was held annually at Chapel Hill before the war under the sponsorship of the Journalism Department, the University Extension Division, the Daily Tar Heel and the N. C. Department of Public Instruction. During the war the meetings had to be discontinued because of lack of transportation and have not been resumed earlier on account of lack of housing accommodations at the University.

Headquarters for the meeting on Saturday will be at the Communications Center in Swain Hall. Registration of delegates will begin at 11 o'clock and business sessions will be held from 11 to 1 o'clock and from 2 to 3 o'clock. At 3 o'clock delegates will be given an opportunity to attend the Morehead Planetarium showing of "Let There Be Light."

Heywood Washburn, editor of the 1949 Pemican at High Point Hig School, will preside at the opening session. Dick Jenrette of Raleigh, editor of the Daily Tar Heel at the University, and Miss Alice Sharpe of Jacksonville, Fla., representing the Yackety Yack, University yearbook, will welcome the visiting high school students and discuss the problems of college publications.

University Party Chooses Officers Wednesday Night

Three rising seniors and two rising juniors were elected to office at the final University Party meeting of the year, held Wednesday afternoon in Graham Memorial.

Next year's seniors include Co-Social Chairman of the Senior Class Muriel Fisher, Miami, Fla., who was elected UP secretary; Chairman of the Student Legislature Ways and Means Committee, Charlie Foley, Charlotte, elected treasurer; and newly elected qualifications chairman Dave Sharpe, Chapel Hill, who now serves in the Student Legislature as a member of the non-partisian board and as UP co-floor-leader.

The two rising juniors selected to serve on the UP Stering Committee next year are: Chairman of the Student Legislature Finance Committee Wilson Yarborough, Fayetteville, who has been elected vice-chairman; and Ed Tenney, Chapel Hill, who is to serve as publicity chairman. Tenney is now a member of the president's cabinet, the Student Council of the Greater University and recently went to Raleigh as a member of the UNC delegation to the tSate Student Legislature.

Vocalists to Appear In Rendezvous Show

Betty Lokey, junior from Raleigh, and Irving Silver, sophomore from High Point, will be featured soloists with the Town Talk Trio tonight in the Rendezvous Room in Graham Memorial.

Norbert L. Kelly To Return Here

DELAWARE O., May 19—Norbert L. Kelly, instructor in sociology, will leave the faculty of Ohio Wesleyan University at the end of the present semester to return to the University of North Carolina where he will continue his graduate work.

Seniors to Lose Dignity and Shoes

Have you ever longed to take your shoes off on a clear spring day and run through the grass in your bare tootsies? Do you have a suppressed urge to squish mud through your grimy little toes?

Well, if you're a senior, today is your day of glory.

It's Barefoot Day, that long-awaited annual affair which tells seniors to shed all pedal inhibitions and ankle-modesty and leave those shoes back in the dorm.

It was learned through reliable sources yesterday that University building and grounds workers had been ordered to take special precautions to clear all broken beer bottles off the campus to protect celebrating graduates-to-be.

And South Building is understood to have issued an official proclamation that no indecent charges will be placed against any coeds or Carolina-gentlemen during the day.

Sen. Graham Will Receive Di-Phi Award

Will Be Honored At Annual Banquet

North Carolina's new junior senator, Dr. Frank Porter Graham, will receive the first annual Di-Phi Award at the traditional Di-Phi banquet to be held in the Carolina Inn May 27, Sam Manning of the Dialectic Senate and Graham Jones of the Philanthropic Assembly said yesterday.

Dr. Graham, a former Di member, was nominated for the award by the Phi "in recognition of his contribution to society, his achievements in his chosen field of endeavor, and his services to the University." The Di unanimously confirmed the Phi's selection.

Established during the spring quarter through the joint action of the two oldest organizations on campus, the Award is in the form of a gold medallion with one side bearing a likeness of the Old Well, the other inscription "Di-Phi" and the name of the recipient. On the reverse side the Seal of the University will be engraved.

Governor W. Kerr Scott, Chancellor R. B. House, Dean Fred Weaver, and other past members of the societies have been extended invitations to next Friday's annual banquet which was originated over a century ago. Former state Treasurer Charles Johnson was the guest of honor at last year's dinner.

All members of the two societies, both past and present, are being urged by Manning to contact him immediately by calling 4031 for reservations. Approximately 80 persons will attend the banquet, Manning estimated.

Forum to Present Charles Deane, NC Congressman

Charles Bennett Deane, Congressman from the 8th district of North Carolina, will speak next Thursday night, May 26, at 8:30 o'clock in Gerrard Hall on the subject, "The Federal Health and Housing Program," John Sanders, chairman of the Carolina Forum, announced yesterday. Deane is being co-sponsored by the Forum and the Carolina Political Union.

The speaker, who at present is a member of the committees on Banking and Currency and on House Administration, was first elected to Congress in 1946. He received his LL.B. degree from Wake Forest in 1923. He served as chairman of the Richmond County Democratic Executive Committee for twelve years and from 1926 to 1934 was Register of Deeds for Richmond County.

Sanders also announced a reception to be held for the guest speaker following his address in the main lounge of Graham Memorial at 10:00 o'clock.

Freistadt's Fellowship Will Be Taken Away

Di Denounces Loyalty Test For Students

Freistadt Appears At Senate Meeting

By Jim Southerland

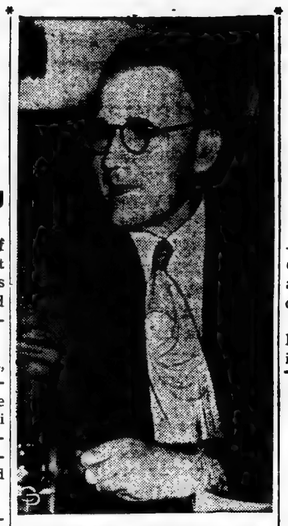
By an overwhelming vote of 18-3, the Dialectic Senate went on record Wednesday night as opposing any loyalty board screening of applicants for government scholarships.

Communist Hans Freistadt, just returned from testifying before a Congressional committee in Washington, denied on the Di floor that he owed supreme allegiance to any country or organization other than the United States.

"I follow the Communist Party only as long as the Communist Party expresses my own political beliefs," stated Freistadt. He stated his opposition to any loyalty board "that checks a man against a list of so-called subversive organizations to decide his loyalty."

The debate of the Di members was one sided but heated, with only two speakers supporting the loyalty screening. One of these, Tom Mayfield, later voted against the screening and explained that his speech had been solely for the purpose of debate.

A substitute bill was introduced by John Saunders which also favored loyalty screening, but the substitution failed. Saunders later explained that he had introduced his measure in order to clarify the original bill and had hoped to kill it later.



Opposing the loyalty screenings on the grounds that only a criminal court could decide a citizen's loyalty were Bill Foster, Dick Bowen, Jimmy Lamm, Jim Southerland, Murray Goldenthal, and Don Shropshire.

Goldenthal closed his opposition to board screening by adding that he wanted to see "some checks to safe-guard atomic energy secrets."

Di President Don Shropshire charged the screening advocates with "trying to do more damage to American democracy than the Communists will ever do." Commenting on the University, he called it, "the one place on earth where a man can say anything he believes."

At the beginning of the regular meeting Shropshire anoounced the names of 12 Di Members who have been authorized by the Di Executive to wear the Di key as a mark of their meri-

Public Money Will Be Held For Non-Reds

Lilienthal Handed Group Ultimatum

WASHINGTON, May 19—(UP)—Congress was told today that Communist Hans Freistadt's atomic fellowship will be withdrawn.

It also assured—by Chairman David E. Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Commission — that steps have been taken to make certain that public money is not spent to further the education of any other Communists.

Lilienthal was handed an ultimatum to block education of young Communist science students at government expense or see it done by law.

Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D.-Wyo.), chairman of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee which passes on the commission's funds, handed out the dictum when Lilienthal was questioned about the $1,500 government fellowship for non-secret physics research awarded to Hans Freistadt, Communist student at the University of North Carolina.

Under fire from O'Mahoney, Lilienthal told the committee that officials of the National Research Council, private organization which distributes science fellowships for the commission, "realize they made a mistake" in granting one to Freistadt.

He said that Dr. Detlev W. Bronk, council chairman, has "voluntarily" agreed that all future applicants for fellowships should be required to sign non-

Hans Freistadt said yesterday that he will "consult legal advisers" about the possibility of bringing a damage suit against the government if his Atomic Energy Commission fellowship is withdrawn.

The 23-year-old Austrian-born youth, an admitted Communist, said the letter he received from the National Research Council notifying him of his appointment as a fellow "stated that when I had written a letter of acceptance, it would constitute a contract."

He said he had written the letter of acceptance and had received an acknowledgement. Informed of Dr. Detlev W. Bronk's statement that the council might dig up private funds to make up for the fellowship, Freistadt said:

"I would be grateful for that alternative. But I still believe that there are not adequate grounds for cancelling the original fellowship."

WAA to Sponsor Picnic for Coeds At Gym Tuesday

Combining frolic, fun, and food, the annual picnic sponsored by the Woman's Athletic Association will be Tuesday afternoon, May 24, from 5:30-7:30 behind the Woman's Gym.

In addition to the presentation of the dormitory and sorority All Sports' cups, four cups will be presented to individual girls, whom the WAA council thinks have contributed most to the association this year. Individual monograms and plaques for softball, tennis, volleyball, swimming, badminton, and archery will also be awarded.

Peppy Lucas and Ruth Baine are in charge of entertainment for the affair and Carolyn Futherie is chairman of the food committee.

Later Hours Set For Rathskeller

Ted Danziger, manager of the Ramshead Rathskeller, said yesterday that in response to student requests, he would leave the Rathskeller open from 11 o'clock in the evening until 1 o'clock in the morning tonight and tomorrow night for the convenience of students attending the Charlie Barnet dances in Woollen Gymnasium.

Danziger said many requests had been made for a suitable place in town to take coeds and imports for a bite to eat after dances. An editorial in the Daily Tar Heel recently expressed the same desire.

Danziger announced that coffee, milk, soft drinks and food would be served during the special hours. He also said that tonight would see the premiere presentation of the "Ramburger," which he described as "the real man's hamburger."

Honesty Pays Off

Proof Positive: Carolina Gentlemen Still Prevail, Says Manager Stamey

Dick Stamey, rising junior from Canton, is convinced that there is still a vestige of the Carolina gentleman left in current University students. At least as far as small change goes, for a little UNC honesty has paid off for the popular dorm manager of Old West.

Stamey was pleased to see Coca Cola mechanics installing the flashy red Coke machines in his dorm. That is, until his charges from the first floor up began pounding on his door at all hours of the night and morning, demanding change for "that dad-burned machine that won't take anything but nickles."

For several sleepless nights Stamey held out. Then, as his patience began to wane, his trust in the common man came to the fore. Stamey decided to test the honesty of Old West inmates, and do himself a favor at the same time.

On the outside of his dorm manager's door, Stamey tacked a cardboard box containing a few dollars in nickes, free to all to use in making change.

That was two weeks ago. Today, Stamey is walking about campus, his head held high, a smile upon his lips.

"The Carolina gentleman?" he will reply to anyone who asks. "Why, he is certainly one of the most honest creatures this side of St. Mary's."

And then Stamey will tell of

Capps Airs First Outdoor Program

"Jimmy, how many listeners would you figure you have kept awake since you began the "Our Best to You" series in September, 1947?" asked an admirer of the popular Cupid of the airways.

"Well," Jimmy Capps smiled, "that's hard to say. But the folks at WPTF tell me I put them to sleep nightly."

Capps came to the campus yesterday to iron out a few difficulties that have developed over the "Music Under the Stars" feature when he will be guest disk-jockey Sunday night.

His petite wife, Aimee, and Worth White, a fellow broadcaster, accompanied him on his visit to the Beta house to pick up the requests students have submitted for the program. He will use 40 of these as dedications Sunday night.

Capps would like very much to play all the 30-60 requests he receives at WPTF daily, but must settle for the 20 that may be squeezed into his 60-minute 11 o'clock to midnight broadcast. He began working in radio while attending Central High in Charlotte in 1936," and I've been in radio ever since, much to my mother's chagrin," he reflected.

If the good weather man is willing, Capps will air "Our Best to You," for student consumption only from the porch of Graham Memorial.

The University Club presentation will run from 9 to 11 o'clock Sunday night, providing two hours of relaxation after a dance weekend for University students. The entire lawn from GM to BVP and from Franklin Street to the Old Well will be available for their use.

"This is my first experience with the program outdoors," Capps explained, "though I did read poetry to the girls at Meredith one time."

Several members of the University Club visited Capps in his studio last week and asked him to make this guest appearance.

"Why, I'd be tickled pink to come over," he replied, even though Sunday night is his night off. "Even on Sunday, it's not work," said the pleasantly-around-his-thirties, bespectacled boss of the turntable.

Need for Grading System

The departure of Paul Young from the music department marks up another loss to the faculty of the University. As the University grows in size, the administration fails more often in the recognition of outstanding work by its young professors and associate professors. It is true, with such a large faculty, it is hard to keep tabs on the work of each individual professor. However, in order to keep up-and-coming young men on our faculty, it is necessary to give recognition where recognition is due.

This goes to show that the need of some system of grading the instructors and professors by the students is great. Such a system might not be directly constructive, but it can call the attention of the heads of the various departments to promising young men and aid in the weeding out of those who do not come up to the standards of the University.

A prominent member of the faculty suggests that the students can do a lot to help young instructors get the recognition they deserve by mentioning the fact to their respective deans when they have the opportunity. This or some other system must be devised in order to hold promising young men on our faculty.—J.M.

End of the Campaign

David Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, yesterday assured the Senate Appropriations subcommittee that no more public money will be spent to further education of Communists. On top of this came an announcement by Dr. Detlev Bronk, chairman of the National Research Council which administers the atomic energy fellowships, that steps would be taken to withdraw the scholarship now held by Hans Freistadt, Carolina Communist.

The two announcements provide the climax of the week-long discussion which was set off by the revelation that Hans Freistadt, an active member of the Communist Party of Chapel Hill and the Karl Marx Study Club, had been awarded a $1,600 fellowship by the AEC. Last week the press and radio commentators almost unanimously voiced their objections to government funds being used to educate an avowed Communist. From the releases by Lilienthal and Bronk, it appears that the campaign is now ended.

Lilienthal yesterday was quoted by the United Press as saying "It is obvious that they (the National Research Council) made a mistake when they awarded the Freistadt fellowship. They realize it." Henceforth, Lilienthal revealed, all applicants for atomic fellowships will have to sign an affidavit saying whether they advocate or belong to an organization advocating forceful overthrow of the government.

There is no law on the statutes outlawing Communism, but at the same time there is no law saying that a scholarship should be given to a Communist. It seems that the National Research Council would have exercised enough care to prevent the award from falling into the hands of individuals with questionable reputations without a law requiring them to do so.

But, according to Lilienthal, the Council realizes it made a mistake. If they adher to the policy of having the applicants for the fellowships sign affidavits, then there should be no more controversies like the Freistadt affair. True, it would be easy enough for a Communist to lie and say he is not a member of a subversive organization. However, his signature on the affidavit provides a basis for withdrawing the fellowship if the applicant's future actions reveal he lied.

It all goes to show that the United States government has come to the realization that offspring Communism of the parent Russia is a definite threat to the American way of life.

The Order of the Old Well

A new star has risen on the campus scene. Dr. E. L. Mackie, dean of awards, has announced the formation of a new honorary society to be called "The Order of the Old Well." The organization is the result of months of hard and careful work by Dean Mackie and a group of interested students and faculty members.

The Order of the Old Well will have as its primary purpose the recognition and encouragement of campus service. It will seek to fulfill the need, born of the rapid post-war growth of the student body, for such recognition and at the same time will embody a new conception of what constitutes campus service.

Because of the nature of its membership requirements, the new honorary group should be an elastic body. Anyone who meets the set qualifications will be accepted into membership. This is made possible by a system of points assigned to various activities. Scholarship and self-help work are given a large degree of consideration under this point system, also.

Several features of the Order of the Old Well should contribute to its being a society of true campus servants. First, women as well as men will be eligible. Second, the names and personalities of prospective members will not be consdered. Third, there will be no limit placed on the number of members. A person need only have the points to his credit in order to be accepted.

The Order of the Old Well promises fair to become what an honorary society should be; a rewarder of public service. With its strong groundwork and excellent principles, The Order of the Old Well should last as long as the landmark from which it takes its name.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Since Secretary of Defense Johnson scrapped the the big carrier, letting it be known he considers the Air Force our paramount branch of the service, the Navy has put on an unwanted stepchild act that would break you little heart.

The Navy pretends that Johnson is rendering it so subordinate to the Air Force that its very identity will be submerged. The act is so tragically dramatic that wags around the Pentagon are predicting the Navy will soon begin answering its phone with:

Democratic Principles

By Jonathon Marshall

The Freistadt case represents far more than a question of whether one insignificant little communist should receive a government scholarship or not; it hits at the very foundation of our American concept of democracy.

By the very fact that we are afraid of Freistadt and his kind, we admit a fear that democracy is not strong enough. This columnist feels that our democracy is strong enough to withstand many thousands of communists if we do not become hysterical and make martyrs of them.

The late President Roosevelt's words, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself," are very appropriate at present.

Let us not become so frightened that in guarding ourselves from one evil, we forget our ideals and succumb to another evil. Perhaps we must strengthen ourselves, but by denying the very concepts of freedom and justice, we only weaken ourselves, and we lower ourselves to the level of Russian totalitarianism which we oppose.

Many people will answer, "But let's be realistic." To deny "Due process of law" is unrealistic, however, and invites that totalitarian autocracy that we hate so much.

One may admit that the Atomic Energy Commission made a mistake in not screening scholarship candidates, but shall we rectify the error at the expense of justice when the case presents no danger?

Physicists say that the study of relativity, for which Freistadt was given the scholarship, is theory and does not give him access to atomic information. There is a difference between theory and facts.

The Communist Party is still legal in this country, and, therefore, its members are still entitled to the same rights that other citizens receive. As taxpayers they are entitled to benefits.

If we deny Freistadt the scholarship, do we then deny him the right to pay taxes? Probably not!

If we deny him the grant because he will not fight in an "aggressive war," do we deny a scholarship to a Quaker who will not fight? Do we say that a socialist who believes in economic change is dangerous?

Unless we establish principles in advance we cannot honestly act. We must decide whether democracy applies to all, and, if not, who is excluded. Then we must look about and ascertain whether we still have democracy.

If one truly believes in democracy, one must believe that it is a form of government strong enough to withstand totalitarian opposition, whether communist or otherwise. Rather than become hysterical, we should work to strengthen our political institutions.

Recent comments in the papers, and particularly the DTH, represent a dangerous trend in our thoughts toward an abandonment of civil liberties, the cornerstone of democracy.

One such letter in Sunday's DTH was especially dangerous. The letter was signed by 14 students, one of whom told this columnist that she thought it was a joke and would not be sent.

The letter said, "By carefully watching the letters to the editor. . . the student body can learn the identity of every Communist on campus!" This implies that there is no longer room for disagreement. Perhaps the authors feel, as one may logically conclude, that on the subject of communism we should abandon freedom of speech.

In principle this column is a defense of Freistadt's right to the scholarship that he won. It is not a defense of communism which this columnist strongly opposes.

If the writers of the letter wish to carry their statement to a conclusion they may call this columnist a communist and test their case in court.

This is America where we still have democracy, and where freedom of speech, though some would deny it, is still in force. We have liable laws and the right to disagree. Let's keep it that way and not adopt Stalin's own techniques as a means of defense.

Belvedere, Brahms

By "Wink" Locklair

"Mr. Belvedere Goes to College," a very amusing continuation of last year's popular comedy "Sitting Pretty," was given a preview showing Wednesday evening at 11:30 in the Carolina Theatre before an invited audience of DTH staff members and various non-journalistic bystanders.

The picture will begin its regular run with a late show Saturday night in E. Carrington Smith's theatre.

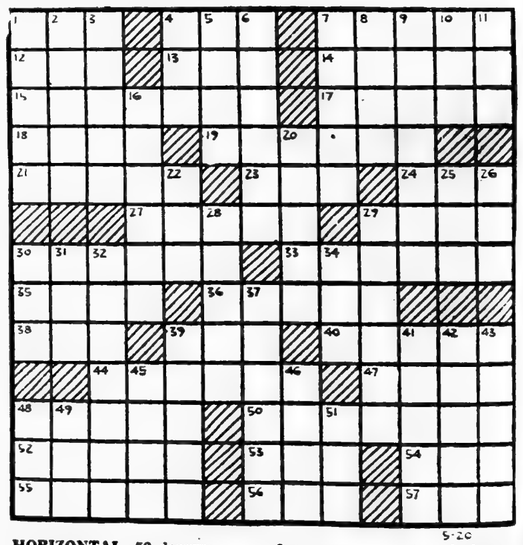
Clifton Webb, who again portrays the all-knowing ego-maniac Lynn Belvedere, has enrolled as a freshman in Clemons College in order to fulfil the requirements for a $10,000 award given to him for the book he wrote in "Sitting Pretty." As a freshman, Mr. Belvedere is exposed and subjected to hazing, cooking for the Tri-Gam House, pole-vaulting, and, finally to serving as arbitrator in a mildy-nauseating love affair between War Widow Shirley Temple and BMOC Tom Drake.

Miss Temple plays a young journalist who, it seems, already writes well enough to sit down any old time and rip off sensational exposes—with pictures—for Look magazine. All we can say is thank God the Tar Heel is not equipped with her counterpart!

But, happily enough, the romantics don't compete with the antics of Mr. Webb, for it is certainly his show and his show alone. After explaining that "my formal education consisted of two revolting weeks in kindergarden," the audience learn that Mr. Belevdere taught Houdini everything he knew, is on intimate terms with the head of the FBI and calls him Edgar, and can speak eleven tongues, incluring the Indian Sign Language. He plays the piano, but never. Beethoven or Brahms; Belvedere. And at the Tri Gam house its not crepe suezette that's "dreamy," its Crepe Belvedere!

"Mr. Belvedere Goes to College" will provide many laughs for local students and may, in some morbid way, serve as inspiration to do some studying for final exams next week.

Chamber Recital



The largest audience to show up in Hill Hall since the heat wave set in was on hand Wednesday evening for a program of chamber music which turned out to be one of the outstanding student recitals of the year. Perhaps the feature number of the program was Brahms' Horn Trio, but even before that Robert MacDonald, a student of Miss Virginia Hare, had played with great facility and ease a French Suite by Bach. Beethoven's F Sharp Major Sonata, a Brahms Intermezzo and two Chopin Etudes.

Mr. MacDonald had performed the Beethoven here April 19 as the opening number of a four-student piano recital. It is a bright, happy, melodic piece, not long, and certainly very enjoyable to listen to. But it was Mr. MacDonald's playing of the sweeping, powerful C Minor Etude of Chopin which gave evidence of his capabilities. As an encore he played Francis Poulanc's interesting Perpetual Motion, which some in the audience might have remembered hearing in Alfred Hitchcock's film "Rope."

In discussing the Brahms Trio for Horn, Violin and Piano Walter Willson Corbett says in his Summary of Chamber Music that Brahms was doing something more reactionary than illustrating Wagner's preface to Tristan when he laid special stress upon using a valveless horn with an E Flat crook in this trio. Not only does the horn player have to blend closed and whole notes, but he must have a strong lip and considerable skill to play such a demanding finale.

Mr. Price, who played the horn part Wednesday night studied his instrument first with Mr. Slocum, later with Harry Mitchell, and while he was in the Navy, with Ottilio De Palma first hornist with the Philadelphia Orchestra. Mr. Price's playing was more than satisfactory and the other two members of the trio—William Tritt and John O'Steen give it an almost professional interpretation. Mr. Tritt had been well-received the night before in a joint recital with David McAdams. And it would be difficult to find a student in the University who plays with more polish and sound technique than Mr. O'Steen.

These student recitals continue to reveal excellent and willing musicians who are through much hard work, developing their talents under the excellent faculty we have in Hill Hall. The loss of Mr. Young to the University of Illinois is a great loss. But it can only be expected that the Department will find a competent replacement for him and that Hill Hall will continue to prosper as is evident from recitals heard there this month.

Southern Conference Track Trials Open Here Today

Finals in All Events Saturday; Carolina Favored in Tourney

By Frank Allston, Jr.

The 25th annual Southern Conference outdoor track meet opens here today with 237 athletes, representing fourteen schools, on hand for two days of track competition on Fetzer Field's cinder track.

Action today is restricted to trials in ten events. Trials in four field events will start at 3 o'clock and the track trials will follow at 4. Six men will qualify in each event for the finals to be run here tomorrow afternoon.

Drawings for heats and last minute scratches will be held in 301B Woollen Gymnasium at 10 o'clock this morning. All institutions entered in the meet are required to have representatives present at this all-important meeting.

Defending Champs

Carolina's talented Tar Heels, defending conference indoor and outdoor champs, are favorites to win this year's meet. The Tar Heels, towever, are expected to run into much difficulty from the Terps of Maryland and Duke's Blue Devils.

In 1948 Carolina won the meet by racking up 55 1-7 points while Maryland captured second to nose out Duke, 44 1-4 to 40 25-28. State took third with 31 points.

Some very stiff competition is expected to come in this afternoon's qualifying trials. The best action is expected to come in the shorter races where a star-studded field of entries will be competing.

440 to Be Closest

Competition in the 440 is expected to be the closest and best of the meet. Some of the top men entered are indoor champ Buddy Grisso of Duke, team mate Loren Young, Ed Matthews and Paul Ostrye of Maryland, Harrison and Robertson of VMI, Chuck Ford and Bill Gravatt of Virginia Tech and Laddie Terrell of Carolina.

In the shot and discus Carolina's Bob Seligman and Duke's Jim O'Leary are expected to pace the field. Seligman won the discus here in last year's conference meet and is favored to repeat. O'Leary copped the shot put title with a record heave of 50 ft. 7 in. Other top weight men in the trials today will be Byler and Dostanko of State, Hoitsma and Creekmur of William and Mary and Maryland's three top discus men, Hawley, Chaudet and Kozay.

In the javelin throw Carolina's Bob Kirk, winner of the 1949 Penn Relays title, will pace the field. Other top entries are last year's conference champ Jack Dunham of Duke, Eichorn and Tyrell of Maryland, Oref of Washington and Lee and Buck of South Carolina.

Tar Heel Jack Moody looms as the broad jump favorite with his stiffest competition expected from Maryland's Fontanna and Wilson, Reeves and Bridges of Duke and Tar Heel Billy Joyner, '48 winner.

Maryland, Duke and Virginia Tech have the top entries in the 100 and 220-yard dashes. Maryland's top men are Bill Alexion, George McGowan and Ed Matthews while Duke's best sprinters are Brandon Davis, Tommy Reeves and Loren Young. Tech's Bob Merriweather, Carolina's Bill Crimmins, Wiggs of Wake Forest, State's Goldberg and Ray McKenzie of South Carolina are other first rate dash men.

Pacing the field in the hurdles will be '48 champ Dick Taylor of the local team in the highs and Duke's Tommy Reeves in the lows.

Tar Baby Baseballers Down Baby Deacs in Thriller ,4-0

WAKE FOREST, May 19—May-be the big boys on the varsity squad can't do any thing with Wake Forest, but Coach Henry House's freshmen have no trouble at all in showing the Baby Deacs who's boss. They did that very thing yesterday when they shut out the Baptists 4-0, on their own field.

Monroe Johnson on the mound refused to let the locals get away with more than 8 hits and received credit for the win for his stubborness. It was the fourth win for the Carolina freshmen over their neighbors from Wake Forest.

The Tar Babies came off with 10 hits which they collected from time to time off Hardison, Sheets, and Young who were sent to the mound in that order.

The Carolina frosh jumped to a quick 2-0 lead in the first inning when Mark led off with a double into left field and Russell Whiteheart followed with another to drive him in. Whiteheart scored on Stuart's grounder to short.

No Walker Yet!

Though speculation has been running high in many quarters, no official announcement has been made as yet concerning the 1949 Walker Cup team and the presence or absence of Carolina's Harvie Ward as a member.

Ward is considered by most golf experts to have a good chance to make the team of the country's ten best amateurs (eight regulars and two alternates) who will battle the best of England's simon pures in New York State this summer.

Sedgefield Poop

GREENSBORO, May 19—Carolina's Heath Alexander, seeded 7th in the Sedgefield Tennis tourney, today defeated Jake Steele, of High Point College, 6-1, 1-6, 6-0, to reach the quarter-final round.

Alexander will meet Bill Lurie of New York City tomorrow in the quarter final round .Lurie is seeded third and today defeated Dr. Dudley Cowen of Chapel Hill, 6-4, 6-2.

Vic Seixas, Tar Heel net star seeded first in the tourney, hasn't played a match, but will meet Joe Melvin of High Point tomorrow, He won by default today.

Clark Taylor, the other Tar Heel entered in the matches, was forced to forfeit because of the strain he suffered at the Southern Conference tourney last week.

Emerson Misfits Cop Intramural Softball Title

Dormitory softball play was brought to a booming close yesterday with the Emerson Misfits being crowned dorm champs after trampling roughshod over a helpless BVP nine to the tune of 15-0.

Regan, winning hurler for the Misfits, held his opponents to a single hit while his teammates were pounding D. Jennings of BVP unmercifully.

BVP was never in the game after Bill Spiegel, Misfit catcher, stepped up in the first inning and smacked a long homerun into deep left-center for Emerson's first tally. The Misfits collected two more runs in the second and then really poured on the steam in the fourth to push 11 men across the plate before BVP could stem the tide. The game was called in the first of the fifth when Emerson collected its final marker to go ahead by 15 runs.

Big guns in Emerson's slugfest were Spiegel who had 3 bingles including a homerun, Bernie McKiernan who also collected 3 hits, and Glimaris who banged out the Misfits' second four-bagger of the day.

The other big feature of the day was the fraternity semi-finals between the PiKAs and Zeta Psi. Charlie Smith hurled his mates to a shutout win over the Zetas in a 3-0 thriller. Losing pitcher Charlie Thorne turned in a creditable performance before falling in the face of superior odds. The smooth-working PiKA infield spelled victory for the Smithmen by pulling two neat double plays during the course of the afternoon, and chipping in with other timely fielding gems.

Goodman Leading Big Four Batting Race With Hot .475

With only one more week of Big Four competition remaining, Carolina's Stan Goodman is leading the hit parade with a healthy .475 average. In ten games (As of May 16) he has been at bat 40 times, collecting 19 hits.

Wake Forest's Wiley Warren is Goodman's closest competition. He is currently running second with a .421 record. Carolina's Sid Varney is third with a .381 average and another Tar Heel, Don Ward, follows Varney with .379.

Goodman, with two more Big Four games to go, will have a chance to break the existing League batting record set by Carolina's Jim Kelly two years ago at .500.

Carolina's Tar Heels still remain at the head of the list in the team batting department. They are 12 points ahead of second place Wake Forest with a .289 average. The Tar Heels have led the batting all season despite the fact that they are now in third place in the Big Four league.

In the pitching department Wake Forest is top o' the crop with four moundsmen way out in front of the other League teams Moe Bauer, Vernon Mustian, Harry Nicholas, and Dick Vander Clute, the four aces in the Deacon bag of tricks, are leading is that order Bauer, Mustian, and Nicholas are undefeated, while Vander Clute is coasting along with a 4-1 record.

Carolina's Ray Blair is seventh with a 3-2 record.

Varney, Hobbs Named

Catcher Sid Varney and First Baseman Will Hobbs were elected co-captains of the 1950 Carolina baseball team yesterday afternoon.

Varney, a senior from Powell, Pa., will return next spring to play ball. Hobbs is a junior and hails from Greensboro.

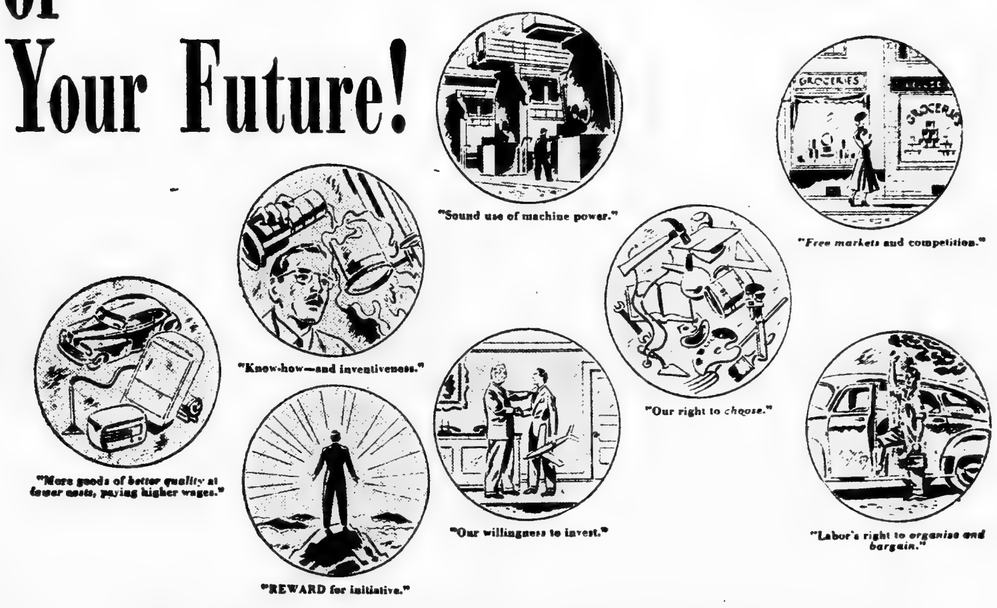
"Free government—of the people—by the people—for the people."

AMERICA
is the one place where they have ever existed in combination...

These are the Symbols of Your Future!

When we talk about our American system, we're talking about something more productive, more promising, more thrilling than any system the world has ever seen.

And we're strong because we enjoy the unique combination of qualities that make our nation the most productive of any country on earth. Why?



First, because we've built our whole system on a solid faith and belief in the dignity of the individual.

Out of our belief in the dignity of the individual has evolved the wonderful pattern of America. Our policy of free markets and free collective bargaining. Our belief in competition. Our adherence to the principle of constantly better quality at consistently lower cost.

Our emphasis on research—on invention—on new and better methods.

Our faith in the future and our desire ever to advance—ever to improve the lot of everybody, regardless of race, creed or color.

These—in combination—are America. And nowhere else in the world is there such a combination—that's your U.S.A. Let's keep it this way. Sure our system has its faults—but in correcting those, and with even better teamwork, the future is unlimited.

Orange County Will Get $401,037 For Schools If Bond Vote Passes

Orange County will receive $401,037 for school buildink and $1.656,000 for road building if voters on June 4 authorize the issuance of school and road bonds, according to a letter received by county commissioners from Governor W. Kerr Scott.

School and road bond bills passed by the 1949 General Assembly allocated those amounts to be spent in the county, provided that the people authorize the issuance of the bonds when they vote in the June 4 election.

For school building Orange County would get $250,000 as its equal share of a $25,000,000 appropriation by the General Assembly plus 151,037 as its per-pupil share of the proceeds from the School bonds. The per-pupil share established by the General Assembly is determined on the basis of the 1947-48 average daily membership.

The amount that would be spent in the county for road building, if issuance of the bonds is favored by the voters, is set forth exactly in the road bond bill, and represents what the General Assembly determined to be "a fair and equitable distribution" based upon the formula in use by the State Highway and Public Works Commission.

The county's share of proceeds from the road bonds would be in addition to its regular share of highway funds.

Communist affidavits.

Dissatisfied, O'Mahoney demanded to know whether the commission would break the contract, under which the Research Council distributes fellowship funds, if the council failed to take effective steps to screen out Communists.

"That's a, hypothetical question," Lilienthal replied.

"It's going to be the law and it will be your duty to carry it out," O'Mahoney snapped back.

Dr. Bronk, who accompanied Lilienthal to the hearing, told a reporter he plans to recommend that the council's executive board take action to withdraw Freistadt's government fellowship.

He said his recommendation, if approved by the 32-member board, probably would amount to "breaking a contract" with Freistadt, and that the council might have to dig up funds of its own to make up the $1,600 loss to the student.

Sen. Brien McMahon (D.-Conn.) suggested it was "quite possible" there are cases similar to Freistadt's.

He believed it was the "unanimous opinion" of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, which he heads, that no public funds should be used "to make gifts to members of the Communist Party."

McMahon also promised to see to it that investigation continues "until we become satisfied that there are no Communists in the atomic energy program."

Lilienthal's ouster was demanded by Rep. Thomas A. Jenkins (R.-Ohio), who told the House Lilienthal was "responsible" for the Freistadt fellowship.

Rep. Chet Holifield (D.-Cal.), a member of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, jumped to Lilienthal's defense. He said the fellowship was granted by the Research Board and not by the commission.

Court Asked To Dismiss Eisler Plea

Bail-Jumping Red Wanted in Prison

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(UP)—The Justice Department today asked the Supreme Court to dismiss fugitive Communist leader Gerhart Eisler's contempt of Congress appeal so he can be clapped in jail the moment he is returned to the United States.

In a memorandum filed with the high court, the Department said the bespectacled little, bail-jumping German is a "fugitive from justice" and has forfeited any right to further consideration from the tribunal.

Eisler, often called the number one communist in the United States, fled the country May 6 aboard the Polish steamer Batory while his Supreme Court appeal was pending.

He was taken off the ship at Southampton, England by British authorities who are holding him for a hearing on this government's request that he be returned.

In addition to the contempt of Congress charge, Eisler has been found guilty of making false statements in a request to leave the country. He had been free on bond pending appeals from both charges.

A federal district court judge here has declared $20,000 of Eisler's $23,500 bond forfeit since he skipped the country.

His conviction on the contempt of Congress charge, carrying a one-year prison sentence and $1,000 fine, has been sustained by a circuit court of appeals. The Supreme Court agreed to consider an appeal from that decision and has heard arguments from both sides.

The Justice Department said the high court could use its own "sound discretion" about hearing appeals and urged it to reverse its action now and throw Eisler's appeal out.

The Department argument was that Eisler has no further right of appeal because he "took advantage of his freedom on bail, which was only possible recause of the additional time required for proceedings in this court.

If the government's request is granted, Eisler would go to jail and begin serving his one-year sentence the moment he is returned to the States.

Mull Wants Trustees To Remove Freistadt

Former Speaker of NC House Advocates Discharge of Communist as Instructor

Odus Mull of Shelby, former Speaker of the North Carolina House of Representatives, in a letter addressed to Victor Bryant of Durham, chairman of the University's Board of Trustees, and all other trustees, yesterday asked that Communist Hans Freistadt be discharged as a part-time instructor at the University, the Durham Sun reported yesterday.

"I know that you will agree with me that the fathers and mothers of our State do not want their children taught by Communists," the letter said. "Likewise, the taxpayers would not want tax money used in paying a Communist teacher."

Freistadt is a part-time instructor and graduate assistant in the University's Department of Physics.

Bryant was out of town, and could not be reached by telephone late yesterday afternoon.

The full Board of Trustees will meet in Chapel Hill Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock, a spokesman from South Building said. This will be the regular spring meeting of the full board.

Fellowships Will Be Cut, Senator Says

Doctor Will Lose Funds for Study

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(UP)—Chairman Brien McMahon, D., Conn., of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee said today he would move to shut off federal funds for Dr. Isador S. Edelman of Brooklyn because the physician was denied security clearance for atomic research.

Edelman is taking non-secret studies at the Peter Bent Brigham hospital in Boston under a fellowship provided by the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission. His name was brought into Senate appropriations subcommittee investigation of the fellowship program after Commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal said three alleged Communists have received the government grants.

It was not clear whether Lilienthal meant to count Edelman among the three alleged Communists. He told the subcommittee Edelman was denied clearance for secret research and steered into non-secret medical work because of "derogatory information that he either was a Communist symphatizer or had associations with Communists."

In Boston, Edelman told reporters he attended a few Communist meetings in 1943 "out of curiosity" but was "quickly disillusioned." He asserted vehemently that he is now an "anti-Communist."

While Lilienthal mentioned no other names, presumably one of the three persons he had in mind is Hans Freistadt, avowed Communist student at the University of North Carolina whose $1,600 fellowship touched off a Senate investigation of the whole program.

McMahon said his committee will question Edelman at a public hearing Monday. It has already quizzed Freistadt. He said that in addition to Edelman and Freistadt, there are "several other cases" the committee will investigate in closed sessions.

Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, R., Ia., told reporters he knows of "three or four others (holding fellowships) whose background or record of associations makes them

Tom Clark Says Unwanted Aliens At Large in U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(UP)—Attorney General Tom C. Clark advised Congress today that 3,300 "undesirable aliens," mostly from iron curtain nations are at large in this country because of loopholes in immigration laws.

He indicated that many of them are engaged in subversive activities.

Clark revealed the data as Arnold Johnson, legislative secretary of the American Communist Party, was telling a Senate hearing that party members will "go underground" if Congress passes a law requiring them to register.

"We wouldn't register," the Communist leader said. "We would not abide by a law that violates the rights of the American people—the Bill of Rights and the Constitution."

Clark wrote the House Judiciary Committee urging approval of a bill to tighten immigration laws and prevent a repetition of Gerhart Eisler's bail-jumping escape from the United States.

The measure would authorize the Attorney General to hold undesirable aliens in jail without bond and deport them to any country that will take them. Under present law, they must be released on bail until they are deported and can only be sent back to their homelands.

Pointing out that Eisler was able to stow away on the Polish ship Batory only because he was free on $23,500 bond, Clark said the No. 1 Communist would not have been able to escape if the proposed legislation already were in force.

Miller and Giles Receive Mention In Annual Event

By Margaret Gaston

Charles Dixon, senior from Belmont, won the Willie P. Mangum medal in oratory Tuesday night when he spoke on "Outlawing of the Communist Party in the United States," Dean E. L. Mackie of student awards and scholarships said yesterday.

Bill Miller of Greenville, S.C., received first honorable mention for his oration on "A Citizen's Duty," and Robert Giles, from Chapel Hill, was awarded second honorable mention. Giles spoke on "Institutional Bondages."

The contest, second since the war, featured seniors delivering original orations. The contest was sponsored by Dean Mackie, who presided over the program. Mackie said that "all the speeches were very good."

Judges for the event were Gerald Barrett of the Economics Department, Earl Wynn, director of the Communications Center, and E. J. Woodhouse of the Political Science Department.

Other seniors competing for the medal were Sam Manning, speaking on "Jefferson and Hamilton;" Bob Ormand, "The Ivory Tower that is Carolina;" Emily Baker, "Is There Freedom in America:" and Marion Woodbury, "Student and the Communist."

Last year's winner was Robert Coulter of Chapel Hill. Faculty members who have won the award in the past include Fred Weaver, Dean of Students, and Dr. Albert Coates, director of Institute of Government.

In his oration, "Outlawing of the Communist Party in the United States," Dixon spoke as if he were addressing the United States Senate on the question. "The issue facing us now is not to choose between these rival ideologies but to decide upon the wisdom of passing this bill which would make it a punishable crime to become a member of the Communist Party," Dixon said. He pointed out that the bill "undoubtedly amounts to a restriction of freedom of speech."

Dixon then said that "a small

Student Advisers To Meet Tuesday

Roy Armstrong, director of admissions, and Dean of Students Fred Weaver spoke at a meeting of student advisers Thursday night in Phillips Hall.

Part of the spring training program for advisers, the meeting was the final one attended only by coeds. At a meeting Tuesday night at 7:30 in 206 Phillips, men counsellors will meet with the coed advisers in order to better integrate next year's program.

Armstrong spoke Thursday night on the value of the testing program, and Dean Weaver discussed coeducation and leadership. "Your job," Weaver said, "is to make the level of womanhood on the campus not medium high, but superior high. If you have done this, you will have helped not only your Alma Mater, but yourself."

Fraternities Warned Of Sex Movie Thief

Police Tell Frats to Watch for Man Who Raided State College Last Week

Campus fraternities have been warned by the Chapel Hill police department to be on the lookout for a thief who raided several State College fraternities last week-end.

The thief is reported to pose as a seller of sex movie films which he uses as a front to get into the houses. After showing his stock of sex films in the fraternity houses he returns later in the night and loots the houses. State College fraternity men lost several wallets and cameras after a visit by the "film merchant" last Saturday.

So far, the thief has not visited the University but State college students stated he had asked several of them how far it was to Chapel Hill.

Dr. Hartung to Talk At Wesley Meeting

At the Sunday Supper Program of the Wesley Foundation, Dr. Walter Hartung, Professor in the School of Pharmacy, will speak on the topic: "A Scientist Views Religion."

He will discuss some of the problems modern day Christian students face as they attempt to live in two worlds.

Dr. Hartung was named in 1948 as one of the ten most able chemists engaged in some twenty fields of Engineering Medical Chemistry. Prior to coming to Chapel Hill he taught at the University of Wisconsin and the University of Maryland.

Her Capps Always Off

It's A Lonely Life For MC's Wife He Gives Her The Air Every Night

By Wuff Newell

"When Jimmy goes off the air in June for a three months vacation, it'll be just like a second honeymoon for us."

That, briefly, is how Aimee Capps, wife of WPTF's unofficial matrimonial bureau head summed up the life of a radio family.

"We were married two years ago last March, but with Jimmy working every night I hardly feel as if I ever see him," she explained.

Jimmy Capps will be on the campus tomorrow night with a special program of "Our Best to You" designed and planned for Carolina students. The WPTF Cupid will play records on the front porch of Graham Memorial from 9 until 11 in conjunction with the University Club's Music under the Stars.

Aimee, who is about five feet tall and looks as if she might still be in college, graduated from Furman in 1945. After graduation she went to work for a radio station in Greenville, S. C. The following year Jimmy joined the staff and a year later they were married.

"And in the two years we've been married, we've had eight dogs. Don't you think that's a remarkable sized family for a couple married such a short time?" Aimee laughed.

In Greenville Aimee was a continuity writer. She still feels that radio is the most fascinating work there is.

"But marriage and radio can't mix," she explained. "Besides, WPTF has a rule that only one person in a family may work on the station."

Aimee still is on the inside of radio, however, for she is keeper of the scrapbook in the Capps family. Jimmy saves many of his most interesting letters in addition to press clippings. At present the Capps are preparing to move to a new apartment, so Aimee has been busy sorting out the thousands of letters Jimmy has accumulated during the two and one half years that "Our Best to You" has been on the air.

"Some of the letters are awfully cute," Aimee said. "Once two Carolina boys got hold of a mimeograph machine and for several days Jimmy received 50 identical cards a day. It certainly made people think that he was receiving lots of mail."

Jimmy hates to throw away some letters without playing their requests, the lady of the family explained, but so many people request so many different numbers, it would be impossible to play them all.

"Jimmy loves to get mail,"

'Devil's Tramping Ground'

University Press Publishes Book Of Unsolved Mysteries in State

A collection of intriguing mystery stories of North Carolina from the days of the Lost Colony which landed in North Carolina in 1584 right on up to World War II are contained in an attractive volume, "The Devil's Tramping Ground" by John Harden, well known North Carolina newspaperman, which has just been published by the University of North Carolina Press. Illustrations are by Mary Lindsay McAlister.

The volume is composed mainly of stories which Harden narrated on a weekly radio program entitled "Tales of Tar Heelia" which was broadcast from Station WPTF in Raleigh during 1946 and 1947 when Harden was secretary to former Governor Gregg Cherry.

On Saturday night, May 21, from 8:15 to 8:30, WPTF will broadcast a dramatization of one of the stories, "The Missing Major" by the University of North Carolina Communication Center. The story, the locale of which is Raleigh, is one of the unsolved mysteries of this state during World War II.

Harden, a native of Graham, began newspaper work in high school and continued his reporting activities after he became a student at the University of North Carolina where he claims he worked eight hours a day in the University News Bureau under the guidance of Director Bob Madry. He thinks that it was during this period that he first learned to drink his famed 20 cups of coffee a day.

Object to Communists

One aspect of the current controversy over the Hans Freistadt fellowship award which has received little attention is the reaction of the alumni of the University of North Carolina. What do they think of the highly unfavorable publicity which the Freistadt affair has brought to Chapel Hill?

Although the Daily Tar Heel is sent to only a relatively few of the alumni, seven have sent in letters expressing their opinions on the matter. All are irritated over the presence of Communists on campus, and three of the writers have sent in money for copies of the DTH which blasted the awarding of the Atomic Energy Commission fellowship to Freistadt. The general opinion seemed to be that for a long time they had been hearing rumors about Communists at Carolina, were glad finally to get some concrete information on the matter, and now favored some action to prevent the University's name from being further dragged into the nation's headlines beside the name of a Communist.

Following are a few of their comments. Their letters were personal and not intended for publication, so no names will be used.

One prominent alumnus quotes Senator O'Mahoney, (D-Wyo.). "The present appropriation for the atomic agency carries a so-called loyalty rider. The rider bars use of the funds for payment to any person who is a member of an organization that advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence. It seems to me clear that the foregoing section applies, and that under its provision of law every such fellow should be screened or should at least be required to make the affidavit of loyalty set forth in the section."

In addition to endorsing O'Mahoney's statement, this alumnus continues that he was told there were only seven Communists at Carolina and that there are more in his native New York City. His retort was "there are 10,000,000 people in New York City and you and I are engaged in a discussion of the University of North Carolina. My idea is that these seven should go—all of them." He closes his letter with "congratulations and thanks for your excellent and forceful efforts to keep the University clean, free from foreign alliances, and with faculty and student body under one flag and government."

Another writes in "I believe that we are not doing all that we can foresee to help this country go to the dogs—and to the Russians." He jokingly suggests we give Freistadt the Legion of Merit and an official parking space near the Department of Justice.

From New York comes a clipping of Freistadt's photo with the comment "When are you good Americans going to chase this traitor off your campus?"

A Pittsburgh, Pa., writer comments that "It would seem to me that the teaching of Communism alone would make this subject a traitor as measured by our standards of democracy. Recommendation of a worthy scholar for the scholarship in question would in the opinion of the writer be a worthy climax to this situation." He commends the paper for its stand on the issue and is hoping for action soon.

The Communist question at Carolina has been greatly overplayed. Doubtless there are just as many at any other university of comparable size in the country, but they have not received the publicity. It is to be hoped that the Carolina alumni realize this. The campus has no love for Communism, but actually there is nothing that can be done to remedy their presence. The public will be happy if the AEC will agree to give no more scholarships to the Communists. And perhaps someday the Commies will realize that they aren't exactly welcome at Carolina. They are simply tolerated.

The Time Is Now

About this time of the year with exams coming up, those students who have been diligently devoting a proper amount of their time to regular study throughout the quarter must be feeling quite calm and relaxed as compared to those students who never seem able to hit the books with any seriousness at all until the last week or last night before final exams.

Those who have been regularly studying already have their own reward in being spared from frantic last minute cramming. Others who have already had their "reward" throughout the quarter with regular parties and very little studying now have a job ahead of them. The day of reckoning is drawing near.

We would like to remind students of the old maxim, better late than never, and also that this is the last weekend before exams start. Weekends are made for good times, so the Carolina outlook seems to be. But we should also be reminded that it would be well worth our time to take this weekend and the weekend during exams and devote this time to serious study. It will look good on the report cards.

—Observations—

Audiences

By "Wink" Locklair

This morning we would like to say a few words about the audience that WAS NOT in Memorial Hall Thursday evening for The North Carolina Symphony's "Pops" concert under the direction of Benjamin Swalin. Before going any further it might be pointed out that the Orchestra gave a spendid program ranging from Schumann and Mendelssohn to Cole Porter and Robert Russell Bennett. And the audience, which could not have been more than several hundred, literally yelled and stomped its feet for additional numbers when the program ended.

The small turnout for this concert may possibly be attributed to numerous Friday morning exams and the hot weather. Money was certainly no object, however, because seats were available as low as fifty cents.

We cannot believe that University students or Chapel Hill residents are so skeptical about the quality or calibre of their State Symphony that they would stay away in such numbers as they did Thursday evening. A recent article in Times magazine as well as favorable comment in many Northern and Southern newspapers has told the Nation what a unique and unusual organization the North Carolina Symphony is and what a valuable asset it is to the State. Yet Chapel Hill, which Mr. Daniels in his HOLIDAY article calls "The Capital of the Southern Mind," was not interested enough in what should be one of its prize possessions to fill more than one-tenth of the auditorium.

It is an interesting problem, sometimes an amusing problem. During the past winter numbers of students and local residents kept the roads hot to Duke University for their expensive series in Page Auditorium. When the Pittsburgh Symphony played there March 1 we recognized three local students who paid $1.50 to stand for the two-hour concert.

Yet this spring our own Student Entertainment Committee brought to the campus Joseph Fuchs, recognized as one of the outstanding violinists in the United States. It was a free concert. An ID card was the ticket for admission. Yet there were hundreds of empty seats!

Embarrassingly—small audiences turned out for other SEC attractions: The internationally famous Trapp Family sang a beautiful program here before row after row of empty seats; Charles Weidman and his Company danced before a similar house. Hazel Scott, whose name and reputation has been long established through records and movies, was the only SEC attraction to draw a full house.

The University of North Carolina excells many other colleges in numerous fields and departments. But our University and its townspeople are certainly lacking in proper appreciation for the opportunity to serve as headquarters for its State Symphony. Not only our Symphony, but even student musicians seldom get decent audiences for their Hill Hall programs, although they in their field work just as hard to give good performances as the football team or the Playmakers. It is a discouraging situation and the answer to the problem is no doubt many-sided.

May is a difficult time for everyone in school, particularly for those who hope to graduate in June. But the situation also existed in November, in January, in March, If students and villagers are leary of our Music Department or our State Symphony—and perhaps some are—it is only fair that they at least give them a hearing.

Our music should be popular and well-known and it should be boosted and encouraged just as we boast about and praise The Tar Heels, our writers colony or our forthcoming Medical School.

There is certainly no objection to anyone from here going to Duke. J. Foster Barnes over there arranges one of the finest series in the South and Page Auditorium is more comfortable than our Memorial Hall.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

EMBARRASSED

Editor:

The peace-time draft, the Truman Doctrine, the Marshall Plan, the war economy, the refusal to de-Nazify and de-cartellize Western Germany, and now the Atlantic Pact and the arms program to folow have all been justified by the claim that Russia intends to attack Western Europe and the United States. Yet what is it that is most perplexing and worrying our statesmen, columnists, and cartoonists at the present time? Is it fear that Russia is about to attack? No, it is the question of what to answer at the coming Four-Power Conference if Russia offers to withdraw her troops from Germany!

It is said that such an offer will be extremely embarrasing to us. It was also embarrasing when she withdrew her troops from Korea even though ours stayed, embarrassing when she offered to submit to international inspection of atomic developments, embarrassing when Shostakovich and Fadeyev came to America to speak of peace and friendship, and most embarrassing when Stalin offered to settle the cold war by conference with President Truman.

I wonder why it is that the apologists for our foreign policy are always embarrassed by an opportunity to acheive a peace settlement with Russia? Our leaders never cease assuring us that their every move is designed to secure peace and avoid war. Then why is there not rejoicing in Washington over the lifting of the blockade and the opportunity to settle the cold war? Why is there instead all this fear of our being embarrassed at the Conference?

There is only one answer. If our policy makers are embarrassed by every move for peace, it must be that they are in fact not interested in peace, but only in continuing the cold war.

You would please print something in the paper and inform the golf lovers as to the progress of the golf course that the University is building.

BLAME

Editor:

"So as the candle fly in search of warmth flies into the candle and is consumed by the flame there of, so many a man in search of security be blinded by the light of Communism and the man as the individual and his freedom be suffocated and perish in the fumes of the flame."

I feel that this is the only explanation that can be offered for Mr. Hans Freistadt. It is such a pity that a man of his intelligence could be blinded by Communistic doctrines that would seek to oppress the rights of a free man which he chooses to hide behind.

We can only blame ourselves for letting him wander further along the bloody trail of Communism since we have given him so MUCH publicity that his head is swollen larger than the Russian bear.

Instead of helping instill the democratic principles of which we at Carolina have been so proud of in the past, we, with the obliging help of the present editor of this paper, have shown him that democracy has failed, and therefore we have failed our school and the sacred principles on which it was founded.

CORRECTION, PLEASE

Editor:

I would like to make a correction to an article regarding the University Party's elections yesterday. I have never been a delegate to the NC Student Legislature.

LOYALTY

Editor:

I do not believe in Hans Freistadt and his brand of "Loyalty," The system under which a man is exposed to public chastisement and almost sure punishment by a denunciation to civil authorities behind his back is the method of Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia. These are the very things we, including Mr. Cherry, have fought the last war to end.

I do not believe that there was any justification in Cherry's writing Senator Hoey and having him withhold his name. Neither do I believe there was any justification in Senator Hoey's naming Cherry "a fine, patriotic North Carolina G.I. student." If this is patriotic action, the way in which it was carried out, I'll have none of it. Mr. Cherry's act is comparable only to the denunciation of parents by their own children in Soviet Russia.

If the United States were to adopt such methods as Mr. Cherry has, we would be denying one of the inalienable rights of Americans and substituting one of the seeming principles of Soviet justice. That is, denying a man the right to believe what he will and substituting for that the right of the state to punish a man for the possible consequences of his act or beliefs regardless of his intentions.

NO FREISTADT

Editor:

Thank you so much for the picture of Mr. Peerce, but I think I'll pass up "Merchant of Venice" this year.

I noticed the other day in your paper you had a piece about a Mr. Hans Freistadt. It amazes me how you people do get taken in! Freistadt, Schmeistadt! Obviously, there is no such person, and the so-called Freistadt is really just a figment of Bill Robertson's all-too-vivid imagination.

Observe what happens. First comes a letter by Robertson. Then comes a letter by some uninitiate taking issue with Robertson. Then wham! Like the jaws of a steel trap, the mighty mind signed Freistadt closes in on the unsuspecting victim and proves how right, how very right, Robertson was in the first place.

If Freistadt is anybody, he is no doubt Bill Robertson's mother. And since we have already shown Robertson to be Bob Smith—or was that Dunnagan?—that makes Hans really a Greesboro housewife who ought to stick to her distaff.

Please explain to Jack Stormtrooper English that I ain't defending nobody. And if you are going to continue this Freistadt hoax, may I suggest the following rule to assist in spelling—"I before E except after Hans."

U.N.C. GIRLS

Editor:

Those U.N.C. girls who, disguised as men, entered some of our dormitories missed the main ring of the three-ring circus. The most out-standing of the "verboten" off-limits places on the State College Campus is the BACHELOR TRAILER COURT.

The girls were fifty feet away, yet they missed it completely; they didn't know it was there! ! ! That would have really been a feather in their caps—if they had paid us a visit.

They may be able to fool some of the naive, not-dry-behind-the-ears kids in the dormitories (these kids don't know yet there are two sexes)—but they can't fool the old veterans in the BACHELOR TRAILER CAMP.

Sun, Infirmary

By Jimmy Rutherford

This is certainly beautiful weather we are having. The whole world seems to be immersed in a bath of golden sunshine, a sunshine whose rays seem to assemble on the top of the girls' dorms. Just think that the weather man can look in those girls eyes and tell whether. The man in the moon was never quite so interesting as a girl in the sun. The bathing suits certainly don't possess the new look. If brevity is the soul of wit, these new bathing suits should cause much laughter. I gave my coed friend a new bathing suit and you should have seen her beam when she put it on.

She is really a nice girl. It took me many dates before I could kiss her on the campus. This next week I'm going to see if I cas kiss her on the face. I asked her if I could kiss her around the corner but she said that was going too far and so I asked her if I could kiss her hand but she said that was out of place. And I finally kissed her where she sat.

I tried to bribe her once. I gave her a blue fox muff for letting me hold her hand. I gave her an ermine cape for letting me hug her. She let me kiss her so I gave her a mink, but then she said that was fur enough. You see she was the clergyman's daughter so you couldn't put any thing pastor.

Only one time was she ever the subject for gossip. When she was living in a boarding house, idle gossip had it that she was going around with a handsome boarder—but it turned out to be an ugly rumor.

A friend of mine is in the Infirmary this week because of a wreck. He was driving along with one arm on the steering wheel and one around his date when she yelled to use both hands: he misunderstood.

I decided to go down and see how he was getting along. While I was down there I heard and saw many interesting things. I learned that a woman usually gets rid of a headache with a pill, and vice versa. They had one boy down there who had swallowed a quarter and his girl friend kept asking the nurse if there was any change yet? They had a masseur down there one day. He's the guy who gives the massages. He keeps everything well in hand and lives off the fat of the land.

One guy, a little drunk, hobbled in and told the doctors he was a little stiff from badminton. I don't see that where he comes from makes any difference. He was a bartender—he worked the swig shift.

OVERHEARD: "Doctor," said the patient, "my trouble is my dreams. I always dream the same thing—about the girls' dormitories and the girls are running around lightly clad."

"Ah yes," said the doctor, "and you want me to make you stop dreaming about them?"

"NO NO—all I want you to do is make them stop slamming the doors."

A boy and his mother stood looking at the dentist's showcase. "If I had to have false teeth, mother, I would take that pair," said the boy pointing.

"Quiet, Junior," said his mother, "haven't I always told you not to pick your teeth in public?"

And then there's the illegitimate Rice Krispie who had snap, crackle but no pop!

Coming back from my room from the Infirmary, I overheard two of our common pidgeons talking. It seems that the lady bird had gone out shopping and the hubby asked, when she returned, did she buy anything? She said she didn't buy anything, but did make a deposit on a new hat.

Tar Heels Place 17 Men In Conference Track Finals

Terps Running Second With 15; Finals in All 15 Events Today

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Carolina's defending champions set the pace in the qualification trials of the 25th annual Southern Conference outdoor track meet at Fetzer Field here yesterday as expected.

The Tar Heel thinclads qualified 17 men for today's finals in the ten events in which trials were held. Maryland, '48 runner-up and the team expected to give the defending champs the most trouble tomorrow, qualified 15 men for the finals. Duke was third with 11 qualifiers and Virginia Tech took six.

Action today is expected to get underway at 2:30 with finals in four field events.

Several record are expected to be broken during the course of action today. Some of the performances turned in by the contestants yesterday indicate that records may be set in the javelin, high hurdles, 220 and the half-mile. Another record, which may fall, is the two-mile grind.

Carolina's Bob Kirk, who paced the javelin tossers yesterday with a far-reaching throw of 210 ft. 7 in., is given a very good chance to crack the standard of 211 ft. ½ in. set by Carolina's LeGore in 1934.

Dick Taylor, Tar Heel hurdle ace, is rated the top hurdler in the meet and Taylor could conceivably establish a new mark in the 120-yard highs. The present record is 14.3 and was set by Tar Heel Bob Corpening in 1939. Taylor has run under 14.5 several times this season.

Time Schedule
(Finals in all events)

2:30	Pole vault
	High jump
	Javelin throw
	Shot put
3:00	Mile run
3:10	440-yard dash
3:15	Broad jump
	Discus throw
3:20	880-yard dash
3:30	120-yard high hurdles
3:40	880-yard run
3:50	220-yard dash
4:00	Two-mile run
4:20	220-yard low hurdles
4:30	Mile relay

Magill to Seek Record

Tar Heel distance man Sam Magill will be out to break the two-mile record of 9:33.2 set by Liddell of Virginia Military Institute here last year. Magill ran a 9:25.6 eight-lap stint at the Penn Relays last month and he will make an attempt to better that performance.

Any one of the entries in the star-studded field of sprinters could crack the present record for the 100-yard dash. That mark is 9.8 and is held jointly by five contestants. Maryland's Bill Alexion, winner of heats in both the 100 and 220 yesterday, ranks as the favorite.

Other records may pass into history today with some of the top competition in the South vieing for the various individual titles.

These Made It!

100-yard dash—Alexion (Md.) 10.2, Davis (Duke) 10.4, Crimmins (UNC), Beavers (VPI), Goldberg (NCS), Meriwether (VPI).

220-yard dash—Alexion (Md.) 21.5, McGowan (Md.) 22.2, Young (Duke) 22.6, Goldberg (NCS), Meriwether (VPI), Crimmins (UNC).

440-yard dash—Matthews (Md.) 50.3, Young (Duke) 50.3, Ostrye (Md.), Harrison (VMI), Robertson (VMI), Terrell (UNC).

880-yard run—Holden (UNC) 1:58.9, MacKenzie (UNC) 1:59.6, Hooper (UNC), Palmer (Md.), Umbarger (Md.), Bullock (Duke).

120-yard high hurdles — Taylor (UNC) 15.0, Morrow (UNC) 15.0, Moody (UNC), Rhubach (Md.), Reeves (Duke), McLear (VPI).

220-yard low hurdles — Reeves (Duke) 24.6, Morrow (UNC) 24.8, Taylor (UNC), Rhubach (Md.), McLear (VPI), Doffart (Clemson).

Shot put—Seligman (UNC) 47 ft. 1⅜ in., O'Leary (Duke) 46 ft. 1⅛ in., Hoitsma (W&M) 46 ft. 8¾ in., Creekmur (W&M) 45 ft. 10¾ in., Eichorn (Md.) 45 ft. 8¾ in., Holshouser (Clemson) 44 ft. 11½ in.

Javelin throw—Kirk (UNC) 210 ft. 7½ in., House (UNC) 188 ft. 10½ in., Cheek (Duke) 182 ft. 2¾ in., Tyrell (Md.) 180 ft. 11½ in., Eichorn (Md.) 179 ft. 7 in., Kozay (Md.) 175 ft. 5½ in.

Broad jump—Reeves (Duke) 23 ft. 5 in., Wilson (Md.) 23 ft. 2⅝ in., (Duke) 22 ft. 7½ in., Bell (VMI) 22 Moody (UNC) 22 ft. 11⅞ in., Bridge ft. 4⅞ in., McGill (USC) 22 ft.

Discus throw—Seligman (UNC) 145 ft. 3 in., Vann (Dav.) 137 ft. 4 in., O'Leary (Duke) 136 ft. 8 in., Ogden (UNC) 135 ft., Hawley (Md.) 129 ft. 3½ in., Ruffin (VPI).

Strong in Hurdles

Carolina looked especially strong in the hurdles yesterday. Of the six qualifiers in today's finals of the 120-yard highs, three represent the Tar Heel institution. Dick Taylor, '48 titlist, Bob Morrow and Jack Moody will carry the Blue and White today. In the lows Taylor and Moody will also run for Carolina.

A big surprise in the Tar Heel camp yesterday was the amazing javelin toss by Bob House. House, who has been tossing around 175 ft. all year, flung the spear well over 188 ft. yesterday to move closer to Kirk's brilliant toss.

Maryland, however, placed three men in the finals. Ike Eichorn, Tom Tyrrell and Nick Kozay will represent the Old Liners today.

Maryland in Dashes

Coach Jim Kehoe's Old Liners turned in the afternoon's best showing in the dash trials. Alexion copped firsts in the 100 and 220 with times of 10.2 and 21.5 respectively. Team mate George McGowan is also in the finals, but another teammate, Ed Matthews, who finished third here last year, was eliminated in the trials.

Carolina co-captain Julian MacKenzie and team mate Halsted Holden won their respective heats in the half. Tar Heel Frank Hooper, Old Liners Jim Umbarger and Bob Palmer and Duke's Henry Bullock also qualified.

Carolina Nine Seeks Fourth Victory Over Blue Devils At Durham Today

Something strange and new will be attempted this afternoon over at Duke's baseball stadium because when the Tar Heels take to the field at 3:00 to do battle with Duke's baseballers, Ray Blair will not be on the mound for the Carolina nine.

This startling bit of news, originating directly from coaches Bunn Hearn and Walt Rabb, comes as a surprise to all the local baseball addicts who were beginning to think that Blair against Duke was as natural as ice cream and cake.

Carolina has been pitted against the Durham collegians four times this year and each time, Blair has toed the rubber for the Tar Heels. He has been fairly successful in his assigned chores too. Carolina emerged victorious in the first three contests behind Blair, but in the last clash, the Dukesters caught on to his stuff to defeat the Tar Heels, 11-9.

Tranavitch to Go

Perhaps this recent rude handling of their ace chucker by the Blue Devils has influenced the Carolina mentors' minds because fast-throwing Andy Tranavitch has received the twirling nod for today's labor. Tranavitch, a right-hander from Massachusetts, has only hurled one Big Four game, that a losing effort against State, and this afternoon he will have a chance to even up his Big Four record.

The starting Duke hurler is at the present an unknown quantity but if past form holds true, the Carolina slugging ensemble of Rip Ryan, Stan Goodman, Sid Varney and Co. shouldn't have much trouble in giving Tranavitch a couple of runs to work with.

Sedgefield Tennis

GREENSBORO, May 20—Vic Seixas, University of North Carolina tennis star seeded first in the Sedgefield Tennis tourney advanced to the semi-finals here today by winning second and quarter-final rounds. He defeated Joe Melvin of High Point in his first match, 6-2, 6-0, and eliminated Bill Corrigan of Greensboro, 6-3, 6-0.

Seixas and Clark Taylor teamed up in doubles play to defeat Melvin and Henry Maddus, 6-2, 6-1, in today's second round matches and advanced to the semi-finals by defeating Corrigan and Bob McCuiston, 6-2, 6-1.

Two more Tar Heels, Heath Alexander and Don Skakle reached the semi-finals by virtue of a quarter final round win over Norman Wiley and Luke Abels, 6-2, 6-1.

Carolina Freshmen Baseballers Meet Blue Imps Here Today

Coach Henry House's freshman baseballers will be in quest of their eleventh win of the season this afternoon when they take on Duke University's Blue Imps at Emerson Stadium at 3 o'clock.

The local yearlings have a creditable record of ten wins, two losses, and one tie thus far this year, including 14-3 and 14-6 decisions over the junior Blue Devils. The Dukesters managed a 6-6 tie in their other contest with the Carolina nine.

Monroe Johnson is expected to start on the mound for the Tar Babies. The ace righthander has a season record of five wins and one loss.

The only two defeats suffered by the locals were at the hands of the State frosh. The Tar Babies will meet the Wolfcubs Tuesday for the Big Four freshman crown.

The batting averages for the regulars are as follows:

Bill Reeves	.363
Ben Smith	.347
Russell Whitehead	.321
Charlie Overman	.269
Lawrence Cheek	.214
Mark Herring	.200
Bill Lambert	.200
Gene Smith	.159
Ed Norris	.133
Bob Stewart	.123

The batting averages for the pitchers, with their records inclosed in parentheses: Henry Schacht .300 (2-0), Monroe Johnson .533 (5-1), Charlie Bridger .333 (1-1), Roger Paschal .500 (1-0).

In Little Big Four competition Coach House's outfit has a record of seven wins, including a clean sweep of their four game series with Wake Forest's Baby Deacons and a 4-0 shutout over State.

Stickmen Engage Strong Cavaliers On Navy Field

The University of Virginia's lacrosse team will invade Chapel Hill this afternoon to engage the Carolina squad on the Navy Field at 2:30. The Cavaliers appear to be the strongest team the Tar Heels have met this year. Coach Darden's team will be almost at full strength for this tussle and should put up quite a struggle.

The visiting team is composed almost entirely of Baltimore players, who have at least six or seven years of experience in various prep schools in Maryland.

The Virginia attack will feature one of the best players in collegiate circles and who will undoubtedly be the biggest headache of the Carolina defensemen. Billy Hooper is a product of St. Pauls school in Baltimore, where he played four years under the leadership of Howdy Myers, who at present is coaching the National Intercollegiate Champions, Johns Hopkins.

Billy has played for Mt. Washington, also of Baltimore, which has been the National Open Champion for four years. He has a brilliant style of play and it is almost impossible to keep him from scoring. Captain Bobby Proutt and Jerry Humphreys are two other standouts from the same school. The Cavaliers have a large crew of experienced players, all of whom will probably see considerable action. The scoring punch will be led by Bert Sadtler, Hooper, and John Burch. Another bulwark in the lineup is Sammy Merideth, who at one time lived in Baltimore, and now resides in New York state.

The Blue and White will fashion a sizzling attack which will spell trouble for the boys from Charlottesville.

Technicality Causes TMA President To Fire, Then Rehire Committeemen

Town Mens' Association President Ralph Hebb removed and then reappointed two representatives of TMA to the Dance Committee and University Club at the regular bi-weekly meeting of the Association Thursday in Graham Memorial.

The move by Hebb was prompted by a clause in the TMA constitution which states that the TMA president and his appointees be representatives of the organization. Bob Padrick, DC representative and Ben James, UC representative—the two removed and reinstated—were appointed by former President Nelson Taylor, just prior to Hebb's taking office.

The post of TMA representative to the Graham Memorial Board of Directors is still open for appointment. Several members are under consideration by Hebb and the executive committee, Hebb stated. Selection will be made at the next meeting of the committee, he said.

Further plans were made for the TMA list of rooms that will be compiled for next fall, giving the location of rooms available in town for incoming students. Tentative plans for a TMA party during the summer months were also laid at the meeting.

Hebb set the date of the next Association meeting as the first Thursday of the Summer Session.

It was disclosed that Hickenlooper, who was chairman of the McMahon committee in the 80th Congress, wrote to Lilienthal last July and again in January warning that fellowship candidates should be more carefully screened to make sure the government did not help educate potential subversives.

McMahon said he plans to see to it that all fellowships granted to Communists are withdrawn, and that he favors "full FBI investigations" of all future candidates.

He said specifically that he will see to it that Edelman does not receive any further federal money. The physician has been studying since last January on a fellowship providing $3,000 a year.

Prof. Earl Slocum of the University Music Department, director of the Band, will direct a concert to be given by the student musical group near the Davie Poplar tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock. In case of rain the concert will be moved to Hill Hall. A feature of the concert will be a folk song suite by Vaughan Williams, written originally for the concert band. A number of light and semi-classical selections will be played.

LAST DAY TO REGISTER

Monday is the last day that general college students may pre-register for the fall quarter. No appointments will be made and students will be registered on the first come first served basis.

Dr. Nash to Talk At Y Job Forum

Dr. Arnold Nash, head of the University's Department of Religion, will speak on the "Inner Personality" at the fourth YWCA-sponsored job forum to be held Monday night at 7 o'clock in the school building.

The first three forums have featured talks on "The First Interview," "Dressing on a Salary," and "Getting the Best Use From Your Powder Puff."

"How do you like the way college girls are constantly falling in love with your husband?" someone asked.

Aimee replied that it didn't bother her a bit. At the time she had planned on staying in Raleigh Sunday night when Jimmy comes over to the Hill for "Music Under the Stars." After hearing that he was to have supper at the Alpha Gam house, however, she changed her mind.

"It's not that I don't trust him," she said. "But I think maybe it would be a good idea for me to come along."

John and Jenny Rembert Art Show Opens Tomorrow in Grade School

An exhibition of fifty paintings by John and Jenny Rembert in recognition of the work they have done in the Chapel Hill Elementary school will open tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in the school building.

The exhibition, sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association, is scheduled through May 27.

At the end of the present school term, the Remberts will leave for Beloit, Wisc., where Mr. Rembert will teach art at Beloit College. Mrs. Rembert has been teaching art for two years in the elementary school here, assisted by her husband who is also an instructor in the University of North Carolina. The PTA is sponsoring the show to express its appreciation for the couple's contribution to art education, and also to give an opportunity for the public to see an exhibit of their work here for perhaps the last time.

Mr. Rembert, who is a graduate of Columbia University and th University of North Carolina, will show "The Tragedy of Blind Mans Bluff," an oil; "Legend of Fire," from Milton Abernaty collection; and a treatment of a circus theme called "Carnival of Fright." Included in the group by Jenny Rembert will be "Laura," a symbolic treatment of a character in Tennessee Williams' play "The Glass Menagerie," "Field Hands who are Lovers," and "Black Narcissus."

The exhibit will reveal themetic as well as decorative paintings and studies based on figure painting. Many of the paintings have been borrowed from the State Art Collection in Raleigh as well as from private collections.

The PTA committee on arrangements is composed of Mrs. Oscar K. Rice, Mrs. E. A. Cameron, Mrs. A. E. Fink, Mrs. M. A. Abernathy, Mrs. W. G. Morgan, Mrs. John Foushee, Mrs. Richard Jente, Mrs. Cecil Johnson, Mrs. Henry Brandis, Mrs. Harold Walters, Mrs. William Newman, and Mrs. Albert Coates.

Tar Heels Win Southern Conference Track Meet

PICTURED ABOVE ARE the director and staff members of the Roanoke Island Fine Arts Center to be conducted by the University of North Carolina Extension Division again this summer at Manteo in connection with Paul Green's "The Lost Colony."

Left to right: Mrs. Darice Parker, a member of the University Extension staff, who is director of the Center; Prof. Paul Young of the University Music Department, who will teach courses in music; Miss Elizabeth Welch of the Salem College faculty, who will instruct in speech and play directing, and William Meade Prince, well known Chapel Hill artist and illustrator, who will offer courses in painting.

Arts Center To Feature Music, Drama, Painting

Manteo School Is Devoted Entirely to Arts; High School Grads, College Students Eligible

By Bill Johnson

Music, drama, and painting will be the featured subjects of the Roanoke Island Fine Arts Center when it opens in Manteo on July 11 under the direction of Mrs. Darice Parker.

The Center, unique in that it is the only such school in the South devoted entirely to the Arts, will be open to graduates of standard high schools, college students from any institution, teachers desiring certification credit, and mature students not working for credit.

The staff of instructors for the various phases of the six-weeks course have been selected for their specialized training and experience in the particular fields of interest, and each of them have been approved by the academic departments of the University.

William Meade Prince, well-known illustrator and artist, will be in charge of the courses in painting. Prince, who lives in Chapel Hill, has recently displayed his works in one-man art exhibits in Raleigh and in New York City. The paintings represented 20 years of association and experience with art.

Paul Young, director of the University of North Carolina Glee Clubs, who recently announced that he has accepted a position with the University of Illinois, will direct the Art Center courses in music. This will be the last work done by Young for the University.

The drama phase of the summer session will be taught by Elizabeth Welch of the Salem College faculty. Miss Welch, who at one time studied under Professor Frederick Koch, has been associated with the Carolina Dramatic Association for a number of years. She will place particular emphasis on speech and play directing in her courses at the Center.

Veterans may attend the Fine Arts Center under the G. I. Bill of Rights, and any veterans who are interested are urged to apply for their certificates of eligibility through the Veterans Administration offices in Winston-Salem. These certificates must be presented at the time of registration.

Cox Will Present Recital in Hill

Richard Cox, baritone and senior music major from Raleigh, will present a recital in Hill Hall this afternoon at 3:30. For the past three years he has studied voice with Paul Young. He has been heard here in a sophomore recital, a junior recital, and as soloist with the Men's Glee Club. He is a member of Phi Mu Alpha music fraternity and of Phi Beta Kappa.

Cox's program includes songs from Schumann's "Dichterliebe," arias from Mozart's "Zauberflote" and Wagner's "Tannhauser" and "Meistersinger," and songs by Scarlatti, Faure, Chausson, Duparc, and others.

Final 'Merchant' Showing Tonight

"The Merchant of Venice," produced by the Carolina Playmakers under the direction of Kai Jurgensen, will be presented for the last time tonight at 8:30 in the Forest Theatre. This performance will mark the last of the major productions by the Playmakers this season.

The setting was designed and executed by Lynn Gault, the costumes were by Irene Smart, and the lighting was by James Byrd.

In case of rain, the Shakespeare drama will be played on the next clear night.

Jacobs Elected NCSPI Prexy At Meet Here

Spearman, Rankin Named to Committee

Miss Donnie Lou Jacobs of Durham was elected president of the North Carolina Scholastic Press Institute at the seventh annual meeting of high school publications editors held yesterday in Swain Hall. The Journalism Department and the Extension Division of the University sponsored the meeting, with the cooperation of the Daily Tar Heel and the State Department of Public Instruction.

Other new officers include Bonny McRae of Salisbury, vice-president; Carolyn Andrews of High Point, secretary; Tommy Lupton of Greenville, treasurer; Miss Jessie Belle Lewis of Chapel Hill, faculty adviser for newspapers; and Miss Hermine Carraway of Wadesboro, adviser for annuals. The executive committee will consist of these officers and Walter Spearman of the Journalism Department, director of the institute, and E. R. Rankin of the Extension Division of the University.

The day's program included a business session presided over by Heywood Washburn of High Point, reports on high school press association by Donnie Lou Jacobs of Durham, Barbara Hutton of Greensboro, Ruell Tyson, Jr. of Greenville, and Heywood Washburn.

Dick Jenrette of Raleigh and Frank Allston of Arlington, Va., both of the Daily Tar Heel staff, discussed problems of newspaper editors. Alice Sharpe of Jacksonville, Fla. and Arthur G. Murphey, Jr. of Macon, Miss., both of the Yackety Yack staff, discussed problems of yearbook editors. At the conclusion of the business program delegates attended a showing at the Morehead Planetarium.

Rolling up seven first places and setting two new records, North Carolina's powerful track teams swept the 25th annual running of the Southern Conference outdoor track meet at Fetzer Field here yesterday afternoon before 2,000 spectators.

Surprising Duke pulled the upset of the afternoon by nosing out highly-regarded Maryland for second-place honors. The Blue Devils racked up 47½ points to 45 for the Marylanders.

In winning the meet, the Tar Heels retained the conference

Faculty to Hear Albright Address

R. Mayne Albright, Raleigh lawyer, radio commentator and former candidate for Governor, will be the speaker for the final meeting of the University Men's Faculty Club for the spring quarter Tuesday, May 24, at the Carolina Inn at 1 o'clock.

The subject of Mr. Albright's talk will be "Review of the 1949 North Carolina Legislature." He will be introduced by Walter Spearman, president of the Faculty Club.

A graduate of the class of 1931 at the University, Mr. Albright received his master's degree and law degree from the University and was president of the student body and director of Graham Memorial.

Capps Will Emcee At 'Stars' Program

Jimmy Capps, popular master of the turntable for station WPTF's "Our Best to You" will bring his "music which is designed to be heard with the heart" to the campus tonight in a two hour personal appearance romantic interlude from the porch of Graham Memorial.

From 9 to 11 o'clock tonight, Capps will send his sentimental notes across the campus as part of the University Club sponsored series, "Music Under the Stars."

Communist Issue To Come Before Board Of Trustees

Board Will Discuss Controversy Aroused by Freistadt Fellowship

By Margaret Gaston

The position of Communists in the field of education will come under discussion at the regular spring meeting of the full board of Trustees convening here Tuesday at 11 o'clock.

Although no agenda for the meeting has been released the national controversy which has been raging during the last two weeks over the award of a government research fellowship to Hans Freistadt, Communist student here, makes it almost certain that the subject will come before the trustees.

Freistadt, who is a graduate assistant instructor in the physics department, appeared last Wednesday before the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee which is investigating the $1,600 grant he received from the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission to finance postgraduate studies in non-secret phases of nuclear physics at the University.

After Freistadt testified, Congress was informed that the atomic fellowship would be withdrawn.

On Friday, Odus Mull of Shelby, former Speaker of the State House of Representatives, in a letter to Victor Bryant of Durham, chairman of the Board, and to all other trustees, asked that Freistadt be discharged as a part-time instructor at the University.

J. R. Cherry, Jr., veteran student and resident of Victory Village, touched off the atomic scholarship storm in Washington when he wrote Sen. Clyde R. Hoey that Freistadt had been awarded the fellowship, which would have been effective July 1. The issue was brought on the floor of the Senate by Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) and Senator Hoey.

The trustees will meet Tuesday either in the faculty lounge of the Morehead Building or in Gerrard Hall, Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., said yesterday. The meeting is scheduled for 11 o'clock and from 60 to 70 members are expected, Carmichael said.

The Consolidated University Committee of Chancellors will make reports and recommendations to the Board, he added.

INSISTING THAT he can be a "loyal American" and a Communist as well, Hans Freistadt, naturalized American is shown testifying in Washington before the joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee. His award of a $1,600 fellowship, under the Atomic Energy Commission's educational program, has been challenged.

Opinion is Split On Loyalty Tests

WASHINGTON, May 21.—(UP)—Congressional opinion was split today over how far the Government should go in determining the loyalty of applicants for its atomic fellowships.

Some lawmakers said the FBI should investigate all applications. Others, however, said they believe applicants merely should be required to sign non-subversive affadavits.

It appeared likely that, despite the objections of some scientists, Congress finally will resolve the controversy by providing for FBI inquiries.

A Senate Appropriations subcommittee and the joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee have been investigating the need for tightening up the security requirements of the Atomic Energy Commission's fellowship program. Commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal has admitted that three alleged communists have received fellowship awards.

He and other commission officials have indicated, however, that they are ready and willing to withdraw any fellowship granted to a member of the Communist party.

Orientation Positions To Be Filled Tonight

Applicants to Be Interviewed in GM; Open to Any Male on Campus

Interviews with men students who wish to serve as orientation counselors next year will be conducted by the Orientation Committee in student government offices, second floor of Graham Memorial, tonight starting at 7:15, Chairman Al Lowenstein announced yesterday.

This is the first year the counseling positions have been open to the entire student body. Any men students who are willing to return to Chapel Hill several days before the beginning of classes may apply. Tonight's is the last of two interview sessions, the other having been held Thursday night.

Names of the counselors selected from the applicants will appear in Tuesday's Daily Tar Heel, and they will be required to attend a meeting Tuesday night at 7:30.

Clerk Charleen Greer has announced that all committee members who are giving interviews should report to the offices at 7 o'clock tonight.

Rooms Available For Graduation

There will be no charge for dormitory accomodations for parents, wives and husbands of degree candidates, as well as returning alumni to the University of North Carolina Commencement June 4, 5, 6, it was announced here today by James Wadsworth, campus housing officer.

He said reservations should be made through his office at 22 New East Annex, Chapel Hill, at the earliest possible date because of the shortage of hotel space in this vicinity.

A room assignment desk for reservations will be opened at the Alumni Office at the Carolina Inn on Saturday morning, June 4, at 9 o'clock, and it will remain open through Tuesday morning, June 7. Room assignments and keys to rooms will be given upon arrival of guests, he explained. The rooms will be supplied with linen and towels.

Air Reserve Group To Meet Tomorrow

The regular monthly meeting of the 601st Composite Squadron, U. S. Air Force Reserve, will be held tomorrow evening at 7:30 in 103 Bingham Hall. This meeting will be of interest to Reserve personnel of the Air Force in this vicinity. Lt. James Brewer of the staff of the Marietta Air Force Base will be here to discuss the completely revised system of the Reserve training approved only a few days ago by the Air Force.

Nash Is Speaker At Y Job Forum

The fourth in a series of the First Job Forum, presented by the Careers Committe of the YWCA, will be held tomorrow night at 7 o'clock in Gerrard Hall, with Dr. Arnold Nash, head of the University's Department of Religion, as speaker.

Dr. Nash, whose talk is entitled "The Inner Personality," will speak on the relationship of people in the business world and how best to get along with employers and associate workers.

The Careers Committee has sponsored the First Job Forum during the month of May in an effort to acquaint girls who will be working after graduation or during the summer months with some of the problems encountered in the business world. The first program in the series featured talks concerning "The First Interview." Programs which followed concerned "Dressing on a Salary" and "Making the Most of Your Powder Puff."

Mina Lamarr, chairman of the committee, has worked with Miss Betsy Parker of the University Placement Service in planning the First Job Forum.

Religion Professor To Speak at Colgate

Dr. B. W. Anderson, Gray Professor of Biblical Literature, will speak at Colgate University this weekend. Dr. Anderson, who taught at Colgate for two years before coming to the University will give a sermon in the Chapel Program Series on Sunday entitled "The Glory of God and the Dignity of Man."

Do-Nothings Frapped For Kalvyries In Unusual Pot-Clanging Ceremony

By Sally Woodhull

In one of the funniest, if not most impressive, ceremonies seen on campus, four members and one honorary member were recently frapped by Kalvyries, honorary for non-contributing and uninterested women.

Draped in white sheets and wearing on their heads everything from lamp shades to faded bouquets, ridiculous figures invaded their victims' rooms, announcing their arrival by clanging on pots and pans.

Those frapped include Lucille Conley, senior from Wilmington; juniors Judy Nunnally, Roanoke, Va., Mike Merker, Westfield, N. J., and Jean Sloan, Charlotte; and one honorary member journalism instructor Lola Mustard.

Following the frapping and initiation ceremonies, new frapees were guests at the traditional Kalvyrie Banquet.

Organized about four years ago, Kalvyries is an exclusive honorary, limiting its membership to only 98 per cent of the women students at the University.

Members are chosen on the basis of Kalvyrie qualifications, primarily the three E's—no energy, no effort, no enthusiasm. The song is the "Dickie Bird Song," and the flower is the Carolina creeper. Motto of the group is "If nominated, I will not run; if elected I will not serve." Official furniture is the lazy Susan.

Miss Mustard is the first faculty member to have been chosen by this lowest campus order. An associate member is Mrs. Sedalia Gold, house mother in Carr dormitory and formerly at the Pi Phi house.

Other inactive Kalvyries include Susan Walton, Gladys Cottrell, Sally Ann Cordon, Roberta Huffman, Liddy Bet Myatt, Weddy Thorp, Jean Roberts, Hunter Bell, Charmian Griffin, and Ducky Williams.

Respect Others' Opinions

What shall be done with the Communists? Shall the Taft-Hartley Act be retained, modified, or repealed? Should the use of atomic energy be internationally controlled? Should we have world government? Do we need socialized medicine? What shall we look for in choosing a mate? What shall be done to prevent a depression? Such problems affecting the health, welfare, and future of every one of us arise every day.

Great religious thinkers throughout the centuries have sought to give us the criteria by which we may be able to determine whether a policy we espouse brings us closer to the Brotherhood of Man and the Fatherhood of God. Amos demanded justice; Hosea asked for love; Isaiah pleaded for a life of holiness; and Micah synthesized these teachings into the following phrase:

"It hath been told thee, O man, what is good,
And what the Lord doth require of thee:
Only to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

It is often difficult to decide what is justice or mercy in a specific situation. Well-meaning and sincere people have been known to disagree on vital and crucial issues. The justices of the United States Supreme Court have handed down many 5 to 4 decisions and have even reversed themselves. The question as to whether we should have dropped an atomic bomb on Hiroshima and then on Nagasaki is, to say the least, a moot one. The tremendous loss of life, especially among children, makes many of us wonder if it was a just act, let alone a merciful one. On the other hand, the explosion of the atomic bomb did bring V-J day much earlier than expected and thus probably lessened the loss of life.

Decisions, however, must be made or we would find ourselves fixed and immobile between the horns of a delimma. When action, therefore, becomes necessary we should then act on the basis of the knowledge we have and out of a sincere belief that our behavior is just and merciful. Unfortunately, we all too often have to rely on future developments to determine whether we have complied with Micah's injunction to do justly and to love mercy. In brief, there is no person who can justifiably claim that he possesses the only answer for a specific problem; for, as yet, we have not reached perfection. Nevertheless, too many of us are prone to think that we alone have the absolute truth and arrogantly brush aside people of unquestionable integrity just because they happen to disagree with us. Arrogance and self-righteousness as an approach to the problems facing our society can have gravest consequences in a heavily charged world where the weapons at our command possess terrifying destructive power.

For this reason, the last exhortation of Micah's phrase that we walk humbly with God has such great meaning for us today. Since we cannot be sure whether what we do is just or merciful, we should present our views in humility, realizing that there are other answers which have merit and deserve at least open-minded consideration. This is a pattern of democratic living arising from the religious value—respect for the dignity of the individual. The great Judeo-Christian tradition frowns upon arrogance and self-righteousness and calls upon us to acknowledge in humility our weaknesses and our blind-spots. A person with religious values will never worship his own strength and his own wisdom. The Italian fascists considered the Duce as always right and the Nazi's believed Hitler's intuition to be faultless and without error. Their arrogance brought pain and grief to the world and destruction to themselves.

The moment has come for us to be more humble in our dealings with one another. For then we may be able to observe with the psalmist,

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is,
For brethren to dwell together in unity!"

Rabbi Samuel Perlman

About the Outdoor Pool

Almost two weeks ago, the Daily Tar Heel contained an editorial requesting that the University's outdoor pool behind Woollen Gymnasium be opened to the students. No action has been taken on the matter, and right now the pool stands filled with rain water and leaves.

Although only a little more than a week remains before school is out, it still seems that the pool should be opened. Most students who do not attend summer school have never had an opportunity to swim in this beautiful outdoor pool.

The weather has been plenty warm for swimming. Students leave Chapel Hill en masse for the beach each weekend, and Hogan's Lake and other neighboring locales are literally jammed with students. The indoor pool is filled with students every afternoon, but with warm weather here, nearly everyone prefers to swim outdoors. The outdoor pool should have been opened weeks ago, but it is still not too late for the students to derive some benefit from it.

PLATTER MATTER

By Zane Robbins

They've been raving about Rodgers' and Hammerstein's great new hit, South Pacific, ever since its New England opening, and with just cause. We haven't seen it, but if the acting is as good as the music, the play might well smash all Broadway records. The one-half million dollar advance sale on the Great White Way was a good start in the right direction.

The musical, an adaptation of James A. Michener's Pulitzer Prize-winning "Tales of the South Pacific," is centered around a couple of spare-time romances that occurred on a small Pacific island during the late war.

Mary Martin returns to the Broadway stage for the first time in three years to give a stellar performance as Ensign Nellie Forbush, the young Arkansas nurse who falls in love with Emile de Becque, a middle-age French planter. Ezio Pinza plays the part of de Becque excellently in his first role in the legitimate theatre.

A secondary romance finds Lt. Joseph Cable (William Tabbert) in love with Liat (Barbara Luna), a beautiful Tonkinese girl.

The two love affairs have contradictory climaxes. The end of the play finds Nellie in love with de Becque after a somewhat rocky romance that had threatened to part the two, but for Cable and Liat the ending is a tragedy. The lieutenant, realizing that their marriage would never be accepted in the United States because of the racial differences, decides that the situation is hopeless, volunteers for a dangerous mission, and is killed in action.

Following are reviews of eight of the selections, with the other to be presented next week.

Overture

Dites Mo'i, A Cock Eyed Optimist

The album, starring the original Broadway cast, opens with "Overture" played by Musical Director Salvatore Dell'Isola and the orchestra, which affords a delightful taste of things to come. It opens with "Bali Ha'i," moves into a much faster tempo, and ends with the melodic "Some Enchanted Evening." "Mo'i," sung in native tongue by Barbara Luna is perhaps the slowest part of the musical. "Optimist," although short, is a lively tune with ear-pleasing qualities. Vocal is by Mary Martin.

Twin Soliloquies

Some Enchanted Evening

"Soliloqies" combines the fine voices of Martin and Pinza to good advantage. It's made up largely of wishing and wondering on the parts of the two lovers who sing to one another. A very smooth rendition by the co-stars of the show. "Evening" creeps in in snatches throughout the show, but Pinza's stirring vocal at this point carries the dreamy tune to a peak.

Bloody Mary

There Is Nothing Like a Dame

This platter combines two of the most delightfully jubilant songs of the show. "Mary" is sung by the Men's Chorus and leaves little to be desired. It's surprisingly simple delightfully pleasant, and all about an island gal they love—"now ain't that too damn bad." The orchestral interlude between choruses is played in jazz tempo, a la Pee Wee Hunt. Great is the only word with which to describe "Dame." Another one by the top-notch Men's Chorus, it tells about the G.I.'s longing for the girl (any girl) back home. The chorus plaintively decries the fact that it has sunlight, moonlight, volleyball, ping pong, advice from Tokyo Rose, but "We ain't got a dame."

Bali Ha'i

I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outta My Hair

Juanita Hall gives a pleasing rendition of "Bali," the romantic new ballad that's sweeping the country like a force of janitors. Mary Martin and the Girl's Chorus chime in on "Hair," and the result is a listenable version of the jumpy, hand-clapping, new hit tune. The catchy lyrics help to make it tops.

—Campus Personalities—

Meet Magill And Chandler

By Frank Allston, Jr.

One day several months ago some wag called the Delta Psi house and asked to speak to that "Chinaman" Sam Magill. This week that "Chinaman" is one of our Campus Personalities of the week.

Just for the record, Sam is not a Chinaman. Trus, he lists Shanghai as his official residence, but that's because his parents, who are in YMCA work, are stationed in the beseiged Chinese city. He considers White Plains, N. Y., where his parents lived during his high school days, as his home.

Following the example set by his parents, Sam is a very devoted Y enthusiast and is currently president of the local group.

The likable rising junior is also very active in other activities on campus in addition to his Y work. Sam is a member of the Golden Fleece and the Grail and was on the Student Council and president of the Graham Memorial Board.

As if all those campus activities weren't enough, Sam is one of the stars of the Carolina track team. Sam's specialty is the two-mile run and he placed second in the Penn Relays this year.

Sam has been running track six years, three here at Carolina. Before that he ran at Deerfield Academy in Massachusetts, for a year and two more years at White Plains High. During his senior year at Deerfield he was undefeated.

But Sam's first love still is the Y. He has been connected with the Y ever since he arrived on the campus and has put in two years as vice president of that group.

Sam says his outside interests are many and varied. Along athletic lines he enjoys a "little bit of swimming" and has done some work in life-saving.

Right now he's working toward a major in history. After graduation he will obtain a degree in divinity and hopes to go into Y work.

As far as future plans for the Y, Sam says his first aim is to get all the different programs of the Y organized and functioning properly and to get the different committees and their work corrolated.

"Our main aim," he says, "is to reach more students. We plan to have dormitory and fraternity house discussions." Another of the Y's plans for next year is to bring several nationally prominent speakers to the campus and Sam is very much interested in seeing the successful completion of this program.

The charming junior from Macon, Georgia, Anne Chandler, president of the YWCA, is our co-spotlight holder of the week.

Anne is one of those people who is very much interested in YW work and spends a great deal of her time in planning and directing the various activities of that very active organization.

On days when Anne isn't busy in the YW office handling some of the problems that confront her organization, she can usually be found somewhere around the campus, carrying out some vital function of the YW program. In fact, Anne had to leave her interview early the other day to rush to a children's ballet recital which one of the YW committees was sponsoring.

As if she didn't have enough to do with all her YW work, Anne will find herself very busy working on the Women's Honor Council next year. She was recently initiated into Valkyries.

A member of Pi Beta Phi social sorority, Anne was on the Religious Emphasis Week committee and was chairman of her dormitory vespers. She also served on the YW sparkplug committee and worked with the Honor Council.

Anne is majoring in Elementary Education and she hopes someday to teach in a nursery or a primary school.

She came to Carolina from Stephen's College in Columbia, Missouri, where she made an outstanding record for herself.

The blonde, blue-eyed Georgia "cracker" is interested in sports. She says she likes to play a little tennis and occasionally go horseback riding.

—CPU Roundtable—

Responsibilities Of Press

By J. Hopkins

A free press is the cornerstone of democracy. However, in the complexities of modern civilization, this freedom carries with it a great responsibility. Through the medium of the press national sentiments are shaped; prejudices may be fostered; important decisions may be made on the basis of the news.

The question arises as to whether a free press in a democracy should pursue a course theoretically recognized as "right," or, operating on a purely democratic basis, present all viewpoints on a problem, even if some of the viewpoints are generally considered "wrong" and contrary to democratic principles. In printing only things that are "good" and "right," the press might be termed undemocratic, even though its efforts are directed toward a better society. The idea is that to have a true democracy with a free press requires the recognization of the concurrent existence of undemocratic ideas and principles.

For the press to be termed responsible, then, it would seem necessary that communism be given, in its columns, an equal opportunity with democracy and socialism; that depression news equals prosperity news, if it rates so; and the like. The pot should be called black if it is black; likewise the skies a heavenly blue if they are heavenly blue.

For example, the Chicago Tribune could hardly be called responsible in the face of its hyperconservatism; nor could the New York Worker be called responsible with its extreme leftish position. Perhaps the Daily Tar Heel rates a question mark. A recent article in Harper's Magazine illustrated well the irresponsibility of the Chicago Tribune. In a regular news story of about two columns length in the Tribune, there were discovered 112 misrepresentations, instances of immature reasoning, misleading statements, or outright lies. This is a very fine record especially for a newspaper with a circulation of about 1,675,000—most of whose readers have neither the time nor the ambition to probe into the real facts of the case.

Editorial policies of newspapers might be placed under a different classification. The purpose of editorials may be said to be that of influencing public opinion, or perhaps of allowing the editor to relieve himself of accumulated exasperation. The purpose of news is to inform the public One-sidedness of editorial opinion may be excusable—the reader can in this case form his own view on the subject, either accepting or rejecting the editor's. News should be as positive as positiveness is humanly possible.

Such a policy today is very difficult to follow. In this period of name calling, red-baiting, witch-hunting hysteria, rare indeed is the newspaper which dares to deviate from the accepted routine and print articles contrary to the present vogue

—'Merchant' Review—

Pro And Con

By Jonathan Marshall

William Shakespeare has been subject to many varied interpretations through the years, both good and bad; the Carolina Playmakers' production of "The Merchant of Venice" Friday night in the Forest Theatre was certainly an interesting one.

It is not easy to act the classics, and the members of the cast, with few exceptions, were too conscious of their lines. The players might well have taken Hamlet's advice to "Suit the action to the word."

Director Kai Jurgensen described his version of the play as a "fairy tale" in which Shylock is nothing more than a villain. Fortunately, however, "The Merchant of Venice" proved to be far more than this, and, although below usual Playmaker standards, the audience enjoyed it.

Both the character of Shylock and Fred Young's performance in the role were so strong that the part completely dominated the stage. Mr. Young portrayed the character as a many sided man, a villain whom one could not condemn, in one of the most outstanding jobs of acting seen here in a long time.

Shylock's intended victim, Antonio, the merchant, is given no scene to dominate; nevertheless, William MacIlwinen made the audience fully aware of his presence. Although playing with reserve, MacIlwinen, like Mr. Young, spoke his words naturally and with understanding.

As the friend of the hero, Gratiano, and the heroine's companion, Nerissa. William Hardy and Martha Grattan were thoroughly convincing. Mr. Hardy was especially outstanding, for he seemed to be living the garrulous Gratiano's part.

Portia, the heroine, is a difficult part for an inexperienced actress, for she must be a gracious lady, a girl, and a mature woman at various times; she is also confronted with some of the most famous lines in the theatre. Although Anne Martin tried hard, her performance was inconsistant.

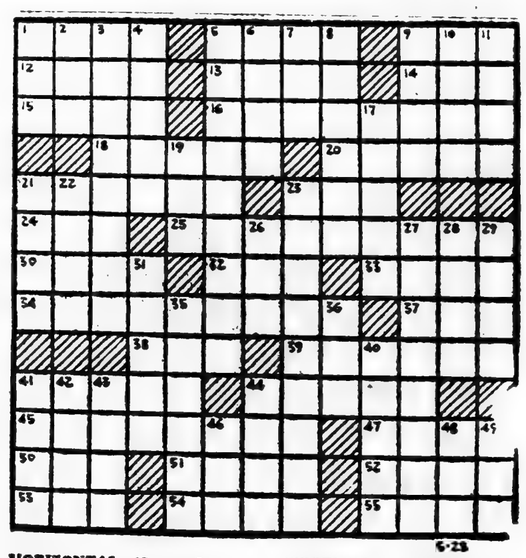
Miss Martin appeared to be too impressed by the greatness of her lines, and at times she became overly melodramatic. This fault might well have been corrected, however, by stronger direction, for in places she was superb.

As Bassanio, for whom Antonio is bonded to Shylock, Hal Shadwell had little to offer. This was especially true in his love scenes with Portia when he occasionally became almost lugubrious.

Director Jurgensen used several artificial effects such as a stumbling page and heel-clicking attendants, which added humor to the show. Despite the fact that they were successful by themselves, in many cases the effects detracted from the principles who were not always able to overcome the competition.

From the audience's standpoint one of the most enjoyable scenes was the comic relief provided by Frank Groseclose and Larry Peerce playing Old Gobbo and his son Launcelot. The two acted without inhibitions.

The cast is far too large to mention everyone, however, some of the supporting roles were unusually well done. Among them were Mac Shaw as the dashing Lorenzo, Lou Blenkner as Tubal, Sam Green as Salarino, Charles Williamson as Salanio, and W. P. Covington III as the Prince of Arragon.



The Forest Theatre is an ideal setting for Shakespeare, and the technical crew took full advantage of it. In fact, the settings by Lynn Gault, costumes by Irene Smart, and the lighting by James Byrd were the outstanding features of the performance with the possible exception of the portrayals of Shylock and Gratiano.

If it had not been for several excellent performances, one might conclude from the Playmakers' rendition of "The Merchant of Venice" that Shakespeare is too difficult for amateurs; nevertheless a few individual scenes were unusually well done.

In any case, the play is great enough so that one can overlook weaknesses in production and still enjoy it. As a whole the audience was pleased on Friday night, and that is the most important criterian for worthiness.

Varsity, Frosh Defeated By Duke

Duke Nine Humbles Tar Heels For Second Time in Row, 6-1

By Lew Chapman

DURHAM, May 21—Neither the thunder of the elements nor the thunder of the Tar Heel bats ever materialized here this afternoon as the Carolina baseballers went through a dreary nine inning ball game flailing desperately at the soft servings of Duke pitcher, Paul Karukstis, and finally ending up on the losing end of a 6-1 count at the hands of the Blue Devil nine.

For the full nine frames the local crowd was waiting for something to break lose, either the expected storm from the overcast skies or for the Carolina .293 Big Four batting average, the one that had snowed under Duke three out of four previous engagements, to assert itself. Neither occurred and it spelled the Carolina downfall.

The Tar Heels faced Duke's lossingest hurler in Karukstis but the comical Blue Devil elbower scattered the 10 Carolina hits, all singles, with ease and was never in serious trouble in going the route.

Tranavitch the Loser

Andy Tranavitch twirled for seven innings for the Tar Heels before he was replaced by reliefer Ray Blair in an eighth Duke rally that produced three runs and sealed the Carolina tomb. The Tar Heel's "Train" pitched a creditable ball game and with a little more aid from his mates both offensively and defensively, the final outcome might have been a different story.

Both pitchers had full control over the opposing batsmen for the first three frames, but in the fourth the Durham collegians broke into the scoring column with a pair of tallies on three bingles with the damaging blow a triple by Jerry Frye. This three base hit and a single were gained by the benefit of a generous official scorer who overlooked some sloppy fielding by the Tar Heel outer gardeners.

Tar Heel's Score in 6th

Carolina came back with its only plate-denter in the sixth to make the count 2-1. Rip Ryan got a free stroll to first and advanced to third on Sid Varney's grounder to right. Ed Lamb infield out then chased across Ryan for the score.

Carolina still had a chance despite a Blue Devil run in the bottom of the sixth, but the fateful eighth sewed up the contest for Duke. First man up, Stu Erickson, the Duke left-fielder, gave an indication of Tranavitch's weakening when he lofted one of his offerings 364 feet into the center field hedge for a home run. A walk and a single was enough for Tranavitch and Blair came in.

Blair issued another walk and allowed a solid single that together with a Carolina error gave the Dukesters two more runs and a safe five run lead. The Tar Heels were then ready for the bus ride back to Chapel Hill and friendlier confines.

Tar Babies Lose to Imps, 8-1; Meet NC State Tuesday Night

Coach Henry House's Tar Baby nine lost their season's third yesterday as they dropped an 8-1 decision to Duke's Blue Imps on Emerson Field. Bob Davis went all the way for the Dukesters giving up four hits on six strike-outs.

Carolina starter Charlie Bridger fanned four and was relieved in the sixth by Henry Schacht who accounted for three more; both allowed five hits.

Duke gained the upper hand in the opening frame when John Carroll connected for a round-tripper with one on. Carolina came back in their half with their only tally on three straight walks.

The Blue Imps rallied again in the fifth when Davis got to first on an error by Larry Cheek, went to second on Lyon's single and scored on a sacrifice by Glen Wild. Another bingel by Carroll and an error by right-fielder Bill Lambert gave Duke three more runs.

Duke added two more in the seventh on a single, three walks and a fielder's choice. The frosh nine will travel to Raleigh on Tuesday night to meet State under the lights for the Little Four championship.

Tar Heels Retain Track Crown; Top Men Go To Atlanta Saturday

crown which they won here in 1947 and then successfully defended again last year. The win also marked the thirteenth for the Tar Heels since the first running of the meet in 1923. Today's win marked the time that the Tar Heels have won three times in succession..

In addition to deciding the team and individual championships, yesterday's meet also decided which men will represent the Souther Conference at Atlanta against the Southeastern Conference's best at Atlanta next Saturday night. The top three men in each event will run at Atlanta.

Exceptional Performances

In addition to two new records being set yesterday, several of the exception performances very nearly approached the present standards.

Carolina's Bob Shigman set the first record of the afternoon when he flipped the discus 156 ft. 6¼ in. to break the old record of 152 ft. 2¾ in. set by Zori of State in 1936. Team mate Sam Magill came back with a record-breaking 9:27.8 two-mile stint to capture the final Carolina first and the Robert Bronson Hubbard Memorial Award.

Tar Heel Bob Kirk, javelin winner, came very close to the record in that event with a throw of 210 ft. 7½ in., 5 inches off the record.

Co-captain Julian MacKenzie of Carolina turned in what observers described as the best race of the day when he ran off with the mile in 4:17.1 to beat out Maryland's Bob Palmer, 1948 winner. Tar Heel Halsted Holden provided another upset when he steppd off a winning 1:56.7 half.

Twenty little girls just doin' what comes natcherlly kept an audience of doting parents in stitches Tuesday afternoon when the YWCA dancing class presented its first recital.

The first group of dancers, ranging in age from three to five years, went through their ballet routines in all seriousness, but when it came time to curtsey and introduce themselves, their reactions were as different as Chapel Hill weather and dry days.

Before an audience that filled the ballroom of the Carolina Inn, the ballerines pantomined "The Gossips," "How Does Your Garden Grow?" and "Tea for Two."

The first act was put on by the tiniest tots, and when the audience had laughed so hard at the unpredictable antics they could hardly even smile anymore, the older girls took over. They were the six to eleven year-olds, and they, too, showed that the Y dancing class was a worthwhile way to keep Chapel Hill children happy.

Ida Constable, capable chairman of the dancing school committee, was mistress of ceremonies. But even her carefully planned announcements of each act didn't give a complete account of what the children actually did. Once on the stage, they acted original and refreshingly alive. Not even the flash bulbs of an energetic photographer kept them from having the time of their young lives.

"Mrs. James Childress certainly deserves a lot of credit for this show," Y president Ann Chandler said. "She gave up her time to teach the class and never charged a cent." Ann also said that recognition should be given to Mrs. Ed Currie, pianist for the class.

Despite their tender ages, the dancers showed a remarkable sense of timing. They seldom missed a step on the right beat, and it was clear to the audience that there were many future ballerinas in the group.

And if the tiny dancers were amusing, the little brothers in the audience were equally so. Like their big brothers, they clapped loudly and yelled vociferously as the starched-skirted dancers appeared on the stage. In fact the young males were as fascinated by the program as were their parents.

Wesley Banquet Scheduled For Thursday Night

The Wesley Foundation of the University will hold its annual Foundation Banquet May 26 at 6:30 P.M. in the dining room of the Methodist Church, the Rev. Mr. Brooks Patten, director of the foundation, announced yesterday.

The program, which Mr. Patten said will consist of skits and music, will feature a talk by Dr. Ike G. Greer. Following the banquet informal dance will be held in the church's social hall.

Mr. Patten said advance tickets for the banquet are now on sale for one dollar and reservations may be made by calling the Wesley Office.

Freistadt Is Willing To Swear Loyalty

Will Not Break Communist Ties At Risk of Losing AEC Fellowship

Hans Freistadt, admitted Communist and graduate student in the Physics Department, said yesterday that he would take a loyalty oath but would not renounce his allegiance to the Communist Party—even if his atomic fellowship is withdrawn.

The part-time physics instructor falls under a new Atomic Energy Commission ruling ordering non-Communist oaths for students holding AEC fellowships.

Freistadt, whose disclosure as a Communist scheduled to receive government funds for study of non-secret material caused a Senate investigation, said he was "willing to take a loyalty oath to the United States government."

But he would not cut his party ties, even at the cost of his fellowship which is supposed to become effective July 1.

The crew-cut, Austrian-born student told a Senate committee earlier he was a Communist but a loyal American citizen. He said he would fight for the United States, of which he is a naturalized citizen, if Russia attacked this country. But he would not fight, he said, if the U. S. attacked Russia.

Freistadt repeated his stand yesterday that he did not see how the government could cancel his fellowship.

"I signed a contract with the government in accepting that fellowship, and I don't see how the government can break its contract since nothing was asked in the application about any political affiliation," he said.

AEC Leader May Be Fired By Congress

Group to Consider Hickenlooper Bid

WASHINGTON, May 23—(UP)—Chairman Brien McMahon (D.-Conn.) announced today that the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee will consider a Republican demand for the resignation of David E. Lilienthal, head of the Atomic Energy Commission.

McMahon's announcement followed a four-hour meeting during which the committee dug into circumstances surrounding the loss of a small quantity of atomic explosive — Uranium-235 — at the Apgonne Laboratory.

Questioned during that closed session was Dr. Walter H. Zinn, head of the laboratory.

When reporters asked McMahon if he had any comment on the demand for Lilienthal's resignation made by Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper as (R-Iowa), he said the matter would be taken up by the full committee as soon as

First Letter

CHARLOTTE, May 23—(UP)—A student whose letter to Washington started the investigation of Communist Hans Freistadt at the University of North Carolina said today he warned Atomic Energy Commission officials about the case two weeks before he took it to radio commentator Fulton Lewis.

Theodore Newton, Jr., of Charlotte, said his first letter about Freistadt, a professed Communist studying at the University under an AEC scholarship went to David Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. Lilienthal never answered him, Newton said.

Newton himself is a student at the University. He said he first found out about Freistadt's scholarship through campus reports, and confirmed it with the chairman of the University Physics Department. Dr. Paul E. Shearin. Then he wrote Lilienthal, about April 23rd, the youth said.

Quota Is Reached In Cancer Drive

Orange County went well over its quota of $1,710 for the cancer drive held during the month of April, George B. Cline, county drive chairman, said yesterday. The quota was reached even before the drive was being completed, he added.

Orange County's chapter of the Cancer Society received favorable state-wide publicity for being one of the three counties to go over the top first.

Col. Cline gave much of the credit for the successful campaign to Mrs. R. E. Studebaker, Mrs. James Snipes, Mrs. Hubert Robinson, and Mrs. W. Carson Ryan. Mrs. Studebaker organized the drive in Carrboro, making the rounds herself to the businesses and through the school. She collected three times as much as had ever been done before. Mrs. Snipes and Mrs. Robinson conducted a most successful campaign in the Negro districts, as they have done in previous years. Mrs. Ryan handled all public information, distributing displays and literature, and conducting tag day, a project carried out by the Girl Scouts and Brownies.

Two of the many services supported by the Cancer Society are the surgical dressing unit, under the direction of Mrs. A. T. Miller, and the Cancer Detection Center at Watts Hospital in Durham. The Center offers free service to all persons over 45 years of age. Anyone younger may be freely admitted for diagnostic service if he has a cancer symptom and a note from his physician.

The Illinois convention will be held from Aug. 23 to Sept. 3.

Requiring Non-Red Oath Blasted At Special Student Solon Session

Solons Also Move To Set Up Plans For Summer Board

The Student Legislature last night unanimously condemned a reported move by the Board of Trustees to require all students and teachers of the Greater University to take non-Communist oaths.

The representatives, meeting in special session, passed a resolution introduced by Legislator John Sanders stating that the body is "unalterably and irrevocably opposed to the passage by the Board of Trustees of any resolution or other expression of will which would make requisite as prior condition to employment or enrollment the signing of any statement declaring non-membership in any political, religious or other group by any member of the faculty or students."

Members of the Legislature attacked the reported move by the Trustees as an attack on the academic freedom for which the University is famed. Nat Williams said the move was just one of the first of its type to be brought out after the resignation of Dr. Frank P. Graham as president.

The Legislature also passed a new resolution last night concerning summer school student government, but Speaker Ted Leonard had to call another special session to do it.

Legislator Ben James moved to reconsider a bill passed at the last session setting up a summer governing board of 11 persons to act as executive, legislators to study the summer problem with the executive.

Then as James and Sol Kimerling retired to prepare an amendment to the bill, the solons voted to adjourn. Leonard immediately called another special session, which met a few minutes later to hear the Kimerling-James amendment.

The new motion, which was passed overwhelming, stiplated that the legislative committee should propose the following governmental set-up to the executive: "There shall be a council of 11 persons, five women and six men, which shall constitute the executive and legislative branches. The women shall try all women's Campus Code violations. Together they shall try all Honor Code violations.

"There shall also be a Student Council of nine students who shall hear all appeals and cases of constitutionality."

YM-YW Schedule Region Meeting At Berea College

"Renewing Life through Christian Faith and Action" will be the theme of the YMCA-YWCA Southern Regional Division conference at Berea, Ky. June 10-17.

According to Sam McGill, president of the Southern Area Student Council of the YMCA, the inter-denominational and interracial conference "gives students a chance to sit down together for a week, get to know each other and to know how things are done in other associations."

The conference will feature speeches, workshops and round-table discussions. Platform speakers include the Rev. Herbert King of Grace Congregational Church in New York, Dr. Aubrey Williams, editor of the Southern Farmer; Dr. J. T. Caldwell, president of Alabama College; and Dr. Forrest C. Weir, executive secretary of the Southeastern office of the Federal Council of Churches.

Workshop and evening group leaders will come from the different colleges represented at the conference. Claude Shotts will represent the University.

This is the third year the conference has met at Berea. Last year over 200 students from 50 white and Negro colleges in the South attended it.

"The most dynamic aspect of the educational system" said Shotts, "brings out the ideals that are practical and offers students a chance to face life. That to me is an education."

NC Congressman Will Speak Here Thursday Night

Charles Bennett Deane, Congressman from the 8th district of North Carolina who will speak here Thursday at 8:30 in Gerrard Hall, will discuss the general subject of medical care and its relation to housing.

Deane, who is co-sponsored by the Carolina Forum and the Carolina Political Union, is a strong supporter of the new medical school for the University.

The speaker is expected to discuss the implications of the Compulsory Insurance Legislation pending in Congress Murray Goldenthal, president of the Forum, said yesterday. Deane is author of the legislation to broaden the hospital construction program.

Goldenthall said Deane will probably discuss a new bill which he has been working upon since the convening of the 81st Congress involving aid to the construction of medical schools, clinics, administrative personnel, nurses, and fellowships and loans to faculties and students involving the general program of medical care.

The speaker, who at present is a member of the committees on Banking and Currency and on House Administration, was first elected to Congress in 1946.

A reception will be held for the speaker after his address in the main lounge of Graham Memorial, at 10 o'clock, Goldenthall said.

By Caroline Bruner

Ferne Hughes of Rainelle, W. Va. was crowned Queen of the May in an "Alice-in-Wonderland" May Day program of pageantry, day afternoon on the lawn besinging, and dancing, held Sunside McIver Dormitory.

Members of the queen's court were Joan Lucas, Sarah Jane Farlowe, Fran Angus, Becky Holton, Henrietta Thorpe, Babs DeWitt, Dolly Ann Dunnaway, and Marty Hinkle.

The festivities, which got under way with the singing of "Lazy Bones" and "Down by the Station" by the Sigma Chi sextet, continued with a pageant presentation of the Alice-in-Wonderland story. The fairyland tale, narrated by John Clayton, was performed in pantomine and modern dancing.

Following the presentation and crowning of the queen, she was serenaded by the Sigma Chi sextet with "Tell Me Why" and "Tradition."

Senior Meeting

Candidates for degrees at the coming Commencement will meet with the Faculty Commencement Marshal, Dr. J. C. Lyons, tomorrow at 4:15 in Memorial Hall. Dress, routines and procedure relative to Commencement will be discussed.

Senator Graham Will Speak At Kenan Commencement

Streamlined Graduation Procedure Will Eliminate Old Diploma Lines

By Sally Woodhull

Senator Frank Porter Graham will be the featured speaker at streamlined commencement exercises Monday evening, June 6, in Kenan Stadium.

The affair will mark the former president's first public appearance at a student function since becoming a senator. It is the 40th anniversary of his class's graduation from the University.

For the first time in the University's history, the exercises will feature mass presentation of degrees. Dr. J. C. Lyons, faculty commencement marshall, announced yesterday that degrees will be conferred by degree-groups rather than on individuals.

The change in procedure is one which has been under discussion for a long time, Dr. Lyons said. The practice has been in effect for some time in all the major universities of the country. Senior class leaders were consulted, he said, before the decision to change the procedure was reached.

Under the streamlined procedure, as each degree-group is presented by its dean, it will rise in the stands and the governor will confer the degree. The group will then sit down and the following degree-group will be presented. The only degree candidates who will leave the stands and go up on the platform individually will be those receiving the Ph.D.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, those receiving degrees will report to a location to be announced, where they will turn in their caps and gowns and pick up their diplomas.

Instructions will be given all degree candidates at a meeting tomorrow afternoon at 4:15 in Memorial Hall.

Al Winn will serve as chief student marshal, with the following marshals: Bootsie Lyons, Anne Chandler, Muriel Fisher, Eleanor De Grange, Dortch Warriner, Richard Boren, Andy Cornish and Dick Gordon.

In case of rain, graduation exercises will be held in Woollen Gymnasium.

Presidential Committee, Trustees To Meet Today

The Board of Trustees of the Greater University and the special committee to choose a president will meet here today, with the trustee meeting scheduled to get under way at 11 this morning and the special committee at 3 this afternoon. The trustees will meet in the faculty lounge of the planetarium, while the committee will meet in South Building.

Main business before the trustees is expected to be the position of Communists at the University. Although no agenda for the meeting has been announced, the recent controversy over the Atomic Energy Commission fellowship award to avowed Communist Hans Freistadt makes it almost certain that the subject will come before the board.

The president-choosing committee will hear recommendations from students and faculty. Any student will be allowed to present his views on the qualifications or on specific men for the job.

The trustees will have a luncheon in the Governor Morehead room of the planetarium after the 11 o'clock meeting. Some 60 to 70 members are expected to be present at the regular Spring meeting.

Orientation Committee Picks 75 Counselors for Next Fall

Training Program Will Start Tonight At Meeting in Phillips Hall at 7:30

Orientation Committee Chairman Al Lowenstein yesterday released a list of 75 counselors and associate counselors for the fall freshman orientation program.

The students named in that list, as well as those persons previously notified, must attend a meeting at 7:30 this evening in 206 Phillips Hall. Dean of Students Fred Weaver and Lowenstein will instruct the group and lay plans for the fall. This will be the only meeting of counselors this quarter.

Lowenstein said yesterday that the Orientation Committee was grateful for the large turn-out of applicants for counselors' positions. He said he was sorry the method of interviewing caused some students to wait in line, but throwing open the positions to anyone on campus necessitated some inconveniences.

The list released yesterday included the following names:

Rufus Bynum, Albert Dickson, Nemo Nearman, Bob Evans, Joe

Winner Is Named For Jackson Fund

John Livingston Hazelhurst, III, of Wilmington, has been awarded the Herbert Worth Jackson Scholarship of $2,000, D. D. Carroll, chairman of the Faculty Scholarship Committee, said yesterday.

This scholarship covers a period of four years and is open to any native North Carolinian who is eligible to enter the University.

Dean Carroll of the Commerce School said this year's applicants for the award formed the ablest group who ever competed for the scholarship. "This made the selection of the winner particularly difficult this year," he added. Twenty-one high school seniors out of over 50 applicants for the award were interviewed by the Scholarship committee here last Saturday.

Hazelhurst, 17 year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hazelhurst of Wilmington, has made an unusually fine scholastic record and has also been active as a leader in school activities, Carroll added.

The scholarship will be awarded again in 1951.

CPU Accepts Six Members

Six new members were inducted into the Carolina Political Union in its last meeting of the year Sunday night. They are: Ed Williams, Wilmington, Jerry Blum, Jackson Heights, N. Y.; Bill Hutton, Greesboro; Bob Byer, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Bob Marks, Reidsville, and Charlie Scales, Hickory.

UNC Orchestra To Give Concert

The University Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Earl Slocum, will present its third concert of the year tomorrow evening at 8:30 in Hill Music Hall.

Soloist for the occasion will be Jeanne Fornoff Smith, pianist, playing the "Concerto in C Minor" for piano and orchestra, by L. Von Beethoven. Miss Smith is a graduate of the Julliard School of Music and is at present an instructor in piano in the Music Department of the University.

Other compositions to be played by the orchestra will be Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7 in A Major"; "Prelude and Fugue in D Minor," by Bach; Overture to "Suzanne's Secret," by Wolf-Ferrari; and a new "Ballet Suite," by John Satterfield, a senior music student at the University.

There will be no admission charge.

Chest Leaders Will Hold Meet

The Board of Directors of the newly-established Campus Chest will hold their first meeting at 3:30 tomorrow in the Grail Room, Graham Memorial, said co-ordinator Dick Murphy yesterday.

Sam Craver To Head 13 Club Next Year

Sam W. Craver, Jr., a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, has been elected president of the Thirteen Club for the coming year.

Other officers chosen are Baker M. Bass, Jr., Sigma Nu, vice-president; Bill Steele, Kappa Sig, secretary-treasurer; and Lem Whitsett, Phi Gam, social chairman.

Five articles are presented in the present issue including "Towards Form in Writing" by Phillips Russell, eminent author and teacher; "Tennessee Williams: Portrayer of Frustration" by Robert Walker, a special student and personal friend of Tennessee Williams; "Why a Liberal Education?" by Dr. Wallace E. Caldwell, teacher and historian; "Southern Folk Music by Dr. I. G. Greer and Norman Cordon; and "The Relation between Psychology and Religion," by Dr. J. B. Rhine.

Seven poems and ten pages of book reviews constitute the remainder of the magazine.

Editor Roy C. Moose, commenting on the present edition, stated that "from the standpoint of size, content, and make-up I believe this to be our best effort so far in the brief history of our young publication. I hope that our readers will lend their support to the continued publication of the Quarterly so that new writers may find an outlet for their creative efforts."

Lawn Sports Problem

Students who play golf and toss baseballs on the campus are tearing up the turf and consequently costing the University quite a bit of money, according to J. S. Bennett, Director of Operations.

The problem is especially bad in the area from Battle-Vance-Pettigrew to the Old Well, where almost daily several golf enthusiasts can be seen driving the ball across the campus. There is also some occasional playing in the lower quadrangle and once or twice golfers have even ventured onto the busiest point of the campus between the Library and South Building, where they have not only succeeded in tearing up the turf, but have also created a hazard to passers-by.

According to Bennett, quite a large amount of money has been spent to plant grass seed, sod certain areas and spread fertilizer. Approximately $2,000 was recently spent on the strip running from the Library to Franklin Street in order to improve the appearance of the front yard.

There is no penalty for students playing on the lawns, but it is frowned upon by both the administration and by the student government. We can't expect to have a beautiful campus if we ourselves do not take care of what we have. A little hint dropped to a fellow student, who is seen playing on the lawn, will go a long way in convincing him of the error of his ways. The administration doesn't want to police the grounds and such a last resort certainly should not be necessary.

The students for the most part are definitely interested in improving the looks of the campus. This has been proven several times by students who have indicated their interest in the campus. One case which Mr. Bennett points to with pride is that of a group of boys in the lower quad who last year requested that a plot of ground be sodded and that they would take it upon themselves to keep the plot in shape. He obliged and that plot is now one of the healthiest and most attractive on campus.

It's time that the thoughtless students forget their personal pleasure and think more of the feelings of others and the appearance of their campus.—F.A.

Change in Commencement

Editorials appearing in the Daily Tar Heel over the past few years have advocated a change in the traditional commencement procedure for the Seniors. Dr. J. C. Lyons, faculty commencement marshal, yesterday released a new plan to the DTH which will shorten the commencement exercises by eliminating the old procedure by which each Senior received his diploma individually. Dr. Lyons' new idea calls for the students to receive their degrees in groups. The plan probably will meet with widespread approval.

Dr. Lyons stated, "The change in procedure is one which has been under discussion for a long time. With the increase in size of each degree class, the protests against the interminable ordeal of conferring degrees individually have grown in volume and in vigor. In making this change, the University is merely conforming to the practice which has been in effect for some time in all the major universities of the country."

From the Alumni Association

Seniors, when you leave school would you like to receive some priority in ordering football tickets each fall? You can, by the simple expedient of dropping a penny postal card to the Alumni Office each time you move to a new address and letting them know where you are.

Keeping up with 40,000 alumni is a tremendous undertaking, and while members of the alumni staff resort to every kind of subterfuge to trick elusive alumni into revealing their whereabouts, thousands of the sly little rascals get away. Perhaps the alumni staff is supposed to be psychic, but really, folks, they could stand a little help from you.

Each summer it has been customary to mail application blanks for football tickets to all alumni, giving them an opportunity to purchase tickets before the general public has an opportunity to buy. However, many alumni have not had this opportunity because they have allowed themselves to get "lost." In the past as each fall approached, letters were frequently received from alumni complaining that "I can't understand why I haven't been receiving application blanks for football tickets, etc.," but now that the Notre Dame game has been announced, many of these same alumni have "suddenly remembered that I haven't written the Alumni office for some time."

Seniors will receive application blanks for football about June 15. These will be sent to their home addresses. Any senior desiring to have these blanks sent elsewhere should write the Alumni Office, indicating the address to which they want their mail sent.

The WASHINGTON SCENE

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 22—Attorney General Tom Clark is trying to kick George Washington, a descendant of the first President, out of the country.

The charge against the current George Washington—shades of the Father of our Country!—is that he told a lie.

This George Washington is a respected Income Tax auditor of San Bernardino, Calif., Strongly vouched for by the Kiwanis Club and other civic organizations. He is white and 42—but not free. He's under bond, having been grabbed for deportation.

Although his father was an American physician and a collateral descendant of the great general, this G. Washington is listed as a German. And a refugee at that.

I might never have known of his plight except that a fellow came up to me in the Senate corridor and said: "You'd better beat it over the House. Rep Harry R. Sheppard, of California, has just introduced a bill for the relief of George Washington."

I figured it for a rib, but the Senate wasn't doing anything anyway, so I scurried over to the other wing of the Capitol and rummaged through the day's legislative grist. Sure enough, there was the bill: H.R. 1503.

The measure called upon Congress to direct the Attorney General to drop the order of arrest and deportation against the "alien George Washington" and to refrain from issuing any such further orders in the future. The Attorney General was also called upon to agree that the "said alien" had been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence.

I got the rest of the story from Rep. Sheppard. Here it is, as he told it:

"I have had this case investigated exhaustively and believe it is all true.

Mr. Washington's father was a physician of fine repute in this country. Later in his career he went to Germany to take specialization courses and married a German girl. He never returned to America.

"The son, George, was born in Germany, making him technically a German citizen although the father never surrendered his American citizenship. When Hitler rose to power, George opposed Nazism violently. He fled Germany, taking refuge in Belgium.

"There he became connected with the motion picture industry. Later he went to London. A short time thereafter a Belgian woman charged he had misrepresented certain stocks to her. The Belgian authorities asked the English to arrest him for extradition.

"He was held by the English for 60 days. But, after being returned to Belgium, the case against him was thrown out of court.

"Mr. Washington then went to Mexico, and was admitted to the United States as a refugee at Calexico, Calif, on April 14, 1940. As part of the routine questioning by our Immigration authorities he was asked if he had ever been incarcerated.

"He said: 'No.' His explanation, which seems valid, is that he thought they meant had he ever been found guilty of a crime.

"On investigation, the Immigration Authorities learned of his detention in London and picked him up on charges of falsification. Leading businessmen of San Bernardino, for whom he has done Income Tax auditing, petitioned me to go to bat for him."

Mr. Sheppard added that George Washington, like his namesake, has an unblemished record in this country. He never chopped down a cherry tree, although once, when he was in a hurry he took a hack. (Wild laughter).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ANSWER CALL

Editor:

Very soon after the publication of the "Freistadt" editorial, one of the readers of the DTH warned the readers what they could expect in answer to that editorial. He was quite right, all the "reds" and "pinks" have answered the call.

We are quite lucky to have the names of most of the commies and fellow travelers paraded before us; many have chosen to hide their true ideals under such typical and transparent lines as objection to "Thought Control," discussion of a 100% American, and accusation of control of the editorial policy by Fulton Lewis, "a fascist and paid propagandist of the NAM."

One major point has been overlooked by these so called "defenders of freedom of thought." Why is it that Hans, who professes a belief in the communist form of government, is quite willing to accept financial aid in the form of a fellowship, from a type of government in which he does not believe?

If Hans truly believes in the communist form of government let him look to the communist party or the Soviet Union for his educational assistance and not to a government whose funds are raised from a capitalistic economy.

WELCOME CRITICISM

Editor:

"Commies not welcome."
Bah! Plain fear.
"I had as lief not be as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself."

Commies are more welcome in my room than any blind hypocrites who mouth phrases about the "purity" of America while ignoring the oppression and the injustice in our country. This country needs men who will set up a mirror where we may see the inmost parts of ourselves. Monstrous wrong dwells side by side with magnificent acheivement in this, the greatest country on the face of the earth.

Let us continue to work on what is wrong and inadequate. Let us continue to welcome criticism, humbly realizing that our country is not perfect. Only by this method will we move forward into a better world.

As for besmirching the fair name of the University, how do you think our school got such a great reputation? Did it come from shying like a startled schoolgirl every time a politician speaks, and by being passively led in safe waters by the slumbering public? No, by gum. Men like Frank Graham led out boldly in the correction of existing inadequacies in the educational system and much later, people looked and saw that it was good.

This University's reputation stands or falls, not on a dozen or so newspaper clippings, but on its continued success in educating students. Back to the books, so that we may be adult thinkers in a country and a world that desperately needs mature citizenship.

Ray Mills

OPEN LETTER

To Mr. Odus Mull:

The liberal anti-communist student has a two-part answer to your proposal. First: consider the problem of deciding who is a Communist. If we were to remove only those who admit they are Communists, the more insidious element would remain. If we censor ideas, we will jeopardize the legitimate use of our guaranteed freedoms.

More important though is the student himself and his attitude. We believe that Communists are like mosquitoes; they do not breed in healthful waters. If the fathers and mothers of our State have reared their children to develop discriminating minds, communism, for them, will be no more dangerous than the bogey man. We can see that Communists take the weaknesses of human nature and call them examples of capitalist decadence.

We can also see that vested interests perpetuate prejudices by crediting Communists with exercising control of all organizations seeking to combat ignorance and prejudice. We are equally tiring of letting Communists pose as oppressed martyrs and having true liberals' names stained with epithets of un-Americanism.

And so let us fight communism as any other phobia: by bringing it out into the open. If you put a protecting wall between Communists and college youth, you will be unconsciously protecting the Communists from us in the years to come.

Jack Moore

AMERICAN TRADITION

In a recent editorial, you spoke of a violation of an old American tradition, "My country, right or wrong." Fortunately, Americans traditionally have never acted upon any such principle, but rather they have not hesitated to criticize when they felt that the country (i.e., the government) was doing wrong. Alexander Stephens, William Jennings Bryan, and Abraham Lincoln all opposed wars which they considered unjust.

Some countries have been less fortunate than America in this respect. While in the army, I worked as a guard in a camp of SS troops being held as possible war criminals. In discussion with them, I was struck by the calm way they related the most horrible atrocities, such as depopulation of whole areas where there had been partisan activity. To justify mass-production murder factories they used the same phrase that occurred twice in a single issue of the TAR HEEL: "My country, right or wrong."

Mr. Editor, if you believe in this slogan, you have embraced the same philosophy that eventually led to Buchenwald and Dachau. Nothing occurred in those places that could not be justified by such an outlook.

A nation is an aggregate of individuals, and as such is subject to the same mistakes and weaknesses as individuals. A nation that is not self-critical is millions of times more dangerous than an egotistical individual. (Millions of Germans who are currently biting dandelions by the roots from Narvik to El Alamein would have profited from this knowledge.) A nation that believes in "My Country, right or wrong" negates all virtues that conflict with blind obedience to the state. It is a nation without a conscience, without national morality. America is no such nation!

Bill Evans

GOOD AND BAD

It appears that there is a student here at the University who feels that he is qualified to decide what is good and what is bad for the University. Mr. Cherry obviously believes that Dr. Frank Graham was a bad influence in view of his (Cherry's) statement in Friday's Durham Herald that a "rather conservative" president is needed to regain the loss of prestige and reputation here at UNC. The inference is quite plain that Dr. Frank's 19 year tenure cost the University prestige.

Doesn't Mr. Cherry realize that the great prestige and fame of the University throughout our nation is due, in great measure, to Dr. Graham? (I make reference to such well-know "left-wing" publications as Time, Life, etc.) Doesn't he realize that the University is so highly esteemed today because of Dr. Graham's leadership and inspiration in not capitulating to the narrow, biased, prejudiced views of those afraid of any idea slightly to the left of a John Bricker? Obviously, he does not realize it!

Of course, with the installation of a conservative regime, the leftist groups would be curtailed, but that is relatively unimportant. The main thing Mr. Cherry is talking about is our reputation. What would happen to it? In such a set-up UNC would no longer be considered an oasis of freedom and unbridled inquiry, and as far as prestige is concerned, we would be in the same class as some other Universities in this country who are recognized more for their lack of achievements than for anything else.

Is this what Mr. Cherry calls an improvement in our reputation?

'Merchant' Background

By Vestal Taylor

One of the big theatrical performances of the school year took place with the Playmaker presentation of William Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice" in the Forrest Theatre. The local performance opened Friday night under the very able direction of Kai Jurgenson. Jurgenson, a graduate student in the D.A. department, has prepared a worthy presentation of a great work, but the most spectacular piece of work on the show has been done by Lynn Gault, the set designer.

Those who have seen the current issue of the magazine "Theatre Arts" probably noticed a large spread given a group of dramatists from the University of Missouri in their presentation of "The Comedy of Errors." The sets were apparently well done, but they were not in the same class with the setting Gault has afforded the local performance of "The Merchant" with the natural beauty of the theatre, and the gigantic scrim utilizing the most extensive array of Linnebach projectors that we have heard of anywhere off Broadway.

For the benefit of those who may not know, a Linnebach projector throws the scenery on the scrim in color, thus eliminating the necessity of tediously hand painting scenery flats. This show is well worth the trip just to see how the project works.

Linnebachs are not new on campus but they have never before been used so extensively in this section of the country. Sound and Fury made use of the projectors in providing scenery for one of their late shows, "Sweep It Clean."

Talk is already being heard concerning next year's Playmaker tour. Some of this talk is just plain muttering, for the people who went on tour this year still aren't satisfied with the way things were run while the company was gone. Plans are as yet indefinite but it seems fairly certain that there will be some changes made either in personnel or personalities. As this space stated once before, the participants were dissatisfied with the choice of the play that was taken on tour. They felt that "School For Scandal" was not the type production to give the state audiences a fair idea of the work being done here at the university.

Just now it seems a fair guess that the play taken on tour will be a full length play written by a graduate student in the local department. The one most likely to be chosen is a play written by Mike Casey. Casey's play was submitted to the D.A. staff for consideration as the third full length play to be presented here this year. However, the staff members turned his work down in favor of Hirsch's "Repple Depple" and their faces have been red ever since.

Garrett Leverton, of Samuel French Inc., N. Y. agents and publishers, has shown a great amount of interest in the work, and the interest of the local staff has climbed steadily since this became known.

There is a better than average possibility that Casey's play will be produced in the big time and it is almost certain to be shown here next year under the auspices of the Playmakers.

It seems strange to the uninitiated that local talent had to go so far from home for deserved recognition. Here's wishing Casey luck.

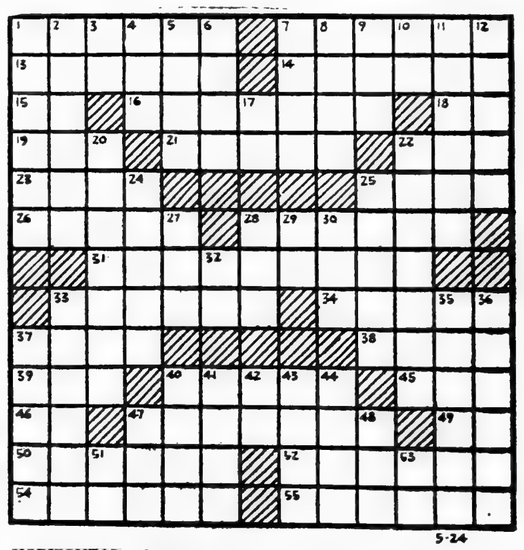
CORRECTION



Editor:

Let me correct but one of Mr. W. R. Johnston's errors and false impressions regarding my letter to Senator Hoey.

I made it very clear to the good Senator that I HAD NO OBJECTION TO THE DISCLOSURE OF MY NAME. True, I did not categorically request that it be broadcast throughout the land. It is also true that Senator Hoey saw fit to withhold my name from inquiring reporters. I know of no reason why unless he thought it best to keep proper names confidential in matters of that sort. I call attention to the fact that he also withheld Freistadts's name also when the affair was initially aired in the Senate.

I fail to see that the manner of revealing the Freistadt Fellowship is illegitimate or sneaking. I have no regrets whatsoever. As a matter of fact I'm tickled "pink" over the outcome. At long last, the American people have refused to be taken for clowns, suckers, and dupes any further.

Varsity, Frosh Nines Meet State

McGinn Scheduled To Hurl for Locals In Final of Season

Today is the day. It will be the final chance the Tar Heel baseballers, suffering under a three game losing streak, have to climb out of third place in the Big Four standings. Should Carolina win today they will be tied for second with the Wolfpack; if they lose, they will sink deeper into Duke territory.

Late yesterday afternoon the Carolina braintrust was undecided as to who they would start on the mound for the Tar Heels. However, it looked like lefty Bill McGinn might be given the starting nod in the final game of the season.

While the Tar Heel team will be gunning for a tie for the second spot in the League, Stan Goodman will be out to clinch the Big Four batting title. He was in the lead at the conclusion of last week's games and should take the crown with a good day's work.

His closest competitor is Wake Forest's Wiley Warren, who has been steadily creeping up to the top spot.

The Tar Heels, fifth in the Southern Conference, started the season off with a bang, dropping the first game to Florida, and then going without a defeat until they met Wake Forest and started into Big Four play.

Since the opening of the Big Four loop play the local club has not done too well. They dropped the entire Wake Forest series (Couldn't have lost to a better team!), split with Duke three and two, and so far have won one out of three with State. They haven't dropped a Conference game outside of the Big Four.

The Tar Heels are one of the most highly rated teams at the plate, having the best team batting average in the four team circuit. Three Carolina players (Don Ward, Sid Varney, and Goodman) are right on top of the heap as far as batting is concerned. But Wake Forest's championship squad has the corner on the pitching honors. Vander Clute, Bauer, and Company have all but strangled the three other teams in the League.

Deacons, Richmond To Tourney; Goodman, Varney Make SC Team

The powerful Wake Forest baseball team, reputed by oldtimers to be about the classiest nine the Southern Conference has seen since its origination, will take a step up the ladder to national fame when they participate in District Three NCAA baseball tournament on June 9-11 at Charlotte.

The Deacons waltzed away with both the Big Four and Southern Conference crowns on a composite if unbelievable record of 26 wins and only 2 losses, one against a semi-pro outfit. The Baptist Hollow athletes join Richmond, Kentucky and Mississippi State in the round robin tourney, the winner of which will determine the Southern representative in the national collegiate championships.

With such pitching aces as Dick Vander Clute, Harry Nicholas and Vernon Mustian, the Deacons clinched the conference title over the week-end via the back door. Clemson, who had been the only team with a chance of beating Wake Forest out, lost in an upset to South Carolina, thus giving the first place honor to the Baptists.

The Southern Conference standings as of May 21:

Teams	W.	L.	Pct.
Wake Forest	13	1	.929
South Carolina	13	5	.722
Richmond	7	3	.700
Clemson	10	5	.667
North Carolina	11	8	.579
Maryland	5	4	.556
William and Mary	6	5	.545
Virginia Mil.	5	5	.500
NC State	8	10	.445
Virginia Tech	5	7	.417
Duke	9	13	.409
Furman	5	8	.385
Geo. Washington	2	5	.286
Davidson	3	8	.273
Wash. and Lee	2	8	.200

Coed Picnic

This afternoon from 5:30 to 7:30 the grounds behind the Women's gym will be the scene of a big coed pow-wow. The Women's Athletic Association is holding its annual picnic.

All awards for the year in women's sports will be presented. The presentation of the sorority all-sports cup and the dormitory sports cup will highlight the affair.

In addition to the four sports cups which will go to the years' outstanding women athletes, monograms will be awarded to all coeds who made as many as 200 points during the year.

The W.A.A. doesn't intend for the winners in the several coed intramural sports to go unrecognized. The plaque for softball goes to the Town team, and the Pi Phi sorority will take home two, one in volley ball and one in swimming.

The Chi O's will take the honors in archery and also in tennis, where Kay D. Durham was a big factor in the Chi O victory.

The Town team takes the plaque in badminton, which they won, and in which Pat Winslow deserves a large share of the credit.

Stan Goodman, Carolina's hard-hitting second baseman, and Sid Varney, Tar Heel catcher who was second only to Goodman in the slugging column, were named to the annual all-conference team over the weekend by the Southern Conference Sports Writers Association.

Goodman is currently leading the Big Four hitting, with a healthy .417 avergae. In addition to his contributions at the plate, the well-built second-sacker's smooth infield play has been one of the main cogs in the Tar Heel defense throughout the season.

Varney, who has recently been elected one of the co-captains of next year's Tar Heel nine, has turned in a stellar job behind the plate for the locals. His left-handed batting power has been a threat to Big Four hurlers all season, and most of the year he was leading the circuit's batting race.

Goodman, a rising junior, has two more years of eligibility, and Carolina fans are expecting great things of him in the future.

Varney will close out his athletic career at Tar Heelia next spring, after starring in two sports at Carolina. He was an outstanding guard on Carolina's 1946, '47, and '48 football teams, but will not be eligible for the gridiron next season.

Freshman Nine In Night Contest For League Title

Carolina's Tar Baby nine and State's Wolfcubs will decide the Little Big Four baseball championship tonight when they play each other for that honor in Raleigh's Devereaux Meadow. Game time is 8 o'clock.

Carolina coach Henry House will start lefty Henry Schacht on the Hill for the Tar Babies, with Monroe Johnson being held in reserve in the bull pen.

The Frosh nine, like their varsity mates, have experienced a season of ups and downs. The locals have an overall record of ten wins and three defeats. All of the Tar Babies' losses have been at the hands of Big Four rivals, with State whipping them twice and Duke gaining the upper hand once.

However, the locals claim seven victories in the Big Four circuit, having swept their four-game series with Wake Forest, swamping the Blue Imps of Duke twice, and stopping State once. The Tar Babies have one tie game on record, a 6-6 affair with Duke.

After dropping their first three tilts, the State frosh got hot and ran up a win streak of nine straight contests.

In the first of the three games thus far between the Carolina diamonders and the Wolfcubs, the locals came out on top, 4-0, but the State nine came back to take the next two tilts, 7-4, and 11-3.

PROTEST MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Intramural protest committee this afternoon at 2:30 in room 311, Woollen Gym.

Emerson Team Wins Campus Crown With 8-1 Victory Over Sigma Chi

The Emerson Misfits blasted out an 8-1 victory over a hapless Sigma Chi nine yesterday afternoon on the intra-mural field to clinch the campus softball title.

The three hit pitching of Choo Reagan and the timely hitting of the Misfit batters proved too much for Sigma Chi. Emerson took the championship with no trouble.

George Clark scored the losers' only run by lining a sharp drive down the first base line in the first inning that went into the hedge for a home run.

Misfits Clinch It

However the Misfits jumped back in their half of the second and pushed three tallies across. They then put the game away in the big third by adding five more. Home runs by Joe Romano and Bill Spiegal coupled with Sigma Chi errors accounted for all five of the markers.

Reagan, cited by some as one of the best softball pitchers in the university, had his opponents in complete control all the way. His variety of pitches and sizzling speed had the Sigma Chi batters almost completely baffled, and he didn't allow a single damaging blow with the exception of Clark's homer in the first.

Ken Wright, the losing pitcher, allowed only 7 bingles but along with costly fumbles by his teammates they proved good for a decisive victory for the Misfits.

PiKA's Beaten in Semi-finals

Proceding this championship game was the playoff for the fraternity division title in which Sigma Chi nosed out last year's champions, PiKA, by 2-1.

In this hotly fought pitcher's duel between Wright of Sigma Chi and Charlie Smith of PiKA, Barto Garret clinched the game for Sigma Chi in the last of the fourth by blasting a long four-bagger into deep left-center to give Wright a one run margin which he kept for the remaining two innings.—CHARLEY MELVIN

Cavaliers Beat Stickmen, 12-1; Manning, Lynch Co-Captains

The 1949 lacrosse team didn't come up with a miracle Saturday, as the Virginia Cavaliers played true-to-form and defeated the Tar Heels by a score of 12 to 1 on Navy field.

Bert Sadtler, Charlottesville attackman, was the big gun in the Cavalier's attack as he collected three goals and one assist. Billy Hooper, star player for Virginia, did not score, but chipped in with three timely assists. Duke had defeated the Cavaliers on Friday night in Durham, by a score of 8 to 3.

The Tar Heels played excellent defensive ball for the first quarter, as they held Virginia to three goals. The opponents went to work in the next period and at half-time led 9 to 0. The remaining men on the bench played the second half and added three more before Carolina was able to dent the Virginia goal.

The Tar Heels ended their season with a more or less perfect record. They lost eleven games during the season, including thorough trouncings by Washington and Lee, Delaware, VMI, Duke Freshmen, and Virginia. The Blue and White showed sparks of good lacrosse in their games with Annapolis Lacrosse Club and VMI. The only game that the Tar Heels should have won was the William and Mary encounter which was played in a sea of mud.

Kirk Manning and Grant Lynch were named to captain the Carolina team in 1950. Coach Darden expects to travel to Baltimore, Maryland, next year, to engage either Maryland, Western Maryland, or Loyola.

TENNIS PICTURES

Pictures of the singles and doubles finals of this year's Southern Conference tennis tournament will be shown tonight at 7:30 in room 304 of Woollen Gym. All are invited.

Seixas, Taylor Win Sedgefield Honors

Masterful Vic Seixas, Carolina's top claim to big time amateur tennis, added another trophy to his well-stocked collection Sunday when he won the finals of the third annual Sedgefield Inn Tennis championships at Greensboro.

Seixas, a native of Philadelphia, annexed the first place honors after he defeated George Ball of El Paso, Texas in the final round, 6-4, 7-5, 6-1. Seixas and Ball who had been seeded one and two respectively in the pre-tourney drawing provided several hundred onlookers with a fine brand of tennis in the torrid final match.

Ball, a former Northwestern net ace and national ranking star, was stiff competition for the younger Seixas in the first two sets but the Texan couldn't maintain his pace and faltered in the final set as Seixas won handily.

Seixas also received a bit of finery by teaming with his running mate here at Carolina, Clark Taylor, as the two local students won the doubles crown. The Tar Heel pair edged out Ball and Bill Lurie of New York, in a long, gruelling match, 6-3, 6-2, 12-14, 6-2.

Ducat Deadline For Faculty Set

The Carolina ticket office has announced that members and employees of the University have until June 1 to place their orders with the Athletic Association for season tickets.

Their priority will end on that date and any tickets remaining at that time will be placed on sale to the next priority group, the Educational Foundation. The Foundation priority extends until June 15, when the tickets will go on sale to other alumni.

Public sale of the pasteboards is slated to open July 1.

During the past two years the demand for season tickets by the alumni has been so great that all good seats in the stadium were taken within a very short time after sale opened to them. Faculty members are urged, therefore, not to delay placing their orders.

LACROSSE PARTY

The lacrosse team will hold its first party at Hogan's Lake tomorrow night at 5:30.

Monogram Meeting

The election of next year's officers will feature an important meeting of the Monogram Club tonight at 7:30 at the club house.

All members of the club have been urged to be present to take part in the elections.

Health Insurance Bill Would Cost 5.6 Billion a Year, Says FSA Boss

WASHINGTON, May 23.—(UP)—President Truman's controversial health insurance plan would cost at least $5,600,000,000 a year, Congress was told today.

J. Donald Kingsley, acting Federal Security Administrator, gave the figure to a Senate labor subcommittee which opened hearings on measures to improve the nation's health.

He said speedy enactment of the President's compulsory program is necessary to improve private medical practice and prevent a march toward "state medicine."

Kingsley said the $5,600,000,000 figure does not include direct aid to the poor for medical care. He estimated that would cost an extra $200,000,000 a year.

He revealed that the program calls for self-employed persons such as farmers and shopkeepers to pay two and one-quarter percent of their first $4,800 of net income in new health insurance taxes.

Employed persons would pay one and one half per cent on the first $4,800, with their employers matching the amount.

The tax collections would not be enough to pay for the entire program. The government would make up the difference by appropriating an amount equal to one per cent of the total income and wages on which the health tax is levied. At present employment and wage levels, this would amount to about $1,340,000,000 a year.

it completed its inquiry into the uranium loss.

He said the committee has not yet discussed Hickenlooper's charges against Lilienthal.

Lilienthal said today that he is willing to stand on his record as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

He said the progress of the nation's atomic program over the past two and a half years in itself is an answer to Senator Hickenlooper's "vague wholesale indictment."

The Iowa Republican, former chairman of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, blamed Lilienthal for "incredible mismanagement" and for "two highly-publicized fiascos." He identified the latter as the case of the missing uranium and the disclosure that alleged Communists were sharing in the commission's fellowship program.

Hickenlooper said, "It is my considered opinion, in the light of the record of the past two years, that the interests of the nation can best be served by the president's requesting the resignation of Mr. Lilienthal."

Reds Quit West Berlin Under American Orders

Strikebreakers, Police Begin Leaving Troubled Area; 1500 Wounded Reported

BERLIN, May 24—(UP)—Communist strikebreakers and Russian controlled police evacuated all West Berlin tonight, bowing to an ultimatum by American Commandant Brig. Gen. Frank L. Howley who gave them two hours to get out.

Howley delivered the ultimatum for the three Western powers on the fourth day of a railroad strike in which at least two persons have been killed and 1,200 hurt or wounded.

He also demanded the withdrawal of any Red Army troop units in the U. S. sector.

Even before 7 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT), the deadline set by Howley, the East Berlin Communists began to leave peacefully.

There was a 41-minute delay at Wannsee in the U. S. sector where an estimated 500 Soviet-controlled police and strikebreakers were entrenched. Ready for trouble, West Berlin police had arrived there with Red Cross nurses and stretcher-bearers.

The only snag developed at Priesterwag, also in the U. S. sector where 37 Russian soldiers refused to leave by truck. The rails had been ripped up and the train they had called could not move them. They promised to leave when the track was fixed.

The last of an estimated 2,000 Soviet sector police and Communist strikebreakers, rammed in by train by the Russians Saturday and early Sunday, had gone from the "el" stations four and one-half hours after the Western ultimatum was issued.

Dean D. D. Carroll of the Commerce School will make the award.

Eisler Trial Granted 4-Day Postponement

LONDON, May 24—(UP)—A British judge, overriding defense protests, today granted a four-day delay in the extradition trial of Gerhart Eisler and ordered the Communist fugitive held without bail.

Magistrate John F. Eastwood ordered Eisler to appear in Bow Street court again Friday to answer the U.S. demand that he be extradited. Eisler will be returned to Brixton prison to await his next court appearance.

Eisler entered the oak panelled courtroom at 11:30 a.m. today. His cause was disposed of in eight minutes.

Outside, a dozen Communist sympathizers, under the watchful eye of reinforced police guards, distributed leaflets demanding that Eisler be freed as a political refugee.

The fugitive Communist's appearance was delayed for an hour while the court dealt with charges against six drunks and 10 prostitutes.

When Eisler's case opened, an attorney for the United States asked for a delay of at least eight days to permit preparation of evidence.

Defense Attorney Dudley Collard objected vigorously. When the four-day delay was ordered, Collard asked that Eisler—who jumped bail to flee the United States in the Polish liner Batory—be released in bail again. Eastwood refused.

Wolfe Roommates To Talk Tonight

Lilienthal Takes Security Rap For Lost U-235

AEC Head Willing To 'Catch Hell'

WASHINGTON, May, 24—(UP)—Chairman David E. Lilienthal admitted today that the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission was remiss in waiting six weeks to notify the FBI a small amount of uranium 235 had been lost.

He also admitted that the delay was a violation of the commission's own security regulations, and offered to "catch hell" for what he described as a "human mistake" by subordinates.

At the same time, he appealed to Senate investigators not to whip up public hysteria over alleged violations of atomic security until all the facts are known.

Lilienthal testified before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee which is checking on the commission's security measures before voting atomic funds for the coming fiscal year. A separate inquiry along the same lines is being made by the joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee.

The hearing covered a wide range of security problems, including a fake "theft" of uranium at the Hanford, Wash. plutonium plant, a split in the commission over the wisdom of exporting radioactive research material to Finland, and the granting of government fellowships to Communists.

Carroll L. Wilson, commission general manager, was questioned about the Hanford incident in which two bars of uranium were deliberately removed as a security test. The "loss" went unnoticed for a considerable time.

Sen. Kenneth S. Wherry, R., Neb., said he had been informed the uranium was kept "for 90 days" by a security officer.

Wilson confirmed that the removal was not discovered immediately, but did not say how many days were involved. He said the uranium was returned only yesterday, and that as a result of the test, the system of accounting for materials had been tightened.

He implied that the senators might take a different view of the test if they knew "how many thousands of such (uranium) pieces are processed" at Hanford, but said he could not go into that at a public hearing.

Military Wage Hike Is Defeated by House

WASHINGTON, May 24—(UP)—The House today killed a $406,000,000 military pay raise bill which would have hiked the wages of every man and woman in uniform except recruits.

The sponsors had appeared to be in complete control throughout floor debate. They beat down a series of amendments to trim raises for generals and to give something extra to the rookie.

Timber-r-r!

The Chi Phi fraternity house on S. Columbia Street was left in total darkness last night as a result of the electrical wind storm that swept Chapel Hill early in the evening. At the storm's beginning, 7:30, a giant tree said to be nearly 120 feet tall crashed to the ground. On its way, the tree smashed a second floor window, broke a power line, throwing the house into darkness, and narrowly missed injuring Chi Phi Sam Haddock. The Chapel Hill fire department was called, but left the scene immediately when no fire developed.

Trustees Vote Unanimously Not To Start 'Witch-Hunt'

W. D. CARMICHAEL, JR.

Committee of Chancellors Reports On 'Communism and the University'

By Margaret Gaston

The Board of Trustees yesterday passed a resolution which would leave the Communist problem solely in the hands of the Administration and faculties of the Greater University and not resort to "witch-hunting."

The Trustees unanimously adopted a resolution suggested by the Chancellors of the three branches of the University, chairmaned by Controller W. D. Charmichael, Jr. It said detective work against Communists should be left to professionals like the FBI and the State Board of Investigation.

The Chancellors' report on "Communism and the University" said "there is only one avowed Communist Party member now teaching at any of the three institutions. His appointment is temporary and it expires June 1, 1949." Chancellor Robert B. House said avowed Communist Hans Freistadt, part-time instructor in the Physics Department, would not be re-hired, and that steps along this line were made as soon as the administration discovered he was a member of the Communist Party.

Carmichael pointed out that Freistadt had only one week of employment until his University teaching appointment expires, and that he thought "the problem solves itself."

John Sprunt Hill of Durham declared that to fire the part-time instructor now would make a martyr out of him. "Nothing would please him more," he added, "and the least said about it the best."

"We are kidding ourselves if we think mere signing of an oath will keep the Communists out," Charmichel said. He said the administration "would go beyond mere acceptance of a man's word that he is not a Communist" in hiring faculty members in the future. He explained that the University would contact people whom they knew could be trusted to give recommendations for future employees of the University.

Carmichael stressed that the University administration, although they know of several alleged "Communist sympathizers," is firmly convinced that there should be no "spy-hunt," or "witch-hunt."

Former Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus of Raleigh, moved that the Board accept the Chancellors report.

M. C. Lassiter of Snow Hill then took the floor and declared that he wanted "action, and not promises." He said he approved the resolution, but only if it could be carried out. David Clark of Charlotte agreed with Lassiter in his demand for action. He said he felt that each faculty member should be made to sign a statement saying he was not Communist.

Waylan Spruill of Windsor suggested an amendment to Ehringhaus' resolution be adopted which would "instruct administration heads to discharge faculty members and students the minute it was found out that they were Communists—even if they had just one or three days of service left with the University." His amendment did not receive a second.

L. P. McLendon of Greensboro asked whom the Board could hold responsible for carrying out the resolution and how it would be done. Carmichael replied that "we'll satisfy ourselves as far as is humanly possible to determine" that future employees will not be Communists. He said he thought the administration was the only body that could handle the problem, adding that "If we can't keep them out, or at a minimum, you get us out, and get someone else who can." He declared that "this is the only sensible and honest approach."

Trustees Get Student View On President

Law School Plans Are Also Approved

Student representatives from the University and State College and a faculty committee from the Greater University presented lists of qualifications and candidates for the post of president of the Greater University to the special committee of trustees to choose the new head here yesterday. The committee, headed by Victor Bryant of Durham met in the planetarium faculty lounge for three hours.

Student body president Bill Mackie, attorney-General John Sanders and Al Lowenstein represented the University student body. Campus Government President-elect Hoyle Adams of State College represented the views of the Raleigh campus. He presented a summary of a poll taken at State on qualifications for the job.

The all-University faculty committee presented a list of qualifications and three lists of candidates through chairman R. J. M. Hobb.s Several faculty members presented individual views to the special committee.

After hearing the reports, the committee met in executive session to discuss procedure. Chairman Bryant said that, "this was not the last time that the committee will call on students of the Greater University." He said the committee would keep the Greater University Student Council informed of its progress and would call on it for help and suggestions. He expressed pleasure at the interest and help given by the students at all three branches.

The buildings committee of the trustees also met here Monday. Governor Scott appointed Wade Barber of Pittsboro to the com-

No Place Like Home

Artistic Metal Worker Hangs Hat In Truck

By Wuff Newell

Home is where you hang your hat, and Jimmie Stubbins, 51-year-old metal worker, hangs his hat in a truck.

Dressed in overalls and a tooled leather tie he picked up in Arizona many years ago, Jimmie drove into Chapel Hill Monday afternoon in his steel grey Ford truck and as soon as he had parked his house-car on Franklin Street went to the Post Office to see if he had any mail.

For 19 years Stubbins has been on the road traveling and doing artistic metal work.

"I always sleep in my truck," he explained to curious onlookers, "It saves about three dollars a night, you know."

And Jimmie's truck is a home in itself. In the back he has a large mattress on regular bed springs. In the front is a canned gas two burner stove, a portable radio, a clothes closet, and a dresser.

"I have an alarm clock," he said, "but I never set it unless I want to wake up earlier than seven o'clock."

Jimmie has not always been a metal worker. For 13 years and one day he worked in a coal mine in Illinois.

"That 13 years and one day sounds like a judge's sentence," he laughed. "People wonder how I, remember the length of time correct to the day. I guess I just have a good memory. Once in the coal mine I had to remember the names of the 1300 men I dealt with."

Nineteen years ago Jimmie took up traveling. For awhile he it appraised once and was told it was worth at least $1300. I paid $64 for it."

Despite his age, Jimmie has a perfect set of teeth. "A dentist once made an appointment with me," he smiled. "He wanted to make a cast of my teeth and use it as a pattern for straightening the teeth of children."

He is in perfect physical condition, too, claiming that he will play anyone half his age at a game and beat him.

"And he can name the game," he added.

Keeping in condition while riding all day in a truck might prove a problem to some people, but not to Jimmie.

"I just play with a bicycle inner tube," and he held out the red piece of rubber. "If you'll spend two minutes every two hours stretching it you'll always used a motorcycle with a small trailer, but a year and a half ago he changed to a truck.

"I've traveled in 40 states, Canada and Alaska," he said. "My favorite nothern state is Idaho, and in the South I think I like North Carolina best."

Today Jimmie is clean-shaven, but for several years he had a long beard which gave him the appearance of a real old-timer Alaska gold miner.

"I shaved my beard because I hadn't seen myself in two years," he explained. "People say I look better without it but more attractive with it."

On his right hand Jimmie wears a ring with a stone which looks like a diamond in it.

"I don't know exactly what it is," he told an admirer. "I had

Report of the Chancellors

(The following report of the Committee of Chancellors to the Board of Trustees of the Greater University of North Carolina is fully endorsed by the Daily Tar Heel.)

America's freedom had its beginnings on the shores of North Carolina . . . In 1587, Sir Walter Raleigh's first colony landed on the coast of what is now our state, and there kindled "freedom's holy light." . .. The hopeful flame flickered and faltered, but its gleam lighted the way across the Atlantic for thousands of freedom-loving men and women who came to found America—sweet land of liberty.

So, there is historic reason why right here in North Carolina freedom is cherished as dearly as it is anywhere else on earth.

To perpetuate this freedom, since the days of Fort Raleigh, many generations of noble men have fought and died . . . To bulwark this freedom with intellectual foundations, our Revolutionary forefathers came home victorious from Yorktown and founded in Chapel Hill the first University of the people in all the world . . .

Other sons of freedom established free universities throughout the land of the free and for over a century and a half these great liberal institutions have played a vital part in making America the most powerful nation in all history, a great force for good among mankind, and the leader of the entire democratic world . . .

Treasures beyond description are ours—spiritual, cultural, intellectual, scientific and material.

We have builded strong and crusading religious faiths. We have two and one-half million students in colleges and universities (more than all the rest of the world combined). We own 85 per cent of the world's automobiles, and 58 per cent of the world's newspapers. With less than 7 per cent of the world's population, living on only 6 per cent of the world's land, we produce one-half of the world's goods. We generate one-half of the world's electricity. Our people have 50 million saving bank accounts; and 75 million Americans hold almost 200 million insurance policies.

This wealth is not enjoyed by a limited few. It is shared by all. Our workers, with the shortest work-week in the world, receive the largest wages and enjoy the highest standards of living ever known.

The Ironic Curtain

The history of man records no parallel to the United States. And all this has been achieved in the freest and most democratic nation ever developed.

Men the world over who are permitted to know about America's record of achievement look to this free land as the hope of mankind . . . But the Soviet Dictatorship hides the Story of America from all peoples held as blinded slaves behind the Iron Curtain; and, at the same time, the Communists deploy their agents to undermine the very freedom that has made America so great . . .

Some shrewd observers say with cold-blooded frankness that democracy is not winning the struggle with the Soviet Dictatorship . . . International Communism, they say, is gaining momentum all the way from China to Chapel Hill . . .

Of course, the Communists would like to destroy the University of North Carolina . . .Why? Because it is FREE! It is the free University that the Communists fear, the free University that produces free men like you and me . . . The Communists know that Communism will not live long in a land where men are free . . .

Time for Decision

The Communist threat calls for straight thinking and prompt action . . . This is neither a time for Communist Revolutions nor for anti-Communist Resolutions . . . It is a time for cool heads; rather than hot headlines.

The decision that our Board of Trustees makes today will determine whether the University of North Carolina will continue to be a constant compass guiding free men to Truth or become a mere weathervane whose direction is determined by the way the current winds of fear are blowing . . .

If we would keep our University free, we must keep it free from anyone who would destroy it . . .

We must never forget that a free University can be destroyed as quickly by its friends as by its enemies . . .

At the same time, we do not believe that it is necessary for the University to commit suicide in order to prove to the world that it is not afraid of freedom.

The Communists are taking advantage of the unlimited freedom of our University. And if we are not realistic, prudent, and cautious, we may discover, too late, that we have been latitudinarians (or platitudinarians) who have stretched our freedom and tolerance to the point that we have been unwitting "collaborationists" of the Communists.

Freedom Forever

The University of North Carolina, for almost 160 years now, has been the foundation stone for the faith of a people who, under God, are determined to keep freedom forever as the firm basis for the fulfillment of all their powers. No university anywhere in the world stands more steadfastly for the freedom of the human mind and spirit—for freedom of thought, freedom of speech, and freedom of action . . . But we must keep the University free from those who would destroy it.

Communism Never

The University of North Carolina, in all three of its institutions, stands, united—unequivocally opposed to Communism. We are against Communism because the Communists would destroy American freedom and supplant it with Soviet Dictatorship. We are against Communism because the Communists would destroy free universities like the University of North Carolina.

Look at the Communist record. Wherever the Iron Curtain has enshrouded a nation, the Communists first destroyed the Churches, then they destroyed the Universities . . .

There is only one avowed Communist Party member now teaching at any of our three institutions. His appointment is temporary and it expires June 1, 1949.

We do know of several alleged "Communist sympathiz-

The WASHINGTON SCENE

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 24—Ever since he successfully matched florid oratory against Tom Dewey's pedantic lectures, President Truman has been convinced that magniloquence is the stuff to give the customers.

The President had such a strong hunch that the adjective was mightier than the facts that he fired his first set of campaign ghostwriters as being too reticent. He never had any reason to regret his decision.

Consequently he has become a devout devotee of the adjective—and the flowerier the better. If they are strung together like vine leaves he considers the speech a masterpiece.

Any ghostwriter who attempts to write a concise or laconic speech for Highfalutin' Harry is pretty likely to have his offering flung into the presidential wastebasket. H.S.T. loves 'em largiloquent and sesquipedalian.

He made this painfully plain to the pentagon pundits last week. They had to spend days rubbing ectoplasmic salve on their spookwriters.

The army had prepared a citation for the president to deliver at ceremonies in the White House rose garden at which Gen. Lucius D. Clay received a distinguished service medal for his job as military governor of Germany. But when the speech was handed to Mr. Truman a few hours before the ceremony he was disturbed by its dearth of superlatives.

So he picked up a pen and wrote a new speech for himself. It had more posies in it than the White Houes gardens.

When Secretary of Defense Johnson arrived for the ceremonies, the President shoved the Army's ghostspeech at him. Louie's bald dome grew as red as the White House peonies because the President had scrawled a notation to the effect that it was one of the poorest things he had ever read.

Mr. Truman then let go with his own creation, a thing of beautiful turgescence. This excerpt, as distributed in mimeographed form by the White House, will give you a rough idea:

"He (Gen. Clay) added a new and imperishable luster to his record by the manner in which he carried his uniquely challenging task in the military government in Germany.

"In this capacity he proved himself not only a soldier in the infinite tradition of our American arms, not only an administrator of rare skill, but a statesman of the highest order—firm, courageous, dedicated to the cause of peace.

"His was an assignment of unexampled complexity and difficulty, and the completion of it represents an accomplishment of which his countrymen can be forever proud."

Elks, it develops, can breathe easily this time of year. They are not considered surplus.

Rep. Henry Jackson, of Washington, learned this interesting fact after the Port Angeles, Wash., Chamber of Commerce requested his help in getting the Interior Department's fish and wildlife service to provide a surplus elk for a barbecue.

Fish and Wildlife informed Mr. Jackson it killed a number of elks each year to thin out the herds, but only in the fall.

Young reporters are exhorted to write concisely, incorporating all the salient facts in the lead paragraph—"Who, What, When, Where, and Why." A favorite line of city editors is: "Write so that a milkman in Dubuque can understand it."

The other day, a local cub covering the Department of Agriculture called his desk in great anguish.

"What do I do now?" he wailed. "The Department of Agriculture has beaten me to it. They've just issued a press handout over here and it begins:

"The price of milk in Dubuque has been reduced."

Pitching Overshoes

Of UNC Expansion

By Tom Wharton

Lewis Mumford, noted writer and professor of the humanities, recently wrote in the Southern Packet about one of his pet southern themes, the balance between agriculture and industry. He writes that North Carolina is about the only industrial area that still maintains that balance by not following the path of least resistance toward "the curse of metropolitanism" and the resultant "blight and bankruptcy."

Mumford warns, however, that North Carolina shows signs of beginning a trend to that "blight and bankruptcy" and as a result will stand to lose her healthy, colorful regional characteristics. He cites the University of North Carolina as an example, and there will be many to see his point.

He finds the campus of the University of North Carolina one of the most beautiful in America, both atmospherically and physically. But he is pessimistic about the fact that in the past 15 years Chapelina has grown like a mushroom, and that more students have graduated from here since 1935 than in all the years before then. The University of North Carolina has reached, if not surpassed, its natural limits in growth. Hardly a patch of land on the campus has not been built over or has not been assigned to a structure soon to be built. As well as being crowded physically by too many buildings, the atmosphere is crowded with too many people. The streets are crowded, the movies are jammed even during C-grade movies, dormitories are crowded with three men to a room where there are facilities for only two. Everywhere you look there is a crowd, even the little lovers' parking lanes are crowded. Mumford is right, there are just too damn many people crowding around Chapelina.

At this point, Dr. Mumford advises that a choice must be made by the people of North Carolina—either to keep on automatically building onto Chapelina as we are now, or to branch out and build other such centers of physical and atmospherical beauty and culture in other parts of the state. Naturally, he would suggest the latter.

After all, instead of doubling the population of Chapel Hill why shouldn't we build another Chapel Hill in some other part of the state. It would be a shame to expand beyond our limits here and receive the curse of metropolitanism and destroy the atmosphere of this peaceful, sleepy, carefree, lazy little community with its peaceful, sleepy, carefree, lazy little police department and its peaceful, sleepy, carefree, lazy little fire department and its peaceful, sleepy, carefree, lazy little telephone system and its peaceful, sleepy, carefree, lazy little merchants association.

Dr. Mumford suggests other locales in the state that would easily lend themselves to the cultivation of mental, moral, atmospherical and physical faculties of the people might be the Winston-Salem area, the Asheville area, the Wilmington area. We might even try to colonize the Charlotte area in a pinch.

When one thinks over such a situation if it were ever to come to such a pass, one gets all kinds of pictures. Think how it would be to get your class tickets at the first of the quarter with your eight o'clock class in Bingham, your nine o'clock in Bingham Z in Asheville, you have a ten o'clock Y-court period in Wilmington, your eleven o'clock class in Gerrard X in Winston-Salem and your afternoon archeology lab in Charlotte. Such a system could conceivably entail some difficulty of management. For one thing, all those places like Asheville, Winston-Salem, Wilmington, and Charlotte would have to have a planetarium, a football stadium, a bell tower, and an old well, all of which are necessary to carry on tradition. Those cities also, regarding tradition, might refuse to allow their sidewalks to be de-paved, or they might take a dim view of allowing all their dogs to run through their dining halls and such places.

Another obvious difficulty would be the problem of what to do with, if you'll pardon the expression, Dook. The people over there in western Durham claim a certain amount of culture and atmospherical and physical beauty also. They would insist upon branching out into other parts of the state too. What a horrible situation it would be to have a branch of Dook University in all the major cities of North Carolina! The picture becomes too sordid when you imagine the reaction on our brothers over at State College that would be caused by this expansion of culture. North Carolina would rival Texas as a cattle raising state if State College decided to branch out with their culture, or agriculture of you prefer.

But enough of this wild fancy. People have gone crazy trying to arrive at a conclusion for such things as this.

The crowd at Charlie Barnett's concert wasn't looking so gloomy when the vocalist gave a torrid rendition of "Guhloomy Sunday." In fact one in the audience was so stirred he wasn't acting quite rational—Harvie Ward stood up and opened a large red and white striped beach umbrella, twirled it a couple of times, and sat back down again.

After a loud crash and the sound of smashing steel was heard Friday afternoon on a Chapel Hill corner, a crowd soon gathered to view the wreck of a new red convertible. Two boy scouts in the crowd. Roy Holsten and Jukie Holt, rushed up to see if they could assist the apparently undisturbed driver of the convertible. He was a trifle inebriated it turned out, and he replied to their well intended offer to help "You're not helping me—Ishm a going to help you!" The car he ran into was fortunately unhurt as a tiny little girl was in the front seat looking quite baffled by the whole thing.

People complained about service during the war, but few have had the experience of one Anies Daye who sauntered into the Coffee Shop last Sunday to eat a quiet meal. Now, Mr. Daye waited a good long time to be served and after he had reached the exasperation point, he went to the kitchen to see what the main trouble was. He magnanimously offered to serve himself, but met his rather harried friend in the culinary department who thrust an order pad in his hand and tied an apron about his waist. Presto! Mr. Daye was now a waiter. A few hours later when the evening rush was over, he was rewarded a big T-Bone steak for his pains.

There is a very proud little Model A Ford on campus named Churchill who was most insulted the other day when Bob Hannah, Bob Ball, and Lucille Conly came whirling in from an afternoon spin at a breath-taking speed, at least it was breathtaking to the red tin lizzie which had no brakes, and consequently ran into dignified little Churchill in a most undignified manner. The collision didn't even dent Churchill, who gave an indignant little snort at this impertinence, but hub caps and all sorts of odds and ends came flying off the offending vehicle. That'll learn em to mess with Churchill!

Who stole the show at the May Day exercises last Sunday? It might have been amost attractive Humpty Dumpty teetering on the branches of a tree near the court of the May Queen Ferne and her attendants. Edie Knight was so successful in her portrayal of Humpty, the vascillating egg, that she kept the audience in suspense and speculation whether "all the King's men"—would have to put Edie together again.

The Camel salesman has been making the rounds lately with his little gift of four smokes to worthy students. He wandered into one of the sorority houses and asked the girls if they smoked Camels. "Naw," replied one coed, "We all smoke Luckies or Chesterfields." Undaunted he persued his spiel for Camels until one little girl remarked "They all taste exactly alike and you know it!" There upon he departed to give his talk elsewhere.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor:

In reference to Mr. John Myers' letter of Saturday in which he states, among other unfounded tripe that the Marshall Plan has been justified by the claim that Russia intends to attack Western Europe. Why, then, Mr. Myers, was Russia offered aid under the Marshall Plan, and why was such aid refused? Also, Mr. Myers, I do not think that you can deny that Russia has attacked Western Europe. Surely you are acquainted with the Communist's advance vanguard which is as effective an attack as could be conceived, for, due to the fetter's of democratic institutions which Lenin declared inferior to the interests of the working classes, we cannot indulge in wholesale slaughter of these Communists who seek to dictate. Stalin writes, "Not a single important decision is arrived at by the mass organization of the proletariat without direction from the Party."

To combat Russia's offensive we can only give aid to those countries trying to pit their small resources against those of Communist revolutionaries aided by Russia. The only justification needed for the Truman Doctrine, the Marshall Plan, war economy, and, as you lie, the refusal to de-Nazify Western Germany, is a law as old as Nature—that of self-preservation.

You write that Russia offered to submit to international inspection of atomic developments—good! The Baruch-Lilienthal Plan call for just such action, but the Baruch plan calls for immediate inspection, while Mr. Gromyko wishes for us to destroy our stockpile of bombs before such inspection takes place. In view of the secrecy surrounding the Soviet Union and the obvious possible results of Gromyko's plan, it is ridiculous to suppose that we destroy our defenses without learning something of the Soviet Union's atomic developments.

As for our reluctance to shout about the recent Russian let up in the cold war, do you celebrate if someone who has been pounding Hell out of you decides to stop. Especially if there is reason to believe that the pause is to gain new strength.

Mr. Myers, where does your allegiance lie, or do you have an allegiance? Is it that you have hopes of someday escaping your teacher's lot, and dictating to the proletariat?

Cassell Goes Route for Win; Sid Varney Paces Day's Hitting

By Lew Chapman

Men who know baseball best aver that the best formula for a winning ball club is good pitching and timely hitting and the Carolina nine proved the soundness of this theory yesterday at Emerson stadium before a capacity crowd when they combined both to close the regular 1949 season with a 7-1 victory over State.

The excellent twirling originated from the strong right arm of Dean Cassell who, in notching his sixth decision of the year, limited the hard-hitting Wolfpack to seven scattered hits while his mates combed two State hurlers for seven runs on only 10 safeties.

The victory gave the Tar Heels an even split with the Raleigh collegians in Big Four competition a two wins apiece and insured a spot for both clubs over Duke in the final Big Four standings.

Cassell the Master

Cassell, a junior from Union, N. J., was in complete control throughout as he went the route for the fourth time this season. Although he only fanned two, Cassell's fast one had the Wolfpack batters popping up and his curve ball resulted in many ground balls, three of which the alert Tar Heel infield converted into double plays.

Sid Varney, Rip Ryan, Ed Lamb and newcomer Doc Cranford all carried heavy timber for the locals with clean-up man Varney smashing a double and a homer to lead the hit parade. Stan Goodman collected one hit to stay in the running for the Big Four batting title.

After Varney's double had chased across the Tar Heel's first and leading run in the third frame, Bunn Hearn's disciples really got down to run making in the fourth to score four times and cinch the contest early.

Rally in Fourth

Jim Ballou's single started things off with Cranford's two base hit scoring him. State pitcher Bob Smith then passed Cassell and was relieved by the Wolfpack ace, Ernie Johnson. Johnson proceeded to walk Don Ward and Goodman to force in Cranford and then Ryan's single tallied Cassell and Ward for the third and fourth runs of the inning.

Johnson settled down after that and held the Tar Heels until tween a wild pitch but Cassell's best chucking performance occurred in the fourth when State loaded the bases with none out. Cassell then bowed his neck to get out of the inning unscathed when he made two men lift infield pop ups and accounted for the third out on a feeble grounder. the seventh when first man up Varney teed off on one of his offerings and parked the ball 370 feet away in the right field hedges for his second round tripper of the year. The locals scored once more in the eighth on Goodman's single, his stolen base, an infield out and Varney's long run-scoring fly.

State got to Cassell for their only run in the seventh on a pair of singles sandwiched be-

Rained Out

RALEIGH, May 24—Rain forced postponement of tonight's Little Big Four championship tilt between the Carolina and State freshmen nines, with the game being rescheduled for the State diamond tomorrow afternoon at 3:30.

The contest, originally scheduled for Devereaux Meadow, will decide whether Coach Henry House's Tar Baby baseballers or the Wolfcubs will carry off honors in the junior circuit.

Lefty Henry Schacht is slated to start on the hill for the Carolina team, with Monroe Johnson, big righthander, held in reserve in the bull pen.

DIMAGGIO STILL OUT

NEW YORK, May 24—(UP)—New York Yankee outfielder Joe DiMaggio said today that his hour-long workout before last night's game had caused his injured right heel to hurt so much he can not resume practice for several days.

"Yes, it hurts," he said. "If it felt all right I'd be out there. But it doesn't so that is that."

Top Cinder Showings Are Expected In SC-SEC Tourney This Saturday

By Frank Allston, Jr.

Some red hot track action is expected Saturday night when the Southern Conference's top trackmen will meet the pride of the Southeastern Conference in a night meet at Grant Field, Atlanta.

The performers were decided last week end when the two conferences held their respective championship meets. Here at Chapel Hill, Carolina's powerful squad ran away with The Southern Conference meet, scoring 75 points to 47½ for second-place Duke.

Georgia Tech, meanwhile, barely edged out Louisiana State for the SEC crown in a very close meet at Atlanta.

In sweeping the Southern Conference honors, Carolina grabbed seven first places, took a tie for another and set two new loop records. Several Carolina performers came dangerously close to breaking existing marks.

Tar Heel weightman Bob Seligman, who copped firsts in both the shot and the discus, set a new standard with his discus throw of 156 ft. 6¼ in. Sam Magill set a new two-mile record with his 9:27.8 running of the two-mile stint. Both of these Tar Heels will be relied on heavily for the Southern Conference at Atlanta.

Other Southern Conference performers who will be counted on for the meet Saturday are Bob Kirk, Carolina javelin tosser; Dick Taylor, Carolina high hurdler; Billy Joyner, Tar Heel high jumper; Halsted Holden, local half-miler; Julian MacKenzie, Carolina miler; Tommy Reeves, Duke broad jumper and low hurdler; Bill Alexion, Maryland sprinter; Bob Bowles, Duke pole vaulter and a fine trio of quarter-milers, Loren Young of Duke, Carolina's Laddie Terrell and veteran Ed Matthews of Maryland.

All of these preformers turned in performances better or almost as good as the winning times in the SEC's meet. On the basis of comparative times, only the SEC mile relay team seems to have the definite edge over their "northern" cousins. LSU will represent the SEC and Maryland will represent the Southern Conference.

Most of the events are toss ups with the Southern Conference rated an edge in the javelin, mile, two-mile, discus, and hurdles. The SEC is given an edge in the sprints and pole vault.

Only three Southern Conference athletics have decided against making the trip to Atlanta. In the 100-yard dash Tom Beavers of Virginia Tech will replace teammate Hamilton Meriwether, who will run the 220.

Sam Lindsay of William and Mary will run in place of Bob Palmer of Maryland in the mile run. The other Southern Conference place-winners will compete.

Methodist Orphanage pushed across a single run in the ninth inning yesterday afternoon to edge out Chapel Hill, 11-10, in a North Central Conference game played on the local high school diamond.

Jack Maultsby and Collier Hill led the local effort, the former getting three singles in four trips while the latter had a single and a double in five attempts.

Chapel Hill was eliminated from the State Class "A" Eastern championships last Saturday night, losing to Kinston, 11-2.

Bowman Gray Scene of Dorm, Frat Bids for Aquatic Honors

The intramural swimming championships will take place tonight in Bowman Gray Pool. Proceedings will get underway at 8 o'clock with finals being held in all events of both the fraternity and dormitory divisions.

Six men from each division have qualified for every event. Six teams from the fraternity division have qualified for the 200-yard freestyle relay and also for the 150-yard medley relay. In the dorm division, only Town and the Med School succeeded in placing teams in the finals.

The Phi Gams triumphed last year in the fraternity division but the Sigma Chis are strongly favored to dethrone them in tonight's meet. The Sigma Nu team has been labled as the lark horse.

On the dormitory side of the story, it's still last year's champions of Emerson Stadium that are definite favorites but the Med School also has a strong team entered.

All contestants and officials are asked to be on hand at the scheduled starting time in order that events may get under way on time.

Charms will be awarded to the winners of all events while a team trophy will be presented to the high-point scorer in the fraternity division. Results will be computed into the overall mural standings for the year.

Here is the schedule of events:

8:00—25-yard freestyle.
8:10—25-yard backstroke.
8:20—50-yard breastroke.
8:30—Diving.
9:00—50-yard freestyle.
9:10—50-yard backstroke.
9:20—100-yard freestyle.
9:35—150-yard medley relay.
9:50—200-yard freestyle relay.

Frat, Dorm Titles In 'Shoes, Tennis Polo on Line Today

The Mural department is bringing to a close its spring quarter program this week. Finals are being held today in water polo and tennis, as well as tonight's swimming.

The fraternity tennis finals will take place at 5 o'clock on the varsity courts. The winner of an earlier match between Sigma Chi 1 and KA 2 will face ATO 1 in the championship match. Town 1 copped the dormitory league crown on Monday by defeating Town 2. The campus championships will be held either this afternoon or tomorrow.

Only fraternity teams were entered in the water polo competition and because of a change in the schedule, the finals will not be until tomorrow. The championship will be determined by the outcome of a game between Sigma Nu and Sigma Chi.

The campus championships in horseshoes were slated to take place today but with last night's schedule being rained out they will be held up until tomorrow. Dormitory and fraternity winners will be determined today, however. Here is this afternoon's horseshoe schedule:

4:00—PiKA 3 vs Zeta 3; Chi Psi 2 vs ATO 4.
4:30—KA 1 vs Phi Kap Sig 1; Sig Nu 1 vs PiKA 2.
5:00—Winners of the 4 o'clock matches.
5:30—Winners of the 4:30 matches.
6:00—Emerson 1 vs Town 2.
6:30—Town 3 vs winner 5 o'clock.

'Plenty Excited,' Says Queen After Crowning

Dressed in a long-sleeved gown of white marquisette, Ferne Hughes, crowned Queen of the May Sunday afternoon on the lawn beside McIver Dormitory, said she "felt like she ought to be getting married."

"I haven't had much chance to get excited before now," said Miss Hughes immediately before she was crowned. "I've been at home this quarter."

Miss Hughes, who hails from Rainelle, W. Va., withdrew from school at the beginning of spring quarter to plan her wedding to Pretlow Winborne, a second year law student at the University, which will take place June 25.

The tall, wavy-haired queen, who was chosen by coeds during the winter quarter, was wearing an off-the-shoulder gown with a ruffled skirt. Her bouquet and the crown placed on her head during the "Alice-in Wonderland" festivities by Chancellor R. B. House, were both made of gardenias.

The maids-of-honor, Claudia Lee and Elizabeth Myatt, and the eight coeds in the court wore dresses of blue marquisette with off-the-shoulder ruffles falling in two layers. The skirt, showing two layers of ruffles, scollaped around the skirt, fell over hoops at the hips and at the bottom of the dresses.

Members of the court, who carried bouquets of large white daisies were Joan Lucas, Sarah Jane Farlowe, Fran Angus, Becky Holton, Henrietta Thorp, Babs DeWitt, Dolly Ann Dunnaway, and Marty Hinkle.

Miss Hughes, who will return to the University fall quarter, is a member of the Delta Delta Delta sorority and was the president of the Pan Hellenic Council this year.

These persons were employed in good faith, they have all signed the oaths of allegiance to the Constitution of the United States and the State as required by the Board of Trustees since 1941. The "eyes" of the FBI and the SBI are on them; and we strongly recommend that all detective activities in this connection be left to these "professionals" who are trained for the job.

Keep the Faith

The Consolidated University Administration recommends and urges that the Board of Trustees leave the Communist problem in the hands of the Administrative Officers and the Faculties of the Consolidated University. If the Board of Trustees will put its trust in us, we believe that we can keep the Faith—keep Faith with you, keep Faith with our Founding Fathers, and keep America's first free University faithful to the principles of American freedom.

Fifty-Five Members Taken By New Order Of Old Well

New Society Throws First Of Initiations

Pete Gerns Elected Prexy of Honorary

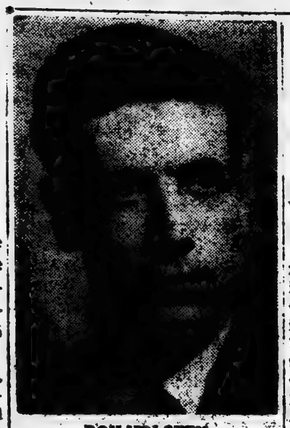
Fifty-five students were initiated into the Order of the Old Well, new honorary organization for men and women, yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Gerrard Hall.

Peter Gerns, of Canton, Ohio, was elected president of the organization, with Bill Carmichael III, Chapel Hill, vice-president, and Nat Williams, Thomasville, Ga., secretary-treasurer.

Members-at-large of the executive committee elected were Jess Dedmond of Cliffside, Richard Cox, Raleigh, and Don Shropshire of Winston-Salem. Also serving on the executive committee will be Ernest Mackie, Dean of Student Awards and Distinctions; William Wells, Dean of Arts and Sciences; and Samuel Emory, of the Geography Department. Charter members, of this committee.

The group gathered at the Old Well, and proceeded from there to Gerrard Hall, where Dr. Arnold Nash led the invocation. Dean Wells then addressed the group on achievements.

Reviewing the history of the Order of the Old Well, Dean Mackie discussed the formation of the honorary organization. Mackie said the society will "recognize merit and achievement on a point basis."



More than 100 seniors were interviewed to determine eligibility for admittance. Points are given on the basis of self-help, work, scholastic honors, participation in student government, publications, dramatics, music, athletics, and other campus organizations.

Eleven students and three faculty members were largely responsible for organizing the Order of the Old Well. As charter members of the organization, they are: Billy Carmichael, III, Bob Coulter, Jess Dedmond, Pete Gerns, Sam Hirsch, Gus Johnston, Jr., Al Lowenstein, Bill Mackie, Basil Sherrill, Don Shropshire, Len Szafaryn, Dr. Samuel Thomas Emery, Dr. Ernest Lloyd Mackie, and Dr. William Smith Wells.

The 20 women and 35 men initiated into the Order were:

Rita Adams, Lucille Arnott, Emily Baker, Betty Jane Blalock, Dick Bowen, Wayne Brenen-

ROY HOLSTEN

German Club Fills Offices; Holsten Head

Holt, Shelton, Jones Get Posts

Meeting to elect new officers, the German Club announced yesterday the selection of Roy Holsten, rising senior from Glen Rock, N. J., as president for next year. Other officers include: Vice-president, Jukie Holt, ATO, Raleigh; Secretary, Sonny Shelton, Beta Theta Pi, Statesville; Treasurer, Steve Jones, Phi Gamma Delta, Clinton.

Holsten, a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, has served on the Men's Honor Council, and is at present a member of the Student Council and the University Orientation committee.

The German Club, composed of thirteen fraternities, sponsors a dance each quarter. This year, they have brought to the campus the orchestras of Elliot Lawrence, Tommy Dorsey, and Charlie Barnet.

The new president stated, "The policy of the German Club for the next year will be to emphasize entertainment as well as economy. Several proposals have been made and are being considered by the club at present, which will help us in attaining this end."

Treasurers Must Clear Accounts

Treasurers of all organizations working through the Student Activities Fund should call at the office of the accountant, second floor Graham Memorial, to see that their books and accounts are in order for closing for the fiscal year 1948-49, Harry A. Kear, accountant, announced yesterday.

All outstanding bills should be paid and all petty cash should be refunded, Kear said. There are a few treasurers who have made deposits at the bank and have failed to turn in the duplicate for credit. Kear stressed that these matters should be attended to immediately.

Reuter Families Are Under Guard

DETROIT, May 25.—(UP)—Armed guards protected the three Reuther brothers of the United Auto Workers Union (CIO) and their families today to prevent any further assassination attempts. Gov. G. Mennen Williams called on the FBI to investigate.

Victor Reuther's right eye, struck by one of six pea-sized pellets from a 12-gauge double-barreled shotgun, was removed but doctors at Henry Ford hospital said he would recover.

Williams ordered state police into the investigation and touched off a nation-wide search for the would-be assasin. Reuther was cut down last midnight as he sat in the living room of his home.

The assault closely paralleled the attempt on the life of Victor's more widely-known brother, UAW President Walter P. Reuther, more than 13 months ago.

Victor Reuther, the union's education director, was struck by a twin blast from a double-barreled 12-gauge shotgun poked through the living room window as he read a newspaper.

Pell Elected IFC President For Next Year

Head Has Served As Rules Chairman

Allison Pell, Jr., rising senior from Charlotte, was named president of the Interfraternity Council at a special elections meeting Monday night. A member of Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity, Pell was elected to the top post vacated by Charlie Loudermilk, who left school early this quarter.

Pell, who won his Monogram as a member of the varsity swimming team in 1947, has served on the IFC Court for the past year, and has been acting as chairman of the IFC Rushing Rules committee this Spring. As the DKE Representative last Fall, he headed the IFC drive for North Carolina Symphony subscriptions from fraternities.

Upon election, Pell stated: "I feel that the fraternities have assumed their due responsibility during the last school year, and I plan to direct the Council even farther in this direction. The IFC will attempt to better solve certain problems arising among fraternities and to better relations between fraternities and the student body at large."

Other officers, elected last winter, will continue to serve along with Pell.

David Lilienthal Hits at Critics

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(UP)—Chairman David E. Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Commission struck back at his critics today with a challenge that Congress either prove or repudiate charges that the atomic program is "in an almost bankrupt condition."

Chairman Brien McMahon, D., Conn., promptly announced that his joint Congressional Atomic Committee will open full public hearings tomorrow on every phase of the Commission's work that "needs investigation."

In a ringing defense of his stewardship, Lilienthal wrote McMahon that the Commission's record in producing, improving and safeguarding atomic bombs is "a proud one." Then he made it plain that he is confident a fair inquiry will show the atomic program is in far better shape today than it was when his five-man civilian commission took over from the army in 1947.

Both the atomic committee and a Senate appropriations subcommittee have been questioning Lilienthal about the loss of a small amount of uranium 235 at the Argonne national laboratory in Chicago, and the granting of fellowships for non-secret science study to alleged Communists.

Deane to Speak

Charles Bennett Deane, Congressman from the eighth district of North Carolina, is scheduled to speak in Gerrard Hall tonight at 8:30. Deane will discuss 'Medical Care and its Relation to Housing."

Co-sponsored by the Carolina Forum and the Carolina Political Union, Deane will discuss the implications of the Compulsory Insurance-Legislation pending in Congress. The speaker is author of the legislation to broaden the hospital construction program.

A reception will be held for the speaker after his address in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

Soviets Stall West Trains Into Berlin

Withdraw Workers From Key Switches

BERLIN, May 25.—(UP)—Russia suddenly clamped a new railroad blockade on Berlin tonight by withdrawing crews from key switches on lines running to Western Germany.

Thirty trains en route to Berlin from the West were stalled by the Russians' action and all trains due to leave the capital for the western zones were held up.

In a second move the Russians resumed fighter plane maneuvers dangerously close to allied air lanes.

It was believed the Russians pulled switch crews from their jobs in retaliation for the action of the Western allies Tuesday in ordering Soviet-zone police and troops from stations of the strike-bound Berlin elevated railroad.

American authorities said that the Russian action was a deliberate movement to tie up allied traffic.

Two new developments preceded the blocking of rail traffic:

1—Erwin Kreikemeyer, director general of Soviet-controlled railroads, appealed to the Russians to give in to the 16,000 elevated railroad strikers and pay them in Western-allied marks as they demanded.

2—Soviet-controlled police under Russian officers tried to take control of two strike-bound railroad yards in the American sector but were thwarted when strikers refused to permit repairmen to relay tracks they had torn up.

Report Says Local Scene 'Very Tight'

Demerath, Williams Did Survey Work

By Margaret Gaston

An administration-sponsored housing survey for 1949-51 revealed yesterday that "it is most unlikely that anything like the housing for which there is real demand will be produced by the local 'building industry' employing business-as-usual methods."

N. J. Demerath of the Sociology Department and J. A. Williams, assistant to the Business Manager, who conducted the survey, said they found "an extremely tight housing situation of long standing that is disadvantageous to the housing consumer and the University, but advantageous to the investor and owner."

At Tuesday's meeting of the Board of Trustees Gov. Kerr Scott was authorized to appoint a five-man committee to work with the administration on the question of housing. Committee members do not necessarily have to be members of the Board.

Several groups are now considering building apartments or houses in Chapel Hill, it is understood.

The survey showed a probable demand for 396 dwelling units over the next 2½ years. The housing units, containing from one to four bedrooms each, would rent from $10 to $125 monthly.

The report also showed a substantial need for clearance and replacement of 284 physically substandard structures. Also, the need for "undoubling" and "decongesting" of too densely occupied units, not figured in the demand forcast for 396 dwelling units, was found.

In May, 1948, the Committee on Faculty Living Conditions found 23 percent, or 161 members, of the faculty "inadequately housed." "The house seeker in Chapel Hill has had comparatively few choices, has had to put up with what he can get, and in some cases leaves for better housing elsewhere," the survey disclosed.

In addition to questionable sanitation that was widespread, a

Thirty-Four Suspended In Past Year By Council

Men's Honor Group Handles 131 Cases; Members Issue Grim Warning on Codes

Chairman Bruce Sanborn said yesterday the Men's Honor Council had indefinitely suspended 34 students during the past year, and had handled a total of 131 cases.

At the same time, the council issued a grim reminder to all students, in the face of final examinations, of the responsibilities the Honor System places on each student at the University.

The 131 cases handled during the year were made up of 109 Honor Code cases and 22 Campus Code cases. Beside the 34 students indefinitely suspended, 37 were exonerated of all guilt, 25 were reinstated in the University, six petitions for reinstatement were denied, and 29 offenders were placed on probation, reprimanded, or otherwise handled.

"Any persons reported to the council for a possible violation of the Honor Code during exam week will not be tried until the first week of summer school," Sanborn said yesterday. "Graduating seniors will be the only exceptions.

"Special effort," Sanborn continued, "should be made to guard against the possible dis-

Illinois Shooting Brings on Feud With Old Gang

FAIRFIELD, Ill., May 25. — (UP)—The Shelton clan swore vengeance today on the gunman who fired a slug from ambush into Big Earl Shelton, 58, last survivor of the three brothers who terrorized southern Illinois with militarized gang warfare in the prohibition era.

Big Earl, shot in the back last night as he sat at a poker table in his own downtown club, was in a serious condition at an Evansville, Ind., hospital, but was expected to survive.

Little Earl Shelton, a nephew, stood guard at the hospital door.

His brother, Little Carl, said grimly that "I hope he (the would-be assassin) comes back. I just hope he don't leave us alone now."

The gunman stood on the roof of a garage and fired three shots through the second story window of "The Farmer's Club," which Big Earl operates on the Fairfield town square.

The first two slugs missed their target. The third tore into Big Earl's back, narrowly missing his heart.

Sper Outlines Rally Group Fall Activity

Stunt Rivalry With Duke, State

Head Cheerleader Norm Sper said yesterday that the Rally Committee was looking forward to active rivalry next fall with both Duke University and State College in the field of card stunts.

"Duke will continue its card stunts, and the State boys will start theirs next fall," Sper said. "Wtih card stunts at all three schools we should see a lot of competition."

The local Rally Committee, under the leadership of Sper, who was re-elected to the cheerleader's post this spring, has been helping State College organize its card stunts plans. The committee will meet at 7 o'clock this evening in the Monogram Club to discuss further plans for next year.

Sper said the card stunts will be brought out of summer mothball for the first time at the State-Carolina game, the season's opener, which will be held in conjunction with Greater University Day.

The colorful Carolina cards will also make the long trip to New York for the Carolina-Notre Dame football clash, Sper promised. The Athletic Department has held a good block of seats for the card cheering section, and made a special request that the show be put on for the New York football crowds.

Tickets for the Yankee Stadium card section will cost $4.80 each, the Athletic Office announced.

Communist Oath Refused by Bohm

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(UP)—David Bohm, a Princeton University professor who helped develop the atomic bomb, refused to say today whether he is a communist. He said an answer might incriminate him.

The short, slender physicist who worked in the super-secret radiation at a closed session of the House Committee investigating UnAmerican activities.

He confirmed Chairman John S. Wood's announcement that he wouldn't answer the question of whether he was a member of the Communist party. Otherwise, he declined to discuss his testimony except to say he had been treated "courteously."

Wood was asked whether Bohm answered any questions.

"Well," he drawled, "He did answer when we asked him his name."

The committee had planned to confront Bohm with Paul Crouch, an ex-Communist from Miami, who said he quit the party in 1942 after serving it for 17 years as an organizer. Crouch and his red-haired wife, Sylvia, were waiting in another room while Bohm was on the witness stand.

Reds Swarm Into Shanghai As Nationalists Fly to Sea

SHANGHAI, May 25—(UP)—An estimated 15,000 Communists walked almost unopposed into South Shanghai today, while hundreds of thousands of government troops fled northward to seek escape by sea.

A scattered handful of Nationalists — believed to number less than 100 — held three key bridges across Soochow Creek and the nearby areas of north Shanghai. But a Communist "end run" placed Red troops behind the rear guard and made it certain that they could not hold out for long.

The first day of Red occupation of the Chinese metropolis was quiet and orderly except for sporadic small arms fire around the disputed bridges. There was none of the rioting which many had feared would come with the arrival of the Reds.

Thunderous explosions were heard north of the city tonight, and a huge fire blazed up in the northern sky. Fire brigade officials said that retreating nationalists had apparently blown up an oil dump six miles north of the city.

The government defenders were retreating toward Woosung, on the Yangtze River seven miles from Shanghai. Unconfirmed reports said 40 ships were waiting to carry the fleeing trops to safety.

The maneuver appeared to have been prearranged, and the Communists were making no more effort to block the Nationalist retreat than the government forces had made to prevent the Red capture of Shanghai.

Communist troops marched into the city from the Hungjao district to the southwest and across the Whangpoo River to the east. They took over public buildings and the local radio stations, which at once began broadcasting Red propaganda statements.

Forrestal Receives Hero's Honors At Arlington Cemetery Ceremonies

ARLINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY, Va., May 25.—(UP)—James Forrestal was given a hero's burial today.

President Truman and former President Herbert Hoover headed a throng of 6,500 mourners, including high governmental and military figures and plain citizens assembled to pay final respect to the nation's first secretary of defense.

Public funeral services were conducted in the sun-drenched marble ampitheater, shrine to all those who died in the service of their country.

Burial was atop a grassy knoll, sheltered by towering oaks, which overlooks the capital across the Potomac river. The graveside ceremonies were limited to the widow, the two sons, Michael, 21, and Peter, 18, and about a dozen friends. The family did not attend the public services.

Crowds following the cortege from the ampitheater to the grave were turned back by guards with the quiet reminder that "Mrs. Forrestal wants this to be a private funeral."

Forrestal jumped to his death early Sunday from the 16th floor of the naval hospital at Bethesda, Md., where he had been under treatment for a psycho-neurotic malady. He cracked under the pressures of nine years of government service in war and peace.

Swimming Pool Full of Toilet Water Just One of Aly's Wedding Surprises

CANNES, France, May 25. — (UP)—Two hundred gallons of toilet water will be dumped into Prince Aly Khan's swimming pool here on Friday, the day on which beautiful Rita Hayworth becomes his princess.

Plans to perfume the plunge at Aly's fabulous Chateau de l'Horizon provided the final detail in preparations for a marriage that even Hollywood would have a hard time trying to duplicate for sheer splendor.

The scenario already included yachts, racy limousines and a Communist mayor whose politics have been overwhelmed by love to provide the happy ending.

There was even a villain—the French Ministry of Justice, which decreed that Rita and her prince must forsake his Riviera villa for a provincial town hall where a civil ceremony will make them man and wife. The couple had asked in vain for permission to wed at home.

Steps will be taken to see that no guests fall into the sweet-scented pool despite free-flowing drinks at the reception following the ceremony. A special guard will be posted around the pool to prevent accidents.

More Walks Coming

By the start of the fall quarter two new brick sidewalks will be laid on the campus "front yard," the area from the Old Well to Franklin Street. These two new walks, one of which will run diagonally across from Battle-Vance-Pettigrew to the Planetarium and the other from Old East to Franklin Street, will be a great step toward the alleviation of the problem of muddy sidewalks.

J. S. Bennett, Director of Operations, said that these walks are only a small part of the overall campus improvement program which has been going on the last few months. Recently several hundred feet of brick walks were laid around the Planetarium.

Two other projects recently completed were the brick wall which runs from BVP along the North side of Hill Hall and the landscaping of the grounds around the Public Health Building. Several other walk and landscaping projects are being planned, but will have to be shelved until the funds are available.—F.A.

From Alumni Office

Seniors! Did you know—?

That when you leave the University there is actually a litle piece of metal which is your "link" with Chapel Hill?

That it is through this link that you receive your application blank for football tickets, thus giving you a priority over the general public in purchasing football tickets?

That is is through the use of this link that those of you who become members of the General Alumni Association will receive your copies of THE ALUMNI REVIEW and the weekly football supplements in the fall?

That it is this same link that is used in sending you various mailing pieces telling you about the University, inviting you to class reunions or to special receptions being given by your class, club, or fraternity!

The link to which we refer is an addressograph plate, with your name on it, which is kept on file in the mailing room of the Alumni office. Unfortunately, many alumni do not have an addressograph plate because they have not informed the Alumni office about themselves and about their addresses. Don't be a missing link! Wherever you go, whatever you do, keep your Alumni office posted.

The Old Well

The Old Well, long the University's most historic landmark, is, at present in sad need of a paint job. While huge expenditures are made by the University every day, the aged well goes on with the same weather-beaten coat of paint.

The black paint on the roof has run down onto the once-white columns, and the white paint has cracked and is in dire need of repair.

There is absolutely no excuse for a thing which we hold so highly to be so run down. It's time something was done. —Z.R.

May Day Exercises

Congratulations are due Ruth Whalen for the fine work she did in coordinating the May Day program Sunday. It went off smoothly, and those who attended termed the affair impressive. It is unfortunate that more people did not turn out for the program.

May Day was sponsored jointly by Pan-Hel, CICA, and Chi Delta Phi Literary Sorority. However, most of the work which went into the program fell to Ruth Whalen. She did an excellent job in the face of many difficulties. For example, she first had trouble finding an open date on which to stage the event. Next, it was discovered that the Forest Theater, usual site of May Day exercises, would not be available. The McIver lawn provided a solution to the latter problem.

The difficulties which were encountered in finding a date and site for May Day, however, do emphasize the need for better coordination of student activities.

The WASHINGTON SCENE

By George Dixon

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, May 23,—Secretary of Defense Johnson has "regretfully" declined an invitation to attend the big June Week ceremonies at the United States Naval Academy.

Too bad, it'd have been interesting to note how the future admirals reacted to the man who—Navy top brass is muttering—is trying to unificate them into the background.

The Navy, however, will not be able to complain that Johnson is singling it out for a rebuff, the Defense Secretary also declined a bid to attend similar ceremonies at West Point.

He informed both the Middies and Cadets that he's got too much work to do in June.

Our townsfolk have been madly surprised by the terrific ballyhoo staged by government agencies for the visit of Brazilian President Dutra. Thousands of distinguished foreigners have honored us with their presence without occasioning a fraction of the official drum-beating.

The build-up was ordered by the White House. It was an attempt at repayment for the greatest reception ever accorded to Harry Truman previous to last November.

It seems difficult to recall now, but good old Harry seldom got much in the way of lavish acclaim up to, and including, election day 1948. As many wags were wont to observe, populaces were just mild about Harry.

The notable exception was in 1947 when Mr. Truman went to Brazil to attend the Inter-American Defense conferences. He was given the greatest welcome of his life.

Thirty thousand troops turned out in Rio De Janeiro alone to parade in his honor. It was a setting of Graustarkian splendor. Millions of wildly cheering Brazilians fought to get even a glimpse.

It so warmed the heart of the little man from Missouri that he vowed he would turn himself and Washington inside out to repay the hospitality if he ever had a chance, virtually all the preparations for the Dutra welcome were made inside the White House.

Government departments were let out from work for the parade. Almost everything in the way of show the White House could call upon was requisitioned. Advance publicity was turned out by the ton.

Unfortunately, Washington is used to visiting luminaries. It takes something extra special to get it excited. The welcome for President Dutra was disappointing.

A goodly number turned out for the parade, but not any more than would show up for any affair where troops were marching and bands playing. Our blase town just refused to be whipped up into a lather.

It seems a shame, when you think of it, because Brazil is rated as one of our best good neighbors. But that's the way it was.

Speaking of lavish refreshment, Rep. Fred L. Crawford, of Michigan, invited all his colleagues to be his guests for a drink of water.

His home town of Saginaw has put in a new water system of which it is extremely proud. Mr. Crawford posted this notice on the house bulletin board:

"My fellow townsmen invite you to share their rejoicing and have sent a special shipment of this water to Washington. At noon today Miss Joyce Hayes, Queen of the Saginaw Water Festival, will be in the House restaurant to serve this fine water to member of the House of Representatives and I invite you to participate in this real treat."

Is there to be no end to this barbarian prodigality?

Summary Statement

By "Wink" Locklair

Since tomorrow will bring the last issue of the DTH for this school year, and since all formal entertainment is at an end except for Graduation performances of two new Experimentals and the Chapel Hill Choral Club's presentation of the Bach B Minor Mass, this seems to be an appropriate time to look back over the past five months and draw a few conclusions from the 30 concerts, recitals and plays we have attended since the Chapel Hill Choral Club's "Elijah" last January 9.

You may recall that Margaret Webster's Shakespeare Company gave Hamlet and Macbeth here Jan. 17, and that the Playmaker-Music Department production of H.M.S. Pinafore during that month was one of the highlights of the theatrical year. Earlier in Jan., The Trapp Family, sponsored by the Student Entertainment Committee, gave a memorable concert of folk songs and carols before a small, but receptive audience in Memorial Hall.

Robert Wallenborn, a visiting pianist, began February's musical calendar with exciting performances of Hindemith, Poulanc and Maurice Ravel in a Hill Hall recital. The following evening we had an opportunity to see Gene McLain's new full-length drama, "Inherit the Wind," about a possessing mother and the effect she had on her three talented, sheltered daughters.

It was an intensely interesting play, although many people felt that something could be done in the last act to change audience reaction toward the mother when she got her due reward. Mr. McLain has worked on the script since February and no doubt the production would now seem smoother.

One of the most unusual events of the season was a program of Renaissance music played by the visiting Vielle Trio in a Hill Hall recital Feb. 20. With the exception of several organizations in and around New York, the Vielles are the only group who perform 14th and 15th century music on these old fiddles.

The Men's Glee Club concert featured on Feb. 24 a performance of "General William Booth Enters Into Heaven," by Philip James, based on the poem by Vachel Lindsay. Another interesting item on that program was William Schuman's dissonant "Truth Shall Deliver." And the month ended with an evening of first-rate chamber music by Brahms, Beethoven and Stravinsky, played by Antonio Brosa, violinist, and the great English pianist, Kathleen Long. This concert was presented here in cooperation with the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation of the Library of Congress.

The Playmakers production of "The Little Foxes" during the first week of March did not come off with the polish or perfection we expect and usually get from this group. The acting, save for William MacIlwinen, Gordon Argo and Barbara McIntyre, was painful to watch.

Irene Smart's costumes were handsome, however, and Lynn Gault provided a nice set. The University Symphony played the Brahms' Fourth, the Sibelius Violin Concerto (with Edgar Alden as soloist) and Virgil Thomson's suite "The Plow That Broke the Plains," at a concert March 8 in Hill Hall.

Two nights later we saw a colorful production of "The Beggar's Opera," which, among other things, showed briefly, but to excellent advantage, two of our most entertaining co-eds: Lee Noll and Virginia Hamilton.

An excellent orchestra, conducted by Dr. Schinhan, made this 221-year-old burlesque of Italian opera a pleasure to see and to hear. March also featured a very good recital by tenor John Brinegar, and Charles Weidman's Dance Group, in a program sponsored by the SEC, in Memorial Hall.

Perhaps THE disappointment of the season opened in the Playmakers April 4. This was Ida Lupino's widely-heralded "Apple Tree Farm," with music by William MacIlwinen, produced as a benefit for the Koch Memorial Fund by the Laboratory Theatre of the Playmakers. The principal detriment of the show was Miss Lupino's book, and it was best for all concerned that she didn't make a special trip all the way from Hollywood to see how really bad it was. There were several nice songs, though, and Ann Martin, Estelle Richie and Larry Peerce were entertaining.

Then in quick succession came four piano recitals, the most notable of which was William Sasser's playing of a number of pieces by that unpredictable Frenchman Erik Satie. The Women's Glee Club concert April 21 had several imported soloists who were heard in Hasse's Miserere, and a Prelude by William Schuman. They also gave moving performances of Brahms' Alto Rhapsody and a excerpt from his German Requiem.

During the past month or so we've been fortunate to have two concerts in Chapel Hill by the North Carolina Symphony under Dr. Swalin's direction; a new show from Sound and Fury which renewed the faith of many people in that organization; and the opportunity to hear three excellent student pianists—John O'Steen, Robert MacDonald and William Watts—as well as two student violinists of considerable talent: William Tritt and David McAdams. There have been other shows and recitals of interest, but space does not permit a complete listing of them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OLD EDITORIAL

Editor:

I wonder, Mr. Editor, if you don't get a sort of a queer feeling inside you when you look back over some of the old editions of the DTH. Or maybe you haven't done this. Lets go back about three years and see what the DTH editor Robert Morrison had on his editorial page.

Ah, yes, here's Saturday February 9, 1946, and something on the good name of Carolina: "Carolina is reconized throughout the country as the leading university in the South. This is not because of our football record, certainlly. This is not because we are a rich college. Other universities in the South also surpass us in medical facilities, science, engineering, and research.

"The 'Good Name' of Carolina derives, first of all, from its President, Frank P. Graham, known throughout the country as a fighting liberal. But most of all Carolina is known as the center of the New South, a place where academic freedom is producing vocal, intelligent citizens with new ideas, young citizens who are applying the ideas of Thomas Paine, Thomas Jefferson, and Andrew Jackson to contemporary social problems."

I would like very much to print the rest of the editorial but space will not allow that. But I would like for you to read the rest of it, Mr. Editor, and I would like to challenge you to print it in its entirity and write your comments about it.

Bob Williams

NEW PRESIDENT

Editor:

Mr. Editor, I have never said anything publicly or personally to my knowledge aimed at discrediting the no doubt significant roll which Frank P. Graham has played in making this Institution nationally famous. On the contrary, orchids to the gentleman for his contribution!

The statement made to the Herald reporter recently which seemed to offend several of his staunch supporters was in answer to the question—what I thought would most improve the reputation of the University in the eyes of the public. Realizing that the restriction of Communists here (the best solution) could hardly be expected in the immediate future, I submitted what I thought was the only other plausible alternative. My reply, as quoted, still looks reasonable from this angle.

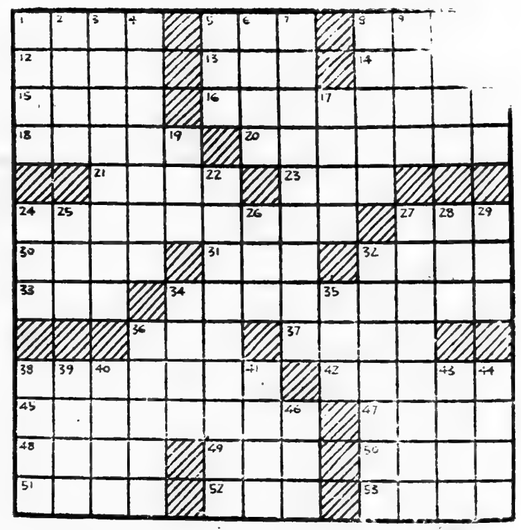
I suspect that even the liberals will not deny that the University rep has suffered (whether justly or unjustly) as a result of Communist activities here. Neither do I think that the liberals will deny that Graham's Front affiliations has given a considerable impetus to said public disfavor.

It's rather obvious to me that the "law of diminishing popularity" is becoming operative. The selection of a rather conservative President would indeed be a timely psychological move from the public's standpoint. After all, this is a school supported by the funds of John Q. Public. Certainly, he has the right to demand an administrator who reflects his idea to a satisfactory degree!

I have no reason to believe that the administration of a President with an unsuspicious record would undo anything of a WORTHWHILE nature that Graham has built up here. Neither have I reason to believe that Carolina's Star will wane. If it should happen that my type President ain't the man for the job, then you may count on me, my liberal brethren, to join ranks with you in a vociferous demand for his dismissal—believe me!

J. R. Cherry Jr.

PRAISES INFIRMARY



Editor:

Inasmuch as a word of commendation is long overdue, but because it is impossible to personally thank each member of the staff, I would like to pay a brief but sincere tribute to the University Infirmary in its entirety for the work it is now doing and has done so efficiently throughout the past.

As an organization which is essential to the health and well-being of the student body, it plays a significant, if not glamorous, role in the educational process. Those persons who have found it necessary to seek medical attention will attest to the fact that they do a swell job. For those who may never need its service it remains in readiness. The infirmary gives the impression of being the smoothest running organization on the campus.

To the staff: the doctors, nurses, technicians, secretaries, maids, and janitors, a special word of thanks. For the conscientious manner in which you have served, you stand to be congratulated.

Wolfcubs Trample Carolina Frosh, 18-5

Another Viewpoint

By Buddy Vaden

Another baseball season has been written into the books of the Tar Heels of North Carolina, former Big Four and Southern Conference champions. There's nothing to do now but to count up the runs, hits and errors and wash Rip Ryan's uniform. The runs and hits were numerous; 205 runs and 321 hits over a 31 game schedule in which the Carolinians won 19, lost nine and tied two. Errors we didn't keep track of. They, for the most part, were incidental as far as the outcome of any single game was concerned.

Coach Bunn's Boys started the season off with a spring training cruise during which time they split a two-game series with the University of Florida and then went over to Jacksonville Naval Air Base and wasted no time in clipping the wings of the neophyte flyers.

They came back to the home field for an eight game stand that gave them nothing but a series of monotonous wins over Michigan State, Yale, Virginia, Cornell, and a pair of Southern Conference teams. Then they went down to Laurinburg, where the fans were raving to see the Carolina "Gas Housers" (According to press releases from Publicist Jake Wade) play the cocky Gamecocks of South Carolina. The fans didn't show up, but the Tar Heels won a ball game in weather that was cold enough to send Harry Truman to Florida.

Well, They Tried

They came back once more to Chapel Hill and tried to play the first game of a four game series with the Big Bad Boys from Wake Forest. The weatherman who had DTH sports scribes cliche-ing themselves to death intervened three times. When the game was finally played the Tar Heels found out that it was possible to lose a game on the home field.

In overall Big Four play the Tar Heels played 13 games. Duke was victim to the Carolina sluggers (As well as to everybody else who had nine men and a baseball) thrice. But they got on their feet before the end of the season and downed Our Boys twice. One of those games was comparable to a tobacco state league pitching duel where one team scored 11 runs, and the other nine. (Duke scored the 11).

Look in the Dictionary

The Emerson Eisteddfods split the four game series with State, the second win giving them a tie for second place in the final Big Four Standings. One of the State games (At Devereaux Meadow) aroused the ire of usually moderate Carolina sports fans when Bill Massack smacked a ball over the scoreboard for a home run. There was [illegible] thing wrong with that: The scoreboard is in foul territory.

The plight of the umpires officiating at Carolina games was brought to the attention of the public after the last game in the Wake Forest series which was played at Carolina. It was reported that Carolina fans had stormed the umps after the game and forced them to the shelter of the Carolina dugout.

Now Carolina baseball fans are just like any other baseball fans. They don't mind an umpire missing one here or there. They know that it's a difficult job for two men to keep an eye on nine men, four bases, a batter, and a ball. But when things get too bad they're bound to make a complaint. (This is not a defense of the action of alleged Carolina students who pelleted the officials with apples, etc., but rather is our impression of the season's umpiring in general.) We didn't mind when there was a doubtful decision called at first in the Wake Forest game. We figured that the base umpire could see it better than we could sitting in Jake Wade's sun shade.

Little Joe Watched

But we took notice when little Joe Brookshire was up at bat against Michigan State. He stood there and watched the umpire call two strikes and four balls. Then, assuming he had a legal right to, he trotted down to first. But he was called back. It seems that the umpire had either lost the count or called one of the pitches a tie ball. But it didn't make any difference in the outcome of the game; Carolina won.

Then we were slightly aroused again in one of the Duke games when Carolina had bases loaded and Ed Lamb stepped up to the plate and dropped a line drive either just outside or just inside the third base line. The plate umpire called it fair and three Carolina runs came in. Then, after parlez-ing with numerous Dookmen the umpire called the Tar Heels back and showed them where the ball hit—outside the base line. From this side of the fence we wouldn't have been able to tell where an atom bomb would have hit along that line, much less find and prove where a questionable line drive fell. It shouldn't be necessary for an umpire to reverse any decision of judgement.

Locals Lose Title To Pack's Rally Of 11 Runs in 5th

RALEIGH — May 25 — The chips were down for the North Carolina freshman baseballers this afternoon here as the Tar Babies and the yearlings of State clashed for the Little Big Four championship but the Tar Heel frosh just didn't have it as they went down to a humiliating 18-5 defeat in a wild and woolly exhibition of the national pastime.

The victory gave the Raleigh youngsters undisputed claim to the mythical freshman championship with Carolina being subjected to the runnerup slot ahead of Duke and Wake Forest.

Coach Henry House started left-hander Henry Schacht on the mound for the Tar Babies but it didn't take long to realize that the slight southpaw didn't have his usual stuff. Schacht held on until the third when the Wolfcubs got to him for three successive hits and three runs before Monroe Johnson replaced him to put out the side.

Johnson in turn only lasted an inning as he became the recipient of State's pent-up fury in the fatal fifth. A total of 11 big runs on seven hits and three Tar Baby errors figured in the scoring before Roger Paschal came to the relief. Paschal also received his bumps for three more frames in allowing four runs and four hits, one a homer but he finished the contest.

Score by innings:

Carolina	101	0	03	000—	5	9	8
State	003	0	111	12x—18	16	2

Carolina — Schacht, Johnson (3), Paschal (5) and overman. State — Lewis, Welsh (9) and Wilhelm.

Fijis, Med School Cop Swim Meet ; Softball Protest Game Recognized

By Andy Taylor

Record smashing performances in all events seemed to be the order of the evening as the Med School in the dormitory division and Phi Gam in the fraternity division splashed their way to victory in the intramural swim meet held in Bowman Gray pool last night.

The Phi Gams won in a walkaway racking up a total of 68 points. Sigma Nu and Sigma Chi fought it out until the end for second place and wound up in a tie, both teams scoring 26 points. Phi Delt copped third with 16 markers.

In the dorm division the story was very different. Town and the Med School fought a see-saw battle all the way with the winner not being decided intil the last event, the 200-yard freestyle relay. With the lead changing hands at the finish of every event for the first five events, the Med School grabbed the top spot in the 50-yard freestyle and did not relinquish it though Town pushed them all the way.

The Med School chalked up 75 points with Town accounting for 64. Aycock finished third with 5 while Emerson, last year's winner and a pre-meet favorite, only managed 3 points.

For the Phi Gams, the win was a repeat of last year's performance though Sigma Chi and Sigma Nu were on the books for an upset.

McKenzie of Phi Gam opened the meet in the fraternity heat of the 25-yard freestyle by clipping a half second off the record. He finished in 11.4 seconds. Creech of Town followed suit in the dorm section by breaking the existing mural record.

Other record snappers are Montgomery (Phi Gam), Wilson (Phi Gam), Strickland (Town), Creech (Town), and Tomilson (Phi Gam). The Phi Gam 200-yard relay team, the Sigma Nu 150-yard medley team and the Med School 150-yard medley relay team also set new marks.

The Intramural protest committee yesterday ruled that last week's fraternity championship tilt between the Sigma Chi and Pi Kappa Alpha softball teams would be replayed from the top of the sixth inning this afternoon.

The Sigma Chi nine took a 2-1 win in the previous contest, but the PiKA outfit lodged a protest on the ground that in the sixth inning, with Sigma Chi ahead, 2-1, the umpire called time out while the ball was still in play and the man with the tying run for the PiKA's was rounding third base on his way home.

Twelve Tar Heel Trackmen To Enter Big SC-SEC Meet

Led by twelve members of Carolina's indoor and outdoor champs, the Southern Conference track champions are rated as slight favorites to cop the big inter-conference meet with the SEC champs at Grant Field, Atlanta on Saturday night.

The contestants were decided last Saturday when the two conferences held their respective meets, the Southern Conference here on Fetzer Field and SEC at Grant Field. The first, second and third place men in each event in the two meets qualified for the inter-conference competition.

Some top-notch performances are expected when the two conferences tangle in the Georgia city.

Paul Bienz, Tulane sprinter and winner of the SEC 100 last week end in 10.2 against a strong wind, and Bill Alexion, Maryland dashman and winner of the SC 100 in 9.9 last Saturday, will probably present an interesting race for the several thousand spectators expected for the big meet.

Both Bob Kirk, Carolina javelin tosser, and Bob Selgiman, Tar Heel shot and discus champ, will be favored to beat out SEC competition in their events. Sam Commander of Florida is rated a slight favorite in the high jump over the trio which will represent the local circuit.

State Prep Meet Slated for Fetzer
Fetzer Field will be the scene Saturday of the annual North Carolina High School outdoor track meet.
Durham High's talented team is rated as the overwhelming favorites to capture its fourth straight title and its eighth in eleven years. Led by versatile Bobby Byrd, the Bulldogs have swept aside all competition this season.
Byrd, who will probably enter Carolina in the fall, will seek to repeat his 1948 wins in the mile and the discus. In addition, he will probably enter several other events.
High Point's well-balanced team, Raleigh's speedy crew and Salisbury's dark-horse entries are the teams given a chance to upset the pre-meet dope.

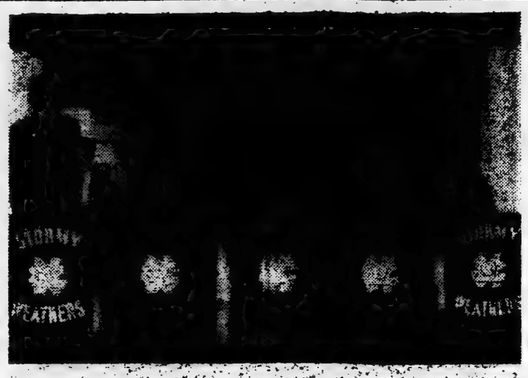
Critical Essay May Win $100 At UNC, Duke



A $100 prize is being offered for the best critical essay submitted by an undergraduate or graduate student in the University of North Carolina or Duke University.

The students can be in any department of either school but they must be engaged in resident study during the 1949-1950 year to be eligible for the contest. The prize will be awarded at the Commencement in June.

The essays must be examples of theoretical or practical criticism and must deal with general literary questions, either aesthetic or ethical, or with specific writers and writings on any period from antiquity to the present. No restrictions have been placed on the length of the essays, but between 1000 and 4000 words is recommended.

Manuscripts of students at Chapel Hill should be sent or brought to Professor Clifford P. Lyons, head of the Department of English, Saunders Hall before March 30, 1950.

A committee of three outside persons, to be named later, will act as judges. The committee will reserve the right to withhold the prize if none of the manuscripts which are entered are considered worthy of it.

STORMY WEATHERS AND HIS Beachcombers will begin on June 8 a summer run at the Beachcomber Room of the Ocean Plaza Hotel at Carolina Beath, orchestra spokesmen said yesterday. The orchestra, conducted by two brothers, Bynum and Jimmie Weathers, has played for many campus functions. Their specialty is smooth danceable music, specially arranged in an attempt to depart from stereotyped music.

Saturday Slated For 'Poppy Day'

Poppy Day, annual American Legion Auxiliary - sponsored fund drive, will be held in Chapel Hill Saturday, it was announced yesterday. Members of the Auxiliary and high school girls will sell the tokens.

Money received from the sale of the red and green artificial flowers will be used by the Auxiliary for rehabilitation and welfare work among veterans and their dependents. Part of the money will go to the disabled servicemen who made the poppies.

The Poppy Day sale, one of the first institutions begun by the American Legion ladies' organization, provides most of the money for their rehabilitation and welfare fund and provides needed financial and moral support to the disabled men who make the flowers.

Acheson Invites Blockade-Lifting

PARIS, May 25—(UP)—American Secretary of State Dean Acheson invited Russia today to lift the iron curtain from Eastern Germany and let the world see what is going on.

In an attack on Russian proposals for future control of Germany, Acheson said at a meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers that in 1948 alone the United States poured $1,150,000,000 into Germany to help her recover.

"But what has been done in the Soviet zone?" Acheson asked. "We have not been told anything, although we have repeatedly requested such information."

honesty of your neighbor as a self-protecting measure." The Honor Code requires not only that a student not lie, cheat or steal, but that he is also responsible to report any persons he sees violating the Honor Code "for his own benefit and that of the persons doing the violating."

Sanborn also released a report on a case handled by the council during the year, to give students an idea of how the council works:

"The case was reported to the council by a faculty member who noticed the many similarities in the papers of three students who sat side by side.

"When the case was investigated by a member of the council one of the alleged offenders confessed his guilt, thus answering in part the question raised by the similarities in the papers. The other two students maintained their innocence.

"When these persons were questioned individually in the Men's Council room, each of them repeated his original story. As the council was not completely satisfied with these explanations, the two men who had claimed their innocence were re-questioned. After being shown the complete evidence, both men admitted having given and received aid from one another and also that they had lied to the council earlier in the evening.

"The council, following its standard that cheating is inexcusable, and should be dealt with severely, suspended all three offenders."

-Housing-

considerable amount of overcrowding and "doubling up" of families in the same dwelling was reported in the survey. "Of 1,521 dwelling units surveyed, excluding dormitories, fraternities and sororities, 667 contained 3, 4, 5 persons and over per bedroom."

The report discussed the expansion of population in the faculty as provided in the next biennium budget appropriations for the University. Housing for 341 new employees for medical, dental, and public health schools, will be needed. Their salaries will range from $1,000-$8,000. "Very, very few of these people will find quarters in existing housing," the survey said. Of the 341 newcomer households, 267 or 78 percent will be unable to afford rentals in excess of $45 a month, the survey continued. Many three and four-bedroom units will also be required in the lower and lowest categories.

The report revealed that in the past two years only 159 dwelling units have been added in the whole of the Chapel Hillll area. "Of these only 33 are rented, 126 are owner occupied, whereas the demand is preponderantly for rental units."

The survey pointed out that the recent experience of many other universities indicates that "aggressive promotional action, perhaps even direct construction and operation by the University itself, may well be necessary.

Who are America's Most Successful YOUNG Men?

In anybody's book, one of them is Wishbone Harris. Said TIME's issue of August 18, 1947:

In New Orleans, ex-Yale backfield coach Earle ("Greasy") Neale ran into a 6-ft. 230-lb. Minnesotan named Wishbone Harris, who played tackle on the Yale football squad in 1933. "What are you doing now?" asked Greasy, when the backslapping was over. "I'm selling women's home kits for permanent waves," said Wishbone. Greasy grinned and said: "Now tell me what you're really doing." "I'm selling home kits for permanent waves," replied Wishbone, and doggedly added: "And doing very well."

Richard Neison Wishbone Harris was making an understatement. In three years, he has built his "Toni" home permanent-wave kits into a merchandising phenomenon which this year will gross an estimated $16 million and net a tidy $3 million profit, enough to curl anyone's hair. By shrewd advertising (1947 budget: $3.5 million), Harris has captured 50% of the home-wave market.*

TONI'S HARRIS
"And doing very well."

Harris, who has long since tired of telling folks that Wishbone is no nickname, is the son of a prosperous St. Paul woolen merchant. The year after his graduation in 1936, he picked up a beauty-supply business for $5,000. In 1941, when cold waves began to attract attention in beauty shops, Harris began wholesaling them. Two years later, some of his pioneering competitors began experimenting with home-wave kits. The first one, which sold for 59¢, was a big seller, but it nearly ruined the market because it was unsatisfactory. Harris kept trying, finally came up with Toni.

Wishbone's success is partly due to a lesson he learned several years ago. He had experimented with a 25¢ cold-wave set. It was a stupendous flop. Says Wishbone: "I found out then that people just won't pay twobits for something they have been paying $10 and $15 for. If it's that cheap, it's no good, in their minds."

In 1948, Harris sold The Toni Co., then selling about 85% of all home-wave kits in the U.S., to the Gillette Safety Razor Co., for $20,000,000; he was then 33 years old.*

Thief Cleans Out Five Fraternities

Cash, Watches Valued at $1,000 Taken in Thursday Morning Theft

A well-oriented thief cleaned out five local fraternity houses to the tune of nearly $1,000 in cash and watches early yesterday morning, and Chapel Hill police said they hoped to see some developments in the case within a day or two.

Alpha Tau Omega, Chi Phi, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Delta Theta, and Sigma Phi Epsilon fell into the route of the nighttime prowler, who carefully avoided the fraternity courts in his rounds. Police figured the time of his visits at between 3 and 6 o'clock in the morning.

"We're hoping to get somewhere in the next day or two," Police Officer W. E. Clark said yesterday. "We've even got a suspect in mind now."

At the Chi Phi house, member Joe Neikirk reported seeing the thief in the early hours of dawn. He said he woke up when the intruder stuck his head into the door of his room.

"Does Joe Hobgood live here?" Neikirk reported the man asked. Neikirk told him no.

"Well, he used to be here, because we threw a party with him a couple weeks ago," said the thief, as he backed out the door.

Neikirk jumped out of bed, he said, and dashed downstairs in time to see the man beat a hasty retreat out the back door and over the rock wall toward the Phi Delt house.

"He was a white man, about six feet tall, with a dark complexion and dark curly hair," Neikirk said. "He had on khaki pants and shirt and blue tennis shoes. I think he was about 25 or 30 years old."

A slightly different description of the robber was found at the ATO house by Officer Clark, who investigated the thefts.

Frank Goodrum of the local ATO chapter said the invader woke him up at 5:45. Goodrum glanced at his watch, decided it was just a brother up early, and rolled over to get some more sleep.

But his quick glance at the man indicated that he was blond, white, and wore a tan sweater, Goodrum said.

Down the street at the Lambda Chi house, one of the members reported hearing someone enter the house early in the morning, but paid no attention to it.

Coates, Polk Are Speakers At Wolfe Club

Were Roommates While at Harvard

Albert Coates, founder and director of the Institute of Government and William T. Polk, associate editor of the Greensboro Daily News, both roommates of Thomas Wolfe while attending Harvard University, were the featured speakers at the Wednesday night meeting of the Thomas Wolfe Club.

Polk gave a penetrating analysis of the relation between Wolfe the man and Wolfe the artist through a clever method of interviewing himself with questions about Wolfe's personality and thinking.

He stated that during Wolfe's student life here there were three professors who became definite influences on his work.

Professor Frederick Koch, founder of the Carolina Playmakers, was the most profound influence on Wolfe at the University. He led Wolfe to write of the things he saw and felt in his own experience, which was the basic creative philosophy of Koch. The total works of the Asheville writer are a manifestation of this philosophy, illustrating the force of the University on contemporary thought.

Edward Greenlaw, Renaissance scholar and former head of the University English Department, helped Wolfe to understand and apply the magnificent glow and richness of that period. Horace Williams, who taught Wolfe Greek philosophy, encouraged him to search for ideal truth, the most consistent theme in his novels.

Coates, who roomed with Polk and Wolfe at Buckingham Place in Cambridge during his law student days, joined Polk in saying that Wolfe was a genius of enormous capacities, with a stature, both mentally and physically amazing to all. Both friends of Wolfe said that the exaggerated cries and feelings Wolfe is said to have experienced probably are all very true to life. Coates told a few personal and interesting stories which gave an insight to Wolfe's abilities as a thinker and a writer.

He said that the notion of Wolfe's being the loneliest person in the world might be true, but that he was at the same time the most gregarious person he

Friday Last Day To Vacate Dorms

All women students not graduating this year and all men students living in C Dorm, Lewis, Alexander and Whitehead must vacate their rooms by Friday, June 3, according to an announcement by Katherine Kennedy Carmichael, Dean of Women.

Because of the housing problem in Chapel Hill all women's dorms, C Dorm, Lewis and Whitehead will be used to house parents and guests of graduating seniors during Commencement weekend.

During the summer term Dormitory C will be used by women students, and married couples will occupy Aycock and Everett. Whitehead will be used by the Extension Department, and Alexander will be used for an Extension Department conference beginning June 4. Old East and Lewis will be closed during the summer.

"I do not want to ask the impossible of our students," Dean Carmichael said. "I know the difficulties of packing hurriedly in order to make room for incoming guests and new students. However, a building cannot be cleaned well until it is entirely vacant, and guests and new students are entitled to enter orderly rooms."

Deane Says UNC To Be South Medical Center

Congressman Addresses Hill Hall Group Under Sponsorship of CPU, Forum

The University of North Carolina is destined to become in the next few years the foremost medical center in the South, Congressman Charles B. Deane of the Eighth District of North Carolina, whose home is in Rockingham, predicted in an address here last night.

Speaking in Hill Hall, under the sponsorship of the Carolina Forum and the Carolina Political Union, Congressman Deane said, "I doubt that you really comprehend what is in store for you here in Chapel Hill in connection with the establishment of a great medical center.

"You will coordinate here a four-year medical school, a teaching hospital, a dental school, a public health service for the entire southeast, a nursing school, a school of pharmacy, which, together with great work in the biological sciences, will represent a medical center that cannot be found at any other place in the South and only a few places in the entire country."

Congressman Deane, who was introduced by Dean of Students Fred H. Weaver, with CPU Chairman Murray Goldenthal presiding, said the compulsory health insurance is in such a "highly debatable state" now that this session of Congress has abandoned plans to attempt passage of such legislation.

For the present, he said, emphasis should be placed on efforts to secure federal aid in hospital construction, aid to medical schools, and a scholarship and loan program for students in the health field. He said Congress was in general agreement as to the desirability of meeting these needs.

He pointed out that a bill he recently introduced (H.R. 4215) would have been the Public Health Service Act so that the federal government "may aid in the construction and instruction costs at medical schools, or for scholarships and guaranteed loans to medical students, and make a survey of rural medical needs."

Congressman Deane predicted that the road and school bond issues to be voted on in North Carolina June 4, "will carry overwhelmingly and I predict that less than one-fifth of the counties of the state will vote unfavorably."

Summer Session Dorm Presidents Listed by Gerns

The following students will serve as presidents of dormitories during the summer months, according to Pete Gerns, president of the Men's Interdormitory council: "A" dormitory, William R. Sipes, of Troutman; "B," John Sloan, Clinton, S. C.; B-V-P, James Houser, Gastonia, Graham, Gordon Carpenter, Durham; Grimes, Clarence Gilbert, Fyffe, Ala.; Mangum, Lonnie Braxton, Burlington; Manley, Sid Turner, Durham; Old West, Sam Lamb, Montclair, N. J.; Ruffin, Ralph Morris, Asheville; and Steele, William Rogers, Clarkton.

Alexander and Whitehead dormitories will be operated by the extension division, Everette and Stacy will remain open to married couples, "C" dorm will be occupied by girls, while Lewis, Old East and Aycock will remain closed for the entire summer. Old West will be open for the first six weeks only.

The first meeting the Council this summer will be held on Monday, June 20, at 6:30 in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham Memorial. The organization will be composed of all dorm advisers in addition to above-named officers.

Three-Branch Affair

Greater University Day Slated For State Weekend by GUSC

Plans are being made for the first Greater University Day, sponsored by the Greater University of North Carolina Student Council, to be held on the day of the State-Carolina football game.

With the full day being proclaimed Greater University Day, students from all three branches of the University, N. C. State, Woman's College, and the University, will get together for the football game, a dance that night, and other activities that are now being planned.

A special committee set up by the Council is providing for tickets for the Woman's College students, the Saturday night dance, half-time speakers, and other activities.

Efforts are being made to have Senator Frank Graham and Governor Kerr Scott speak at the game, a Council spokesman said.

Working in close collaboration with the committee are the cheerleaders of the three schools. Card stunts and band designs are being worked out to signify the unity and harmony between the three schools.

Other members of the special Council Committee besides Leonard are Sarah Chaney and Nell Jones of the Woman's College; Avery Brock and Hank Odum of N. C. State; and Dan Bell of Carolina.

Board to Rule Student Body For Summer

Sanders Selected As Acting Prexy

Naming 20 persons to two judicial councils and an appeal and government board, a joint executive-legislative-judicial committee set up summer school government yesterday.

The governmental bodies include a five-coed Women's Council, a Men's Council of six, and an Appeal and Government Board of nine members.

Attorney-General John Sanders was picked to head the Board as acting student body president. Emily Sewell will be the Women's Council chairman and Roy Holsten will serve as head of the Men's Council.

The Appeal and Government Board will try all appeals from the two councils, initiate legislation in cases of necessity, and serve as the executive body for the summer terms. The councils will try Honor Code cases as a joint body, and Campus Code cases as separate courts.

Named to the Board were Kitty Altizer, Weddy Thorpe, Gene Newton, Larry Botto, Harry Horton, Harry Buchanan, Mac Copenhaver, and Banks Talley. Jack Street will replace Altizer for the second session, Bernard Plemmons will replace Thorpe, and Vestal Taylor will take Copenhaver's post.

Women's Council members will be Helen Epps, Gladys Chambers, Lucille Riley, and Joan Lucas. Gayle Hancock will serve in Epps' place during the second session, Becky Huggins in Chambers', and Ann Green in Lucas'.

Appointed to the Men's Council were Dick Palmer, Arthur Murphy, Pete Gerns, Charles Smith and John Eason.

The summer governmental setup is the result of a compromise between recommendations presented by President Bill Mackie to the Student Legislature and recommendations of the Legislature.

'Open House' Set For Planetarium

The Morehead Building will be open from 10 to 10 o'clock during the Commencement days.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(UP)—Chairman David E. Lilienthal said today that the Atomic Energy Commission overruled the decision of its security officer in clearing Dr. Edward U. Condon and Sen. Frank P. Graham for access to atomic data.

His disclosure came as the House-Senate Atomic Energy Committee opened an exhaustive investigation to find out whether Lilienthal's ministry of the $3,5000,000,000 atomic project has been good or bad.

Graham was president of the University of North Carolina and head of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Physics before his recent appointment to the Senate. He had limited access to atomic secrets.

Famous Alum Has High Post In Government

Stevens to Preside At Monday Lunch

United States Undersecretary of State James E. Webb, whose phenominal rise to a high position of influence in the federal government has focused wide attention upon the 42-year-old University graduate, will be a featured speaker at the Alumni Luncheon here on June 6, final day of the 155th annual commencement program.

Announcement that Webb will speak here was made yesterday by Alumni Secretary J. Maryon (Spike) Saunders.

Currently acting secretary while Secretary Dean Acheson is attending the Paris council of foreign ministers, Webb will make his first public address since being appointed to the high State Department office by President Truman last January 7. He was formerly Director of the U. S. Budget in which position he was responsible for the vast financial affairs of the federal government.

Webb was graduated at the University in 1928. After serving two years in Marine aviation and winning his wings, Webb went to Washington to enter government service. He studied law at night and won his license to practice. Later he joined the Sperry Corporation and rose to be vice president and treasurer, resigning to resume active duty as a Marine aviator during World War II.

Following the war he joined the law firm of the late Governor O. Max Gardner and soon thereafter was selected to head the Budget Bureau where he served for two years.

Webb's address here may be expected to attract wide attention as he has indicated that he will discuss matters affecting foreign policy.

Judge Henry L. Stevens, president of the University Alumni Association, will preside at the Alumni Luncheon. Other items on the program will include announcement of the outcome of elections now being held by mail ballot for officers of the associa-

Colonial Press Will Print DTH, Humor Magazine

The Publications Board announced yesterday that contracts for the printing of the Daily Tar Heel and Tarnation have been awarded to the Colonial Press, present printer for both of the publications. The DTH contract covers two years, while the Tarnation agreement will run for the next academic season.

The Colonial Press, now in its second year of operation, has recently added additions to its Carrboro plant that will approximately double the floor space. Several new presses and other pieces of equipment have been added, mainly for service to the DTH and Tarnation.

The Press, owned and operated by Orville Campbell, Horace Carter, and Bob Moore, will extensively remodel the floor space of the plant for more efficient operations and better handling of the work on the two student publications. Campbell and Carter, both former editors of the DTH, started operations in September of 1947. Moore, veteran Chapel Hill printer, joined the organization later.

The End of the Line

Today marks the end of the line for the thousand-odd Seniors who will receive their diplomas within a few days. It is the last day of regular-scheduled classes. The last day you will have to climb out of bed so early to make that 8 o'clock class. The last day you will have to work a cross word puzzle while the professor lectures. The last day for you to get a quick Coke between classes at the Y. Probably the last day you will have to sit with the crowd on South Building steps. There will be exams and then the graduation exercises, but the normal drift of life at Carolina comes to an end for the Seniors today.

The college life of the majority of the graduating Seniors was interrupted by the war. You had the task of readjusting to the study habits necessary to attend the University. It was no easy job to remember the languages or scientific principles learned in high school, or even to get back into the mood for studying subjects which probably seemed useless and a waste of time. Then too, the incoming freshmen classes each year seemed to be composed of a bunch of immature high schoolers. These students, many five or so years younger than the veterans, combined with the older students to make Carolina an institution of great contrast. But as the years went by, both the younger and older students fell into the congenial ways of the University. All came to respect each other's ability.

For the past few months most of the Seniors probably have been thinking more about the future than leaving Carolina. Many have been writing all over the state for information concerning prospective jobs.

But whatever position these Seniors do take, their experiences at Carolina will help them. Living in a dormitory with a set of boys of varying interests, learning how to be a good mixer in a fraternity, making acquaintances at Woollen Gymnasium, in the Playmakers, in Student Government, or working at Graham Memorial—all will prove beneficial in the all-important art of getting along with others.

As one Senior stated seriously, graduating marks the end of an era in the lives of many. For one thing, you probably will never be thrown together with a group of people so near your own age or with so much in common. And then for many, graduation means an end to the carefree part of life—of no worries about supporting oneself financially, of going to the movie when you should be studying, or driving out to Hogan's for a party. Others have had to work to earn their college education, but they will have to work even harder once they graduate.

The Class of 1949 won't pass unforgotten at Carolina. Some of you have been outstanding in campus government, others in athletics, music, dramatics, publications, and scholarship. You have made valuable contributions to the University, and, in return, have benefited from life at Carolina.

So on behalf of the entire student body, the Daily Tar Heel wishes you good luck for the future. We will expect to see you for the football games next fall and as often as possible thereafter.

Men's IDC Accomplishments

One of the campus organizations on campus which accomplished a great deal during the 1948-'49 year was the Men's Interdormitory Council.

This year's IDC leaves behind a long list of very creditable accomplishments. The group was responsible for the installation of coke machines in the dormitories, additional phones in the dorms, class rooms opened at night for studying, Community Chest Bill, the dormitory social fess which will go into effect next fall and many other projects effects of which are never noticed outside the dorms.

In addition the IDC, for the first time, succeeded in having a member of its group placed on the faculty housing committee. The value of this move has already been proved.

The IDC also took several other projects under consideration, but these will probably have to be carried over to next year before they can be acted upon. Among these projects are social rooms, cases for dorm trophies and placing of stop lights at the corner by Woollen Gymnasium and by the Zoology Building.—F.A.

—On Bond Issue—

Issue Is Needed

On Saturday, June 4, 1949, the people of North Carolina will go to the polls faced with a great decision. Should they undertake to approve Governor Scott's "Go Forward" program in the form of a bond issue for education and better roads, or should they be economy-minded and ignore this call for progress. By all the means the people of the state should turn out to back this bond issue.

School facts! The State Education Commission made these key findings. All the counties are in need of additional facilities. The average value of school property per enrolled pupil for the nation in 1943-44 was $341. In North Carolina it wase only $156. Many classrooms are overcrowded, inadequate, and in poor condition. The older schools fail to meet the standards of a modern program. In most schools the gyms, auditoriums, libraries and other auxiliary rooms are generally small and meagerly furnished. Seventy-two out of the 100 counties do not have sufficient borrowing capacity to provide their immediate needs. More than $150,000,000 is needed to bring the school buildings up to a minimum standard. With these facts in mind can any citizen of North Carolina deny their children these necessities? No! Then get out and support this issue for $25,000,000 for school bonds. These bonds will be paid out of the state General Fund and no local or county taxes will be used.

Road facts: Only one of every four miles of our roads are paved. North Carolina has 63,000 with 47,000 paved. School busses must travel over 41,800 miles of roads of which 27,800 are unpaved. Rural roads have been neglected because the state could only take good care of the principal highways. Good roads are necessary for the cities as they depend on rural trade, and many industrial workers live in the country and have to travel to towns. In 1921 North Carolina had 126,000 registered motor vehicles and the Bond Issue of the 1920s gave the state the best roads in the nation. Now we have 881,078 registered vehicles. Again time for action has arrived. Governor Scott proposes paving 12,000 miles of secondary roads and placing 35,000 in all-weather condition. Without the bond issue only 3,000 miles of roads could be paved. The only increase in taxation will be one cent per gallon increased gasoline tax.

Banks Talley

Issue Is Unfair

On June 4 North Carolina voters will go to the polls to decide upon a $200,000,000 bond issue. The proposed bond is for the improvement of county roads throughout the state.

It is a foregone conclusion that there is a definite need for new and improved roads within the state, but Governor Kerr Scott's method of financing these roads is obviously unfair to the urban populace of North Carolina.

Governor Scott proposes to pay off these bonds by another increase in gasoline taxes.

All vehicles other than those used on farms will be required by law to pay this additional increase in gasoline tax—whether they are owned by city dwellers or rural citizens.

Who will be the main travellers of these improved county roads—farmers or city residents? The answer is obvious. The rural citizenry will derive clear-cut benefits from the project, whereas the townsmen will profit very little.

County residents make very few contributions toward the building of city streets, and it is certainly not the place of the city residents, who own the majority of the automobiles in the state to play Santa Claus to the farmers by making most of the contributions that will be used for the construction of the new roads.

Therefore it stands to reason that under this present bond issue proposal it will be the townspeople, who enhance the value of their property by building their streets with city tax money, that actually pay for most of the building of the rural roads, and thus raise the value of the farmlands, from which they will receive no pecuniary gains.

Symphony Finale

By "Wink" Locklair

Before giving the first half of the program as the Prelude and Fugue in D Minor by Bach; a transcription by Mr. Slocum of Caesar Franck's Piece Heroique; and the second and third movements of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. (Some in the audience missed part of the Bach because, according to the clock in the lobby, Conductor Slocum began the program several minutes ahead of the announced time.)

Although the orchestra played well during the opening pieces, their best work was apparent in the Beethoven concerto which featured Mrs. Smith in the solo part. And certainly she gave a really first-rate reading of the concerto. Her glissando passages throughout the work and her playing of the great cadenza in the first movement were dazzling and a wave of applause burst out at the completion of the music. Mrs. Smith's recognition of her conductor and the orchestra's concertmeister William Tritt before turning to the audience, and her personal attention to a little boy applauding enthusiastically in the front row, were nice gestures. (Incidentally, the audience in the first rows was also interested in Mrs. Smith's right foot, which kept perfect time for her during the performance!)

The University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Earl Slocum, brought the 1948-49 music season to a close Wednesday evening with a concert in Hill Hall highlighted by a masterful interpretation of Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto by Jeanne Fornoff Smith and a performance of a section from John Satterfield's ballet suite "Venus and Adonis."

Mr. Satterfield's first piece from his ballet "Venus and Adonis," is called "The Meeting," and four other sections will follow. He started work on the composition last summer in California, after having read the Shakespeare poem. He explains that it is not descriptive or program music, but that it is meant to be a choregraphic episode. Other sections of the Suite are all down on paper in fragments and it is just a matter of orchestration, a matter which Mr. Satterfield believes may take another year.

"The Meeting" has a number of interesting ideas in it, and the piano part is reminiscent of Gershwin. The composer, a member of the Class of 1949, plays trumpet in the Symphony and he rose several times to acknowledge the applause. This was the first student-written composition the University's orchestra has played in a number of years.

Concluding the concert was a lively rendition of the overture to Wolf-Ferrari's one-act comic opera The Secret of Susanne. (Susanne's "secret:" she smoked cigarettes!)

—Stumping It—

Annual Report

By John Stump

Only about a week remains until the '49ers embark on their gold rush and the University chalks up 154 years as its official age.

Like all the other 153, the the past year has seen the University grow, face crises, reach some turning points and pass others. But, most of all, this year like all the others has seen another class produced, and another year of schooling added to Carolina's 7,000 students.

When the '49ers and all the rest of us look back in years to come, here are some of the things we are most likely to remember.

We had a pretty good country football team. Undefeated and tied but once in the regular season, it was picked for the Sugar Bowl trip. Unfortunately, we will also remember the result. But we know that only Grantland Rice failed to list Charlie Justice as All-American and several other Tar Heels made one or more of the star elevens.

We will remember Vic Seixas who couldn't be beat except by Kovaleski; a track team which couldn't be beat at all; and a sport year so generally successful that some of the students talked of taking Carolina out of a conference which offered our teams little real competition.

Some of us will remember that the activities on the campus weathered a pretty tough year. Interest and membership in the Di and Phi reached toward a new low. Debating was remote to the campus as a whole, while the UWF, Carolina Conservatives, Wallacites, and other organizations slipped almost clear out of our minds.

In the fall, three new dormitories were opened for their first regular season occupancy. Later the Scuttlebutt was torn down in complete disregard of student protests, but at least one administration leader called that a mistake which would not be repeated.

Down next to Graham Memorial, we saw a $3 million Planetarium rushed to completion and opened mid much ballyhoo and an occasional catcall from students who thought it was a waste of money. The Morehead gift was still a subject of controversy as the year ended, but the building looked like it was there to stay.

Outside events reached the campus several times. A state legislature faced with a $200 million bond issue and all its usual expenses raised tuition to almost double its former level. Again students protested, but Dr. Graham, the trustees, and administration officials did not oppose it; it passed.

Soon after this, the death of Melville Broughton brought a senatorial vacancy and Frank Graham was picked to fill it. Most of his students were sorry to see "Dr. Frank" leave, but most of them felt he was receiving a well-deserved promotion.

Once again, Chapel Hill had Communist trouble. Daily Worker editor John Gates, denied use of Memorial hall, spoke to a courteous though unfriendly audience on Franklin street and went his way.

More serious for the reputation of the University was the revelation that incredible malfeasance by the AEC had resulted in award of a government fellowship to a noisy local Communist. The country's reaction corrected the mistake. Letters to the Editor indicated that Chapel Hill still had its share of fuzzy young deep thinkers, but most of the students approved of the disposition of the case.

Non-veterans became in the majority in student government as the Student party took its one foot out of the grave and won the spring campus elections.

Dance attendance at the Spring Germans was low and tickets were given away by beachbound fraternity men. Down with the price of tickets went a former IFC president's proposal to double their number. But it was becoming clear that something would have to be done to restore the popularity of the big dance sets.

And finally, 1500 diplomas were awarded as Roy Armstrong approved admission of a like number of freshmen to take the vacant places. A few of us were married and more came close to it; some of us studied but more didn't (at least not enough). We all got a year older.

But tallying up, everbody agreed that a year in Chapel Hill was a pretty wonderful thing.

Final Notes And Facts

By Vestal Taylor

This corner committed an abominable error in an earlier edition this week by giving credit for "Sweep It Clean" to Sound and Fury. This organization, contrary to references and our memory, had nothing at all to do with the production for this was the musical staged and directed by Marty Jacobs early in 1948 for the benefit of the Koch Memorial Fund. Our apologies to Marty and the other people who were responsible for this contribution to a great cause.

The latest word from the D.A. Department indicates that although there may be no change in personalities, there will probably be a change in the administrative personnel of the Playmaker touring show next winter. It is very doubtful that many tears will be shed by the small fry if such a change does take place.

Lib Stoney has proved her worth as a person and as a trouper time and time again during the past year, by her interest in campus entertainment and the entertainment field in general. Although she is leaving the Hill in late June, she again came through for the entertainment cause yesterday afternoon when she called a meeting of representatives from each organization on campus that gives any form of entertainment during the school year, to discuss the establishment of a new office of entertainment coordinator.

This office would act as a liason agency for all organizations on campus in need of equipment, technical advice and technical help in staging a production. As Lib proposed it, the job would become a part of Graham Memorial with a salaried director of the service, paid at least in part by the Student Union. All who met were in general agreement on the plan and Jim Rathburn and Bob Watson took the proposal home with them to see just what could be done with the idea in regards to finances and space.

Perhaps nothing will come of this idea in the immediate future but something certainly should be done to help the smaller organizations in the way of coordinating their activities during the year and the inception of such a plan, with no hope of any personal gain, shows a fine spirit on the part of Miss Stoney.

An interesting fact came to light during this meeting. The directors of Graham Memorial are compelled to pay, item for item, for every dime's worth of work that is done on the plant housing the student union. Why is this so? Is the Student Union not a part of the University? Is the building not owned by the University or the state? There seems no reason for the expenses required for the upkeep of a plant of this size to come from the Student Union's portion of the student's block fee. This, it seems to us, should be a direct function of the Buildings Department, just as any other building or organization on campus.

Thanks to the efforts of a great many folks on campus this has been an unusually successful year in campus entertainment. Most significance to this column was the successful beginning of the presentation of three graduate-written plays each year and the departure from the emphasis on folk plays. This seems to us a big step in the right direction. But let us not forget that Sound and Fury finally produced a hit. With this in mind we can all go home for the summer, knowing that it can be done.

With this in mind, it may interest those of you who are planning to be here this summer to know that S'n N decided at a meeting Tuesday night to hold a summer show again this year. Nothing has been decided but the members have a variety of books and scores to pick from as soon as they are completed.

These are trying times for all with exams on us and so this column wishes all harried students lots of luck during the crucial days ahead. To those leaving us may we say that we wish the best of everything to each of you and may your fondest wishes be realized.

Dr. Lyons Outlines Procedure At Baccalaureate, Graduation

Asks Seniors To Be Prompt

The new "streamlined" commencement exercises will not only "restore dignity" to the 1949 graduation, but speed up the procedure for all concerned, faculty marshall J. C. Lyons told a meeting of seniors Wednesday. Mr. Lyons gave instructions to the graduates-elect on their part in the baccalaureate sermon and commencement night programs.

The seniors will form for the Sunday morning sermon in Memorial Hall at 10:30 in front of the Old Well. They will form in a column of twos, divided into candidates for Masters, Batchelors, and Doctors degrees. Caps and gowns will be worn.

Commencement Instructions

Formation for the Monday night commencement exercises in Kenan Stadium will be completed before 6:30. Seniors will get a program from the desk at the Bell Tower and then form for the march through the West gate.

Candidates for all Batchelor of Arts degrees will form first in the line on the path to the gate. Behind them in order, will come the Batchelors of Science in Arts and Sciences candidates, then the other BS candidates, then the Master of Arts candidates. Doctors of Philosophy candidates will form in front of the Bell Tower, but will be seated last.

Candidates will march to seats in front of the platform, situated on the North side of the stadium. The front row of the middle group of seats will be reserved for the PhD candidates.

Deans of each school will announce their degree groups. The groups then rise and receive their diplomas in mass. After the conferring of degrees, Senator Frank P. Graham makes the principal address.

Diplomas, Gowns

Diplomas and Bibles may be gotten at Woman's Gym immediately after the exercises, expected to end by 9:30.

In case of rain, the exercises will be held on the main floor of Memorial Gym, and the graduates will form on the basement level halls, in the same order as for the Kenan program.

Caps and gowns will be available in the Book Exchange after Tuesday. The Central Records Office will set up a desk in South Building to answer Senior inquiries about Spring grades after Tuesday.

Male Seniors are requested to wear dark pants and shoes, and a "subdued" tie for the ceremonies requiring the cap and gown. Coeds are asked to wear white shoes.

Seniors to Choose Permanent Officers

Permanent officers of the Class of 1949 will be elected at a "last class" meeting of seniors in Gerrard Hall, Monday, June 6 at 10 o'clock. President Ed Davenport will preside at the "last class" gathering at which seniors will wear caps and gowns. The elected officers will be installed officially as heads of the new alumni class at the annual Alumni Luncheon on June 6 by Judge Henry L. Stevens, President of the General Alumni Association. Fred H. Weaver, Dean of Students, will speak at the "last class" meeting.

'49ers Gold Rush Ball Is Scheduled For Woollen Gymnasium on Saturday

Highlighted by covered wagons and other western trek motifs, the 49'ers Gold Rush Ball will get underway at 9 o'clock Saturday evening, June 4 in Woollen Gymnasium.

Nat Williams, chairman of the Senior Class social committee, is in charge of the dance, and George Grizzard is in charge of decorations.

All seniors and their guests, as well as all faculty members, are invited to the dance. There is no charge for the affair, and free refreshments will be served.

Class President Ed Davenport announced yesterday that the finance committee, headed by Gene Turner, is now at work on the selection of a gift to be left by the class to the University. Their decision will be announced at the final class meeting June 6.

Degrees Will Go To 1,600 Seniors

Approximately 1,600 degree candidates will receive diplomas at the graduation exercises in Kenan Stadium on Monday, June 6, as the final event of the University's 155th commencement program. Some 400 members of the '49 class completed requirements for degrees earlier in the current academic year, swelling the total number of degrees awarded members of the current senior class and graduate and professional classes to more than 2,000.

Parents, Seniors To Have Luncheon

A "dutch" luncheon at one o'clock on Saturday, June 4, for degree candidates, their parents and other commencement guests will formally open the University's 155th annual commencement exercises.

Pi Phi, Town Take Crowns In Intramurals

Monograms Given To Twelve Girls

Pi Beta Phi sorority and Town girls were presented with WAA cups Tuesday night in recognition of having the most points in sorority and dormitory athletic competition this year.

This is the third year Pi Phi has won the cup, so this sorority will keep it permanently.

Individual awards based on leadership, interest and participation went to Peppy Lucas, Doris Beasley, Randy Hudson and B. A. Pope.

Monograms for earning 200 points went to B. A. Pope, Ruth Baines, Teeney Royal, Carolyn Gutherie, Doris Beasley, Peppy Lucas, Lib Browning, Dot Casey, Beckie Holton, Lucille Arnott, Pat Winslow and K. D. Durham.

Plaques for individual sport winners went to the Grads for softball, Pi Phi for volleyball, Town for badminton, Chi O for archery, Pi Phi for swimming, Chi O for tennis and Town for basketball.

Graduating Coeds, Parents Will Be Feted By Sororities

Graduating sorority girls will be guests of honors at parties given by the local chapters this week.

Alpha Gam seniors, their parents and friends will be entertained at a buffet supper immediately preceding Commencement exercises Monday afternoon.

Wednesday night the seniors were entertained by the undergraduates and the alumnae with a lawn party. The backyard was decorated with spring flowers and Japanese lanterns. After refreshments were served the seniors were entertained and imitated with a skit entitled "Our First Impression of an Active Meeting." All the graduates were presented with small cups on which was the sorority coat of arms.

Sunday morning the Tri Delt seniors will be entertained at the annual Pansy Breakfast. Each junior will write a verse for her big sister and present her with a gift. Entertainment will be the reading of the sorority prophesy.

Sunday night the Chi O sorority will entertain graduates, their parents and friends with a supper from 5 until 6.

Tuesday afternoon the seniors were feted with a farewell party at which they all received gifts.

The Pi Phis will have a dinner party for seniors, their parents and friends Monday night before Commencement.

May 18 the undergraduates gave the seniors a party and each senior was presented with a silver letter opener with her name, Pi Phi, and the year engraved.

The AD Pi's will also entertain their graduates, but their plans are still incomplete.

Make no little plans

"Make no little plans; they have no magic to stir men's blood and probably in themselves will not be realized. Make big plans; aim high in hope and work, remembering that a noble, logical diagram once recorded will never die, but long after we are gone will be a living thing, asserting itself with ever-growing intensity. Remember that our sons and grandsons are going to do things that would stagger us. Let your watchword be order and your beacon beauty."

Summer Athletic Events Are Scheduled

Local Athletes to Compete In National Collegiate Meets

While Carolina indoor and outdoor sportsmen are engaging in various activities from Clingman's Dome to Wrightsville Beach, the aggregation of athletes that carried the Carolina colors during the past year will be participating in an assortment of athletic spectacles ranging from Los Angeles and football to Ames, Iowa and golf.

The Carolina Golfers, who placed third in the Southern Conference tourney at Winston-Salem three weeks ago, will enter the National Intercollegiates at Iowa State College. Paced by Harvie Ward, Jr., former North-South amateur champion and leading contender for a berth on the Walker Cup team, the Carolinians will take a five man team to the mid-western meet.

Making the trip with Ward will be Tar Heel number two man Bob Cox, Jack Brantley, Frank Brooks, and Roy MacKenzie. Oliver Sapp, who was one of the leaders on the local links is ineligible to compete because he is a freshman.

Don't Know Yet

With various track events taking place in every corner of the country, Carolina coaches are undecided as to who they will send to the meets. Top events on the summer schedule are the National Intercollegiates at Los Angeles and the National AAU's.

Saturday the major part of the track squad will be at Atlanta competing in the Southern-Southeastern Conference meet.

The predicted clash between Olympic Champion Bob Mathias and Carolina's Bill Albans at the National Decathlon championship at Tulare, California in early June will not develop because of Albans' ankle injury sustained a week before the Southern Conference meet.

National Collegiates

The National Collegiates might possibly attract a half-dozen top Tar Heel trackmen. Although Coaches Fetzer and Ranson have made no definite plans, there is an outside chance that such stars as Bob Kirk, Bob Seligman, Sam Magill, and Julian MacKenzie might show up in the colors of Chapel Hill.

Starting towards the end of August more than half a dozen ex-Tar Heel grid greats will be working out with assorted professional football teams. Len Szafaryn will be with the Washington Redskins; Hosea Rodgers, Mike Rubish, and Bob Mitten will be on the West Coast with the All-American Conference Los Angeles Dons. Joe Romano will be playing with the Detroit Tigers.

Vic Seixas and Clark Taylor will be making their usual summer tours through the amateur tennis circles and one of the big matches on the schedule is the National Intercollegiates in Austin, Texas near the end of August.

Like past years, the major portion of the varsity baseball team has already started the ball rolling by signing with Goldsboro of the Costal Plain League.

Others associated with the baseball team will be venturing in other directions. Leo Nance, stellar varsity manager who kept the boys in place during the season, is taking the hard way out. He, along with first baseman Willard Hobbs will be married in the near future.

Hill Leads PGA

RICHMOND, Va., May 26—(UP)—Worry-ridden Ray Wade Hill, a "hungry" unemployed golf pro from Louisiana, cast his cares aside today and fired a desperate 32-35—67 for a medal-winning 136 which paced 64 qualifiers into P.G.A. tournament match play.

Threatening Hill's hopes to the end were burley Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, Chunky Johnny Palmer of Badin, and Howard Schmidt of Chino, Calif., but all three wound up at 138. Palmer was hot with a 32-34—66, while Heafner had a 69 and Schmidt took a 70.

Slender George Fazio of Conshohocken, Pa., a long iron artist, finished three strokes away from Hill with a 69 for 139.

Tracksters Have Successful Year; Win Two Crowns

The 1949 Carolina track team turned in one of the better performances in the history of the sport at Chapel Hill. The team swept both Southern Conference indoor and outdoor titles and were undefeated in dual meet competition.

In addition the Tar Heels won two crowns at the annual University of Pennsylvania Relays and copped more individual honors than any of the other entries in both the Florida and Carolina Relays.

Coach Dale Ranson said that the '49 Tar Heel tracksters "produced beyond our expectations. They worked hard and did a fine job."

Tomorrow night twelve of the Tar Heel thinlies will run in the first annual Southern Conference-Southeastern Conference meet at Grant Field Atlanta. These men finished either first, second or third in the conference meet here last Saturday.

Carolina took the indoor meet here in February with 52 points to 33 for second-place Maryland. Freshman Olympic veteran Bill Albans captured an unprecedented five first places and set two new records.

In the outdoor meet, running without Albans, who was suffering a badly sprained ankle, Carolina amassed 75 points to 47½ for Duke and 45 for Maryland. Bob Seligman set a new discus record and Sam Magill set a new two-mile mark.

The Tar Heels in dual meet competition swept to wins over Princeton, State, Duke, Virginia and Virginia Tech.

Several Tar Heels may compete in the NCAA and AAU meets this summer, but definite decision must await Saturday's performances and summer plans of the boys. —FRANK ALLSTON

Sigma Chi Wins In Softball, Polo; Takes Division Crown With Town

By Andy Taylor

As the Intramural department brought to a close yesterday its activities for spring quarter, and for the year, Sigma Chi posted wins in water polo and softball to become undisputed fraternity champions for the current year. Town, which has won all but two of the events that it entered this spring, was the dormitory winner.

The horseshoe playoffs were rained out and will be played tomorrow by arrangement with the teams. ATO 4 and Phi Kap Sig 1 are slated to fight it out for the fraternity championships. Town 3 has already won the dorm league by downing Town 2 on Wednesday.

The tennis finals were also held on Wednesday with Kappa Alpha defeating ATO for the fraternities while Town 1 defeated Town 3 to capture the dorm crown.

Scores Three Times

Sigma Chi and Sigma Nu both scored three time in the first quarter of the water polo match and once apiece in the second. But the Sigma Chis cinched it in the third quarter when they racked up four markers to a blank for Sigma Nu. Skippy Hesmer and Dick Bunting, who was on the all-campus squad last year, were outstanding for the winners. The final score was 10-5.

Sigma Chi 2 and PiKA 2 were scheduled to meet in a replay of the last one and a half innings of a protest game originally won by Sigma Chi for the fraternity championships.

The game was rained out after one man had advanced to the plate the Mural department ruled that as four and one-half innings of the original game had been played before the dispute took place, the team ahead at that time would win. Sigma Chi lead 2-1 at the end of the sixth and consequently that score is final. The win gave them the title of fraternity champs.

Cinch Crown

Sigma Chi cinched the fraternity championship near the end of the spring quarter winning softball, track and water polo. Zeta Psi copped second position with last year's winner, Phi Gam, taking third.

The race for second place in the dorm division was also close with Emerson placing behind Town and the Med School third. The Med School won last year while Town did not place in the final team standings.

The Mural department announced yesterday that as a whole this year has been the best in the history of Carolina intramurals. 2,278 individuals participated in the program while the total of entrants is upwards of eight thousand.

All of the awards were presented in Hill Hall last night as part of the Award Night program. The Grail cups, presented by the organization to the most outstanding athlete in both divisions, were won by Bob Edwards of the Grads in the dorm league and by Guerney Boren of Zeta Psi in the fraternity section.

Another award, given by the Intramural department to the

Seixas, Nyimicz Awarded Leading Athletic Honors

Basketballer Dan Nyimicz and netter Vic Seixas were awarded the University's highest athletic awards at Awards Night ceremonies last evening in Hill Hall.

Nyimicz, set shooting regular guard on this year's cage aggregation, received the annual Foy Robertson, Jr. Award for the basketball player who contributed the most to his team during the current year.

The award is presented each year by the parents of Foy Robertson, Jr., who was killed on duty with the Army Air Forces during the recent war, as a memorial to their son.

Seixas received the Patterson Medal given each year to the outstanding senior athlete at the University.

The medal was first presented in 1924 by Dr. Joseph Patterson, and since his recent death, has been continued by his sons in their father's name.

The presentations were made by Coach Bob Fetzer.

University Golf Course Ready For Play In Fall

First Nine Nears Playing Condition At Mason Locale

By Billy Carmichael III

That tract of land at the University's Mason Farm that is to be a golf course is beginning to look like a golf course.

After over a year of work, some nine holes of the course are rounding into playable form with early fall now set as the date that diffing and dubbing will begin.

Assistant Athletic Director C. P. "Chuck" Erickson, head golf man of the local athletic department, says the work on the project is proceeding rapidly and that all 18 holes will probably be completed by next summer.

Moving Along

Curiosity, the great driver, brought this writer out to the new course early this week, and a newcomer is certainly amazed at the amount of work that has been done. On the front nine, the winter rye grass has lately been cut away, revealing the staple Bermuda blades raising its sturdy heads for the first time.

The greens and tees are also rounding into shape on the front side of the course, while the heavy timber work is being completed on the back nine.

The course will be the lock, stock, and barrel property of the University and is being built to fill the needs primarily of students and faculty, who find it hard these days to discover an uncrowded and congenial course of their own.

For the University

University members, according to plans under formulative, will be allowed to play for a very nominal fee, which will provide for the upkeep of the course. Nominal, say officials, means something much less than now being charged at most of the neighboring courses.

The course will be the home of the Carolina varsity golf team and will also be the scene of to-be-planned intramural tournaments.

Though built for University golfers, the course will not be a very easy layout to master. The original plan for the course was the idea of Donald Ross, the famous Pinehurst golf architect, who died before beginning the actual plans for the project. The work was finished, though, by one of his associates, J. B. McGovern.

Traps and Hazards

McGovern has made the course one where trouble lurks at every shot. Well-placed traps and hazards will make scrambling difficult. The course is not excessively long—6400 yards from the middles of the tees—but accuracy has been placed as a much-needed feature of the game that tackles the layout.

Through the use of large and length tees, the course can be shortened or lengthened some several hundred yards by the moving of the tee markers. Pine woods bound the majority of the fairways, making those who hook and slice in need of an axe on several holes.

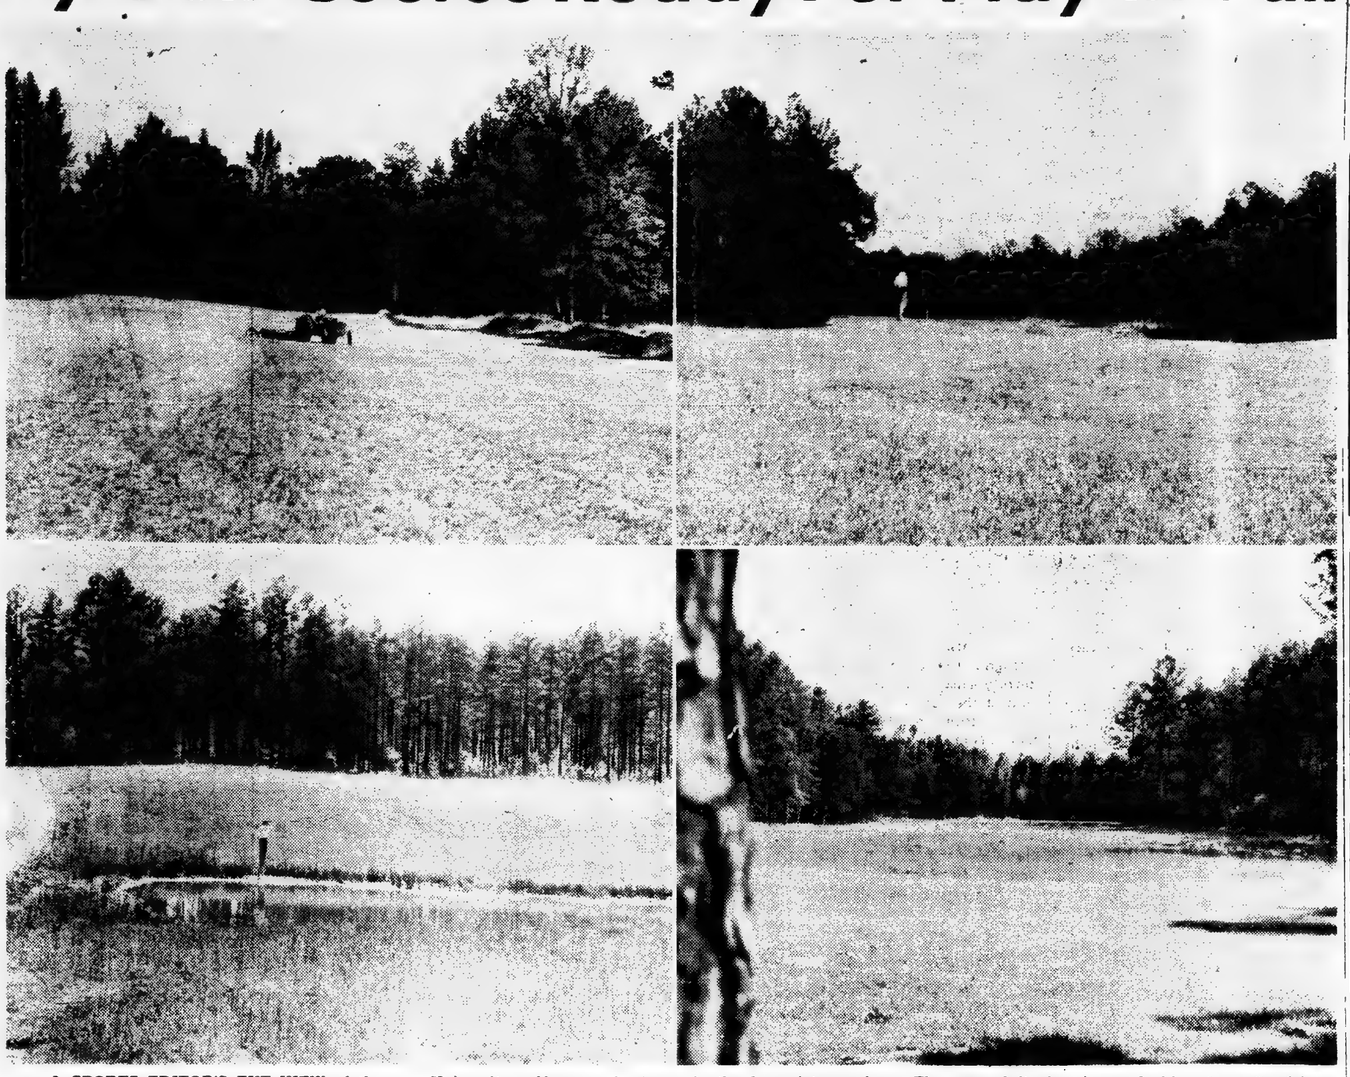
There is even a water hole—the 8th—about 185 yards long, with a large pond smack in front of the green. Traps on each side and a grass hollow to the rear make the green the only safe place in sight.

Par 72

Par for the course will be 36-36—72 with ten par-4's, four par-5's and four par-3's making up the combination. The back nine will be a few hundred yards longer than the front side.

The exact location of the new course centers around the site of the Mason Farm to the east of Chapel Hill. The front nine starts out from the farm house in the direction of the Raleigh Road, with the 4th hole running parallel to the highway.

The next five holes wander back around to the farm house with the back nine moving out into the direction of Victory Village. This side returns down the Mason Farm Road and the 18th green finds the player back at the starting point again.



Government Station

The Farm itself has long been a U. S. Government experimental station that specialized in grass research, and experience gained will probably be used in the perfection of the course.

The 10th and 18th holes will probably be finished in the fall along with the first nine, and for a while, are to be used as practice fairways and greens. When the course is completed, a practice hole will be built in front of the farm house.

A question that has arisen during the building of the course concerns whether or not coeds will be allowed to play on the course. The answer of University officials is that some provision will be made for the members of the fairer sex.

All of which points to nine holes of headaches by fall and nine more by spring in the realization of the dream of a University golf course.

Making long distance
SHORTER

There's a new and faster way to handle Long Distance calls. Made possible by new electronic switching equipment, it's called operator toll dialing.

You give the Long Distance operator the number you want. On keys before her at the switchboard, she punches out your call. In instant response, the new equipment takes over. It speeds your call to the distant city and rings the telephone you want. Just like that.

Toll dialing now reaches some 300 cities and more and more will be added until the network is nationwide. It's a part of the effort to make your telephone service better and better, at a cost within the reach of everyone.

had ever known. If he could read and know four times as much as an ordinary person, it was possible for him to have been four times as lonely. The vividness of his mind made him heighten the color of all he saw. Coates believes that through this technique, Wolfe revealed his subject matter in a manner that no one had ever realized.

In the business meeting after the discussion with the speakers, the Club elected Jack Lawler chairman and Rue Gurthrie secretary. Mrs. Mary Claire Engstrom regretfully resigned as faculty adviser to the Club. The plans of Louis Segovia, internationally known sculptor, to do a bust of Thomas Wolfe, which the Club plans to sponsor, also were discussed. In addition, it was learned that Jacques Hardre of the French Department is now translating into French the first of Wolfe's novels, Look Homeward, Angel.

Carolina Folk Festival Will Highlight Summer

The University extension Division, under the direction of Russell M. Grumman, yesterday released a tentative list of 33 different conferences, conventions, and institutes that are scheduled to meet in Chapel Hill during the summer months. The meetings, which are expected to attract between 3,000 and 4,000 people, will be conducted under the supervision of the Division.

Heading the list for the month of June will be the Second Annual Carolina Folk Festival, sponsored by the Folklore Council of the University. The Festival, which takes place on June 9, 10, and 11, will be under the direction of Bascom Lamar Lunsford, well-known folklorist and Director of the Mountain Dance and Folk Festival at Asheville. Lunsford is planning a program of genuine folk music, dances, arts, and crafts, representing the various sections of North Carolina.

On July 3-8 the International Platform Association will be here under the direction of James S. Lombard. The IPA, which is dedicated to the work of improving living conditions for all people and quickening their musical and literary tastes, will present lecturers, artists and entertainers of national and international reputation.

Sen. Graham Featured In Latest Issue Of 'Post'

The number one story in the latest issue of the Saturday Evening Post going on sale today is called "The Fighting Half-Pint of Capitol Hill," and it is about the man known for so long as "The Fighting Half-Pint of Chapel Hill."

With four large photographs and hundreds of words of copy Post writer Harold H. Martin tells the story of "a rumpled little man named Graham . . . a civil rights champion from Dixie who loves a scrap."

Martin says Frank Porter Graham is "undoubtedly the best-loved and the best-hated man in North Carolina." He says that many people look to the former University president "to heal the great breach between the North and the South on the thorny question of civil rights."

The magazine article tells a number of anecdotes about Graham's life as a young man, and leads through his appointment by Gov. Kerr Scott to his present service as the newest senator on Capitol Hill.

Senator Heads Shepard Group

Senator Frank P. Graham will serve as chairman of the James E. Shepard Memorial Foundation, it was announced this week by J. M. Hubbard, vice president of the Foundation.

The Foundation will attempt to raise $200,000 to perpetuate the memory of Dr. Shepard, founder and first president of North Carolina College in Durham. James T. Taylor of NCC will head the fund-raising campaign.

The money will be used to raise a statue and erect a building named after the first president of the Negro state college, and to start a scholarship fund for deserving students.

Dr. E. W. Knight of Chapel Hill will also serve on the Central Planning Committee.

Saturday Dance Planned by GM

To help summer school students get acquainted with each other, Graham Memorial is sponsoring an informal dance in Woollen Gymnasium Saturday night from 8:30 until 11:30.

Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra will furnish music for the affair.

All students are invited to attend the dance either with dates or unescorted. Official hosts and hostesses will be on hand to make introductions so that no students should feel hesistant about attending the dance unescorted.

No admission will be charged for the dance, which is the first in a series of entertainments to be sponsored by Graham Memorial this summer.

Honor Pledges

All male students entering the University for the first time this summer will be required to sign an Honor Council pledge to uphold the Honor System, Roy Holsten, Men's Council chairman, annuonced this week.

All male students whose names begin with A through K will sign the pledges in Roland Parker lounge number 2 Monday night, while those with names beginning with L through Z will sign Wednesday night. The lounge is on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

Student Dancers Crowned Champions Of Folk Festival

The Greenwood Dance Team, composed of University students from Western North Carolina, square danced off with top honors in the Second Annual Carolina Folk Festival held in Kenan Stadium and Memorial Hall over the past weekend.

The dance group, composed of eight couples who live in or near Asheville, won their crown in the finals of the Folk Festival in Memorial Hall Saturday night. A team from Farmer High School took second place over other entries from Denton, Kinston, and Cramerton in the last round. More than 600 persons participated in the Festival.

The local team, directed by Arnold Wilson, specializes in foot-stomping mountain square dancing, spiced with plenty of intricate steps. They were invited to go to Italy this summer for the International Music Festival in Venice but were unable to get a sponsor for the trip. The team will stay organized during the summer and will demonstrate at local square dances, according to Director Wilson.

Members of the team are Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Callahan, Mr. and Mrs. John Brady, Ralph Morris and Nell Evan, Nathan Booe and Sue Stokes, Arnold McPeters and Rachel Schepkowski, Milton Currence and Mary Ann Rhodes, and George Brady and Sue Carter. Others who have danced with the team are Kay Grayhead, Nick Fisher, Tommy Murdock, Sandre Sisk, Joe Callahan, Betty McMahon and Harold Cummings.

GUY B. PHILLIPS

Phillips Says Enrollment Is Up to 4,448

Guy B. Phillips, director of the University Summer School, said yesterday that total registration for the first summer session stood at 4,448.

He pointed out, however, that the figure would decrease slightly when it was determined how many pre-registered students had not returned who planned to do so. Phillips estimated enrollment for the second session would be around 3,000 students, or approximately two-thirds of the first session total.

"Actually we have about 250 more enrolled than we expected," the director said. "Last year we hit our peak with 4,493 students, but with the drop in veteran enrollment, we expected to have less registered this summer than we have signed up at the present time."

Phillips explained that the summer sessions are run with the same administrative officers as during the regular academic quarters, but the financial set-up is different.

Student Government To Release Pamphlet

An orientation leaflet will be issued within the next week to new summer school students, it was announced yesterday by acting student body president John Sanders.

The booklet, "Carolina, Self-Governing Community," will aid in acquainting new students with University student government.

Student government is being handled under a special three-board setup during the summer sessions. The organization, formed to administer all administrative, judicial and legislative powers, includes a government and Appeal Board under Sanders, a Men's Council and a Women's Council.

The board, composed of nine members, will handle all administrative and legislative functions and hear appeal cases from the councils. The councils will sit together as a Judicial Board to hear Honor Code cases, separately they will hear Campus Code violations

Board members include Sanders, Kitty Altizer, Larry Botto, Harry Buchanan, Mac Copenhaver, Harry Horton, Gene Newton, Banks Talley and Weddy Thorpe. Bernard Plemmons, Jack Street, and Vestal Taylor will serve during the second session only.

Men's Council is headed by Roy Holsten and includes John Eason, Pete Gerns, Arthur Murphy, Dick Palmer, and Charles Smith.

Women's Council is headed by Helen Epps and includes Gladys Chambers, Joan Lucas, Emily Sewell, and Lucielle Riley.

All suspected Honor and Campus violations should be reported to Roy Holsten at the Delta Kappa Epsilon house.

DI SENATE

The Dialectic Senate will meet every Wednesday night during the summer session at 9 o'clock in the Di Hall.

JOHN SANDERS, acting president of the student body, yesterday said an orientation leaflet on the Honor and Campus Codes would be released this week by student government.

Boys' State Meeting Here During Week

Legion Sponsors 300 N.C. Youths

Approximately 300 high school boys are in Chapel Hill this week for the Amercan Legion-sponsored Boys' State.

The seven-day program is designed to instruct high school students in all phases of state and national government as well as to enable them to become acquainted with each other through a program of sports and other group-participation activities.

Speakers for the meetings are members of the Americal Legion, the University's Institute of Government and state officials.

Sessions are being conducted in Memorial Hall, and the boys are putting into practice the knowledge they have accumulated by electing their own officers.

During this week the University Extension is also handling a Federal Crop Insurance Corporation meeting, Operation Analysis Institute, Realators' Institue and the Oklahoma Student Tour.

VETERANS

The Veteran's office requests all veterans to turn in their certificates of eligibility to the office in 305 South Building as soon as possible.

'Mars' Show Set to Begin Monday Night

Planetarium Draws 17,500 First Month

A new Morehead Planetarium show "Invasion From Mars," will start a month's run Monday night at 8:30, according to Director Roy K. Marshall. "Let There Be Light," the first show, will have its last performance Sunday night.

The new presentation, which will feature recorded excerpts from Orsen Well's famous broadcast on Hallowe'en night, 1938, will clear up misunderstandings about the planet by giving the fact about it, according to Director Marshall.

Regular show hours of 8:30 will be observed during the month, with special shows at 3 in the afternoon on Saturday and Sunday.

Attendance reports for the first month of operation show that more than 17,500 people attended the shows.

Davenport Chosen '49'ers President

Ed Davenport, Winterville, was named permanent president of the 1949 class at the final class meeting held on June 6. Davenport had served as the acting president of the class during the 1948-49 term.

Elected to the vice-presidentcy was Bill Miller, Greenville, S. C., while Mary Ann Daniels of Weldon was selected as secretary and Bill Pritchard of Chapel Hill as treasurer.

Staff Needed

All members of the regular academic sessions Daily Tar Heel staff, and all students interested in working on the summer Tar Heel should attend a staff meeting in the DTH offices at 2 o'clock next Monday afternoon.

No Dull Moments

The Facts Count

Senator Frank Porter Graham, dynamic little educator who served the Greater University of North Carolina so faithfully as its president, has been complimented highly by a respected national publication.

But the Saturday Evening Post didn't write an editorial to pay the compliment; it published a factual article. And if the facts about Frank Graham were more widely known, the rumors concerning him and the attacks made on him would be few and far between indeed.

If everyone in North Carolina knew the facts about the diminutive man known to students here as "Doctor Frank," the junior senator from North Carolina would be elected to his seat in Congress by a landslide in 1950.

Serious Responsibility

Things are pretty easy-going around Carolina in the summertime. So easy-going that many of us are likely to become lax about important regulations passed by our student government representatives and agreements which we have pledged to abide with.

One such rule is the House Privileges Board Coed Visiting Agreement. In short, it says that a coed may not drink or observe drinking on fraternity property. HPB Chairman Andy Cornish told us yesterday that no violations of the agreement had been reported since last summer, and that conduct under the agreement this summer would mean a great deal when the pledge is being drawn up for the fall.

The responsibility rests with coeds as much as with fraternity men. It is so easy to undo in one selfish act the confidence and respect which have taken a year to build up.

Plans Completed For Special Day By Three Schools

Plans including a football game, dance and other activities are being made for the first Greater University Day September 24, it was announced here by Ted Leonard, Greensboro, chairman of the arrangements committee.

With the entire day being proclaimed Greater University Day, students from all three branches of the University—N. C. State, Woman's College and Carolina—will get together in Chapel Hill to witness the State-Carolina game in the afternoon and to attend a special dance that evening.

Efforts will be made to have Senator Frank P. Graham and Governor Kerr Scott speak during half-time of the game.

Tea Dance Slated By 'C' Dorm Today

Graham Memorial will be the scene of a tea dance this afternoon when the coeds of "C" dormitory will entertain in the main lounge from 4 o'clock to 6 o'clock.

All men on the campus are invited for dancing, bridge and refreshments.

Ann Willingham, house president, and Helen Sanford, social chairman, are in charge of the dance.

TARNATION STAFF

Editor Tom Kerr of Tarnation, campus humor magazine, sent out a plea yesterday for writers, artists and cartoonists to attend a Tarnation staff meeting to be held next Monday evening at 7 o'clock in the mag offices in the basement of Graham Memorial.

"Everyone is welcome," Kerr said, "whether they are just here for the summer or plan to work for Tarnation next fall."

Daniels' Estate To Provide Fund For Scholarship

The establishment of the Josephus Daniels Scholarship for aid students at the University was announced here by Chancellor Robert B. House.

The late Josephus Daniels, publisher of the Raleigh News and Observer, former Secretary of the Navy and former Ambassador to Mexico and an alumnus of the University, stipulated in his will that he bequeathed "a sum sufficient to endow a scholarship in the University of North Carolina, . . . to be awarded by members of my family or youths selected by my executor."

Coed Dorms Pick New Presidents

Elections in the coed dormitories took place this week and the following girls were chosen as house presidents: Mac Copenhaver, Spencer; Roxie Walters, Alderman; Tommie Olive, McIver; Mary Lee Hayes, Carr; Betty Allen, Smith; Mary McConville, Kenan; and Ann Willingham, "C."

Social chairman elected are Peggy Sheridan, Spencer; Martha Littlefield, Alderman; Marie Alford, Carr; Pat Chandler, Smith; Frances O'Kelly, Kenan; and Helen Sanford, "C."

TO GIVE TEA

All foreign students at the University and any other students desiring to meet people from other countries are invited to a Cosmopolitan tea given by Graham Memorial Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Horace Williams Lounge.

A program featuring folk music from different countries will be presented.

Board Makes Official Plea For Tar Heel

Resolution Asks For Larger Paper

Student Government Tuesday night made official a student plea for a Summer Tar Heel large enough to include a full editorial column, letters to the editor, and other columns and articles outside of the news stories which the present size of the paper restricts it to.

Through the last week, more than 1,000 students signed a petition asking for a summer student newspaper "to act as a medium for expression of student opinion as well as dispersal of information."

Acting President John Sanders said yesterday that the Student Government and Appeal Board had unanimously passed a resolution asking the summer school administration to provide funds for a paper large enough to provide for the items other than general news.

During the regular academic quarters, the Student Legislature has power to appropriate student fees as it sees fit, but in the summer the activity fees are held by the administration and distributed as the summer school office decides.

Summer Murals Include Softball, Tennis, Pitching

Carolina's Summer Intramural program will get under way in earnest next week, with the softball leagues beginning play Monday, the horseshoe entrants starting on Wednesday, and the tennis enthusiasts taking the courts Thursday afternoon.

Softball entries will close this afternoon, with their managers meeting tonight at 7:30 in room 304, Woollen Gym, to map final plans for Monday's opening tilts. It is important that a representative from each team is present at this meeting.

The games will be held on Intramural Field from 4 to 6 o'clock Monday through Thursday.

Horseshoe entries, both singles and doubles, must be in by Monday night, with competition slated to begin Wednesday afternoon on the courts north of the Tin Can. The time of the matches will be 7:30 and 8:30 every weekday night except Friday.

Local netters will have their chance on Thursday, June 23, when play starts on the clay and green courts. Singles and doubles entries will be accepted, and the deadline for both is Monday.

Entries in any of the mural activities may be made at the Intramural office, room 311, Woollen Gym, phone F-3321, or on entry sheets posted in Woollen Gym, the Scuttlebutt, and on the tennis courts.

All students and all faculty members are eligible for summer murals; however a player cannot play on more than one team each session.

Schedules for the softball leagues will be mailed to the managers, while tennis schedules will be mailed to all individuals taking part in the competition. All schedules and pairings in tennis and horseshoes will be posted on the Intramural bulletin board between the Tin Can and Woollen Gym.

In addition to softball, horseshoes, and tennis, there will also be a bait casting contest, with plans to be announced by the mural department later.

Chancellor Replies To House Demands

Says Expensive Inventory Is Necessary To Provide Committee With Book List

Chancellor R. B. House said Wednesday he had informed the U. S. House of Representatives Un-American Activities Committee that an expensive inventory would be necessary to furnish the Congressional group with a complete list of textbooks in use at the University.

U. N. C. was only one of six schools in the state and of hundreds in the country which had been asked to send lists of all textbooks in use to the committee. House said a complete list from here would fill some 3,000 typewritten pages.

The chancellor asked Representative Wood (D.-Ga.), chairman of the group, if any appropriation was available to cover the cost of such an inventory. He also said the University would welcome a representative of the committee to check local books and records.

A report made by the Congressional group announced that the University had not supplied the committee with its textbook list. House's statement was made to explain why the list had not been supplied. He said he had heard nothing yet from Wood in regard to funds for making the inventory.

House told Wood "the only reason the University does not have every book in print is that we don't have the money to buy them.

"However," House continued, "our students have the use of the Duke Library, and even the Library of Congress to secure books which we do not have."

CHANCELLOR HOUSE said Wednesday he had told the Un-American Activities Committee he would have to be provided with sufficient funds to conduct a complete inventory before he could submit a list of UNC textbooks to the Congressional group.

No Immediate Relief Is Forecast For Local Seige Of Heat, Humidity

By Roy Parker, Jr.

If past records and the signs on weather maps mean anything, the oppressive heat that is making beer-drinking and swimming the only comfortable recreation in Chapel Hill is not due to let up any time soon.

Records at the local weather station show the present weather is running true to form for the month of June, except that "We're a little short of rain," in the words of record-keeper Max Saunders. Through Monday, only about two-thirds of an inch had fallen this month, compared to two and a half inches last June.

The present temperature which has steadily risen since the beginning of the summer session to a season high of 95 Monday, is about on par with that of a year ago. The thermometer readings have averaged around 90 degrees.

The high readings are due to extremely hot masses of air moving in from the Midwest. These masses collided with warm moisture-laden masses from the Gulf Stream over West Virginia and caused flooding rains, but so far this section has not been cooled by such a downpour.

According to Geology Department weather maps, another saturated mass of air is forming in the Gulf Stream and if it moves inland will cause cooling rains. However, it is possible that this single hope for relief may be dashed if the mass moves northward up the coast.

No Danger From Polio This Summer -- Garvin

There will probably be no polio epidemic in North Carolina this summer according to Dr. O. David Garvin, district health officer.

The first case of polio in Orange County last year was reported to the health office on June 23. Today, exactly one year later, no cases have been reported in this county.

North Carolina had a total of 2,512 cases during 1948. Orange County had 25 cases, eight of which were in the city limits of Chapel Hill.

"I do not predict an epidemic this year," Dr. Garvin said. "Most people were exposed last year, so if they were going to get polio they should have had it then. There will probably be no serious outbreak for several years now."

Dr. Garvin is the health officer for this district which is composed of Orange, Person, Chatham and Lee counties.

Chapel Hill's first polio victim last summer was Mrs. Frank W. Nelson of Victory Village. She was also the first victim in Orange County.

HONOR PLEDGES

All men students who have not yet signed Honor Code pledges must be present to do so in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial at 7 o'clock next Tuesday evening, Honor Council Chairman Roy Holsten announced Wednesday.

Unsigned Oath Is Returned By Freistadt

Will Not Comply With AEC Ruling

Hans Freistadt, graduate student in physics and admitted member of the Communist Party, said yesterday that he had returned a non-Communist oath unsigned to the National Research Council.

The Council, which hands out fellowships for the Atomic Energy Commission, sent the oaths to all fellowship recipients, to comply with an agreement made with the AEC.

"They said they could not make payment on the fellowship until they received the signed oath," Freistadt said, "but they have not sent me any official word of its being cancelled yet."

S&F to Hold Show Tryouts On Thursday

President Mark Barker of Sound and Fury, announced Wednesday that the group is preparing a show for the first summer session. Tryouts for the show will be held Thursday evening at 7:30 in Memorial Hall.

Sound and Fury membership is not necessary for participation in the show. All who are in any way interested as actors, singers, stage crew, scenery, publicity, electricians, or business will be welcomed at the tryouts.

The summer show is as yet unnamed. Authors Jim Hammerstein, Bill Bell, and Mark Barker are now completing the final draft. Hammerstein, and Barker are doing the book, Hammerstein is writing the music and Bill Bell is handling the lyrics.

The show is to be a revue, consisting of skits pertaining to campus events and activities. The production dates, admission price, and cast will be announced next week.

Sound and Fury is a student-operated group for the production of light musical comedies and revues. Begun on campus a number of years ago, it has been presenting successful productions for student entertainment ever since.

UNC Graduate Is Mob Victim In Birmingham

Reporter Beaten By Hooded Gang

Clarke Stallworth, a graduate of the University class of 1947, became a central figure in the hooded gang troubles in Birmingham, Ala., this week. A reporter for the Birmingham Post, Stallworth was beaten while investigating new reports of violence by hooded mobsters posing as protectors of public morals.

The 23-year old newspaperman was active on campus during his University career, serving as president of Manley dormtiory and as a member of the Daily Tar Heel staff. He was a member of SAE fraternity. Stallworth's home is in Thomaston, Ga.

The attack was another incident in the terrorist scare that is gripping the Birmingham area. Nearly a dozen people had been beaten or threatened by the hooded men and a vigilante-type search was being organized after authorities seemed powerless to stop the attacks.

Phillips to Talk At Frat Meeting

Guy Phillips, director of the summer school, will be the speaker at a meeting of Phi Delta Kappa, national honorary educational fraternity, Thursday night at the Carolina Inn. Phillips will discuss "Some Phases of Educational Leadership."

The meet will be the first in a series of dinner gatherings of the fraternity this summer. Members will hear speakers at all the meetings.

An initiation ceremony and banquet will be held on July 14. The speaker then will be Dr. Wallace H. Moore, chairman of the Department of Education of Occidental College in California.

'La Maison Francaise' Gives Pseudo-Frenchmen Experience

If you can't speak French or a reasonable facsimile, you would do well to steer clear of the Beta House until after July 19.

On that date the annual French House, which opened this year on June 9, will close and the 23 Monsieurs and Mademoiselles attending will return to their respective homes and classrooms, better students and teachers for having spent six weeks on the Carolina campus.

During these weeks the men and women of "La Maison Francaise" listen to lectures and recitals and participate in informal discussions. The object of the program, according to Professor Hugo Giduz, founder and director of the French House, is to encourage spoken French and to aid those who are interested in increasing their ability to understand the language.

The hostess, Mrs. Charlotte House, has invited all French-speaking people to attend the lectures and take part in the discussions which begin each evening at 7 o'clock. A dinner preceeds the evening programs and accomodations for the meal will be made for anyone who contacts Mrs. Huse in advance.

Salute of the Week

Cheers for the Chancellor!

Harmonica-playing Bob House, Chancellor of the University, is hereby awarded the Tar Heel's salute of the week for his reply to the House Un-American Activities Committee request for a complete list of all UNC textbooks.

I'll be glad to cooperate, says Bob, but to provide you with a complete list would take many hours of very expensive work taking an inventory, and unless you have some sort of appropriation covering that expense I'm afraid it's no soap.

And, continues wily Bob House, you're not going to catch me sending you a quickie list thrown together just to appease you so you can turn up a book left off the list because of haste and say, aha! now we've caught you hiding one, you rascal you.

And that wasn't all Bob House said. He delivered a between-the-lines blast right straight at the Un-American Activities Committee when he took the stand that if the University had enough money, it would buy every book ever printed, just so students could read all sides of every question.

The latest word from Washington seems to indicate that the textbook witchhunt is to be short-lived. For that we can all thank the Lord, because the next step would probably be the Burning of the Books, and the complete loss of academic freedom on the campuses of the nation.

SUMMER SOCIETY

By Wuff Newell

Social activities for the summer session got underway last weekend when Spencer Dormitory entertained Thursday night with an open house and the coeds who have taken over "C" Dormitory gave a tea dance in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

Blanket invitations were sent to all men on campus and both functions were deemed highly successful by all who attended them.

Friday night everyone put on old clothes and went to the Tin Can square dance sponsored by the Summer Activities Council. Much praise is due Bob Williams, chairman of the square dance committee for the many hours he spent planning the affair. At the dance he was ably assisted by Arnold Wilson, Bob Callahan, John Brady, Nathan Booe and other members of the championship Greenwood Square Dance Team, the Chatham Ramblers and the students who were hostesses and hosts.

The Summer Activities Council, under the auspices of the Y, is making plans for several more social events which will be announced later.

Graham Memorial took over Saturday night and sponsored an informal dance in Woollen Gym that was said by many to be one of te behst dances the University has had in ages. Under the leadership of Lib Stoney, Bob Watson and Graham Memorial staff members the dance proved that more informal parties and dances are needed on the campus.

Monday and Wednesday nights are the times when Graham Memorial sponsors dancing classes for good and bad dancers alike. With Lib Stoney and John Lehman as instructors, the dances should prove highly successful.

Caroline Twitty House, daughter of Chancellor and Mrs. Robert House of Chapel Hill, became the bride of William Stanton Stewart June 18 in the Methodist Church in Chapel Hill.

And now a request—if anyone has any society that could be used on this page, please bring it to the Tar Heel on the second floor of Graham Memorial any time.

Theme of the week-long conference was "Renewing Life through Christian Faith and Action." The speakers were from all over this section of hte United States, and the University was represented by YMCA Director Clauds Shotts.

Meeting Planned By Alpha Gams

All members of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, whether active, alumnae or pledge, are invited to an informal meeting next Wednesday night at 7:30 in Graham Memorial.

The room in which the meeting will be held may be learned from the information office.

A new committee to work on reinstatement of dormitory social rooms was also appointed, along with a committee of one to seek a solution to the "B" dorm parking problem.

Ken Black, Ray Sipes, and Jack Tripp will work on the social room project, with Black as chairman. Jack Sloan, president of "B" dorm, will work on the parking problem in his area.

Tar Heel Netters Advance; Golfers Set For Nationals

Competition on a national basis still holds the spotlight in the Tar Heel sporting picture, with the NCAA track championship just over, the NCAA tennis tournament in full swing, and the National Collegiate golf championships set to begin Monday.

Seixas, Taylor Win

Carolina tennis stars Victor Seixas and Clark Taylor breezed through their first two singles matches on Monday and Tuesday to advance to the tougher third round in the NCAA championship tournament in Austin, Texas.

Seixas, seventh-ranking amateur in the nation and first-seeded in the singles tourney, topped John Baker of Texas Christian, 6-2,6-1, for his second straight victory, while teammate Taylor copped his second win by outlasting Kirt Mitchum of Stanford, 7-5, 6-3, in two hotly-contested matches.

Seixas defeated Michigan State's Bob Malaga, 6-2, 6-2, in Monday's opener.

Taylor, number two man behind Seixas on the Tar Heel 1949 net team, came through with an easy, 6-1, 6-1, decision over his first opponent, Robert Leight of Washington University (St. Louis).

The two Carolina netters will combine forces for the doubles competition, and are seeded fourth in that division.

Golfers in NCAA

A quintet of Tar Heel golfers will compete in next week's NCAA tourney in Iowa. The big affair will open on June 27 and continue through July 2.

Led by Harvie Ward, the local linksmen will carry the Tar Heel banner into the Nationals after having played in several amateur tournaments on the way out.

The Carolinians making the trip, in addition to Ward, are Frank Brooks, Roy McKenzie, Jack Brantly, and Bob Cox.

Fail to Score

Tar Heel trackmen Bob Kirk and Sam Magill failed to break into the scoring in the NCAA track championships last Friday and Saturday in Los Angeles, Cal.

Kirk, who entered the javlin throw, missed qualifying for the seven-man finals by one place. He came through with a toss just under 200 feet, ten feet short of his Southern Conference performance. The winning throw was a heave of 224' 8½" by Held of Stanford.

Magill, Conference two-mile champion, place twelfth in the final running of that event. Horace Ashenfelter of Penn State turned in the outstanding time of 9:03 9/10 minutes for first place.

Kirk will remain on the coast for the AAU championships at Frenso, Cal., June 24-25. He will probably be joined by Tar Heel Bob Seligman, Southern shot put champion.

Fencers To Meet In Woollen Monday

The local fencing club will open a series of summer meetings at Woollen Gym Monday night June 27, from 7:30-9:00, and will meet every Monday and Wednesday for the remainder of the summer at the same time and place.

The club was organized this spring largely through the efforts of Franz E. Ross of the mathematics department, and as a result of the interest shown during the spring quarter, the physical education department will offer a course in fencing this fall.

Mural Program In Three Sports Gets Underway

Carolina's Summer Intramural sports program opened Monday when 14 softball teams took the field in teh first round of competition for local honors.

Three eight-team leagues round out te softball circuit, with each of the leagues including fraternity, dormitory, and independent teams.

Tennis play is scheduled to begin this afternoon, with 32 single matches on tab in the novice division. The finals will be played on Thursday, July 14.

The horseshoe pitching entrants went to work for the first time last night on the courts beside the Tin Can.

Plans for a fourth summer sport, bait casting, have not been completed yet, but they are being formulated at mural headquarters and will probably be released in the near future.

High, onesided scores were the usual thing in the opneing day softball games. The PiKA, Chi Psi, Sig Ep, and Phi Delta Thet. nines came through with impressive victories over fraternity foes, while Mangum dormitory slugged out a 16-0 win over St. Anthony's top nine, and the Arabs turned back the DKE aggregation, 5-3.

Prouty's Funeral Held Wednesday

Funeral services for Dr. William Frederick Prouty, 69, head of the Geology Department since 1933 and nationally known geologist, who died of a heart attack in a Durham hospital Monday night, were held yesterday in the Chapel Hill Episcopal Church at 4 o'clock. Rev. David W. Yates officiated.

A native of Putney, Vt., Dr. Prouty was educated in the Black River Academy, Ludlow, Vt., and at Syracuse University where he received his B.S. and M.A. degrees. After receiving his doctorate at Johns Hopkins University, he spent a short time at the University of Alabama and in 1919 accepted a professorship in economic and structural geology at Carolina.

Dr. Prouty was an authority on the origin of the bays and lakes basis of the coastal plains of the two Carolinas and was widely known for his study, research and writings on this subject. He recently completed a monograph on the Carolina bays which will be published soon by the Geological Society of America.

Mercury Goes to 100 To Hit Highest Peak

The current hot weather hit its highest point of the season Sunday when record-taker Max Saunders' filter plant weather station registered a temperature of 100 degrees. Thermometers scattered around the campus measured the heat at readings as high as 102.

According to Saunders' heat records, the century mark was a June high since June 11, 1947, when the mercury climbed to 102. Readings have been hovering around the mark for the past two weeks, and Tuesday's high was 98.

Norman Cordon will act as master of ceremonies for the program which will include both faculty and student entertainment. Tentative plans call for several harmonica numbers by Chancellor R. B. House.

NORMAN CORDON, former Metropolitan Opera star, is handling local arrangements for the International Platform Association's annual convention, meeting here for six days starting Sunday.

Six-Day Show Will Feature Varied Field

IPA Will Sponsor Big Talent Event

Talent, talent and more talent will be the keynote of the 47th Annual Convention of the International Platform Association when it meets here from Sunday through Friday.

Internationally famous entertainers, including opera stars, dramatists, lecturers, musicians and dancers will highlight the six-day program.

According to Norman Cordon, local member of the Association, the meeting in Chapel Hill will mark the first time since the group's organization in 1902 that the annual convention has been held on any college campus. For the past 17 years the Association has met at Lakeside-on-Lake-Erie, Ohio.

When the organization's executive secretary, James S. Lombard, visited the campus last year he felt that with Memorial, Hill, and Gerrard Halls available, Chapel Hill would be a "wonderful" site for this year's convention. He proposed the idea to the executive committee and it was accepted unanimously.

The convention will get under way at 8 o'clock, Sunday evening, July 3, in Memorial Hall. University Chancellor R. B. House will preside over the program which will feature Ann Bollinger, Metropolitan Opera Soprano; Edward Tomlinson, NBC Commentator; and Norman Cordon, former Metropolitan Opera Bass.

Amateurs trying to break into the professional ranks will have their chances when they take part in the Talent Pre-Vues, scheduled for the mornings of July 5, 6 and 7 in the Playmaker Theater. Talent agents, theatrical producers and other members of the Association will be on hand to give exceptionally talented performers the breaks they are after. These exhibitions will be open to the public and students are particularly invited to attend.

Students will also be admitted free to one evening and all afternoon performances if they will present their I.D. cards at the Carolina Playmaker Office in Swain Hall and secure a ticket for the night they wish to attend.

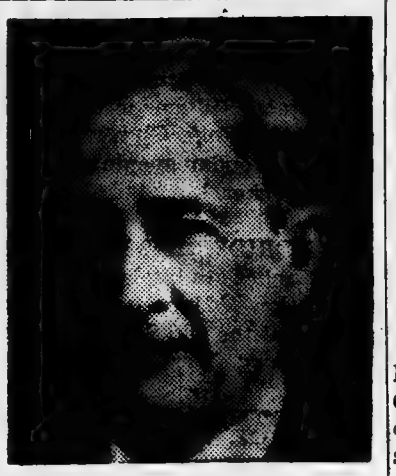
Lynn Concert Is Scheduled Friday Night



Eight Numbers To Be Featured

Barry Lynn, art major at the University, will give a concert of fantasy dances in Memorial Hall July 1 at 8:30. This will be the first in a series of summer concerts presented by Graham Memorial and will be given in collaboration with the Art Department.

Lynn will present eight numbers. The dances are based on the fantasy idea and are a combination of sculptured lines and small subtle movements.

According to Lynn, his most popular dance probably is Archer in the Stars. In this number Lynn dances in a pool of blue light and gives the picture of a mythical creature with gold horns. At the conclusion of the dance the Archer supposedly puts out the light from the stars with his bow and arrow.

Music for Archer in the Stars was composed by Khatchaturian, who also wrote the popular Sabre Dance.

Senator Graham Leads, Talks At Benson Singing Festival

Sen. Frank P. Graham, former president of the Greater University, assumed a new role Sunday when he led the 29th annual State Singing Convention in Benson.

During the convention Senator Graham made a vigorous plea for "one community and one world."

"Such events as this one which manifests so much good will could easily bring it into realization," he declared.

Standing in shirt sleeves and smiling, the little senator led the huge throng of some 10,000 people in singing a popular hymn called "When We All Get to Heaven."

He told the crowd that he really didn't know how to sing very well. His directing, however, made a big hit with the gathering.

Dr. C. W. Saunders, Benson dentist and close personal friend of the senator, introduced him as "a great citizen, a great educator, a great public official and a great peacemaker." Dr. Saunders told the audience that Johnson County, where Benson is located, was named for Mrs. Graham's great - great - great - grandfather, Gabrial Johnson.

"This singing convention is a significant thing in the life of North Carolina," the former University president told the people. "It is built on three great things: music, religion and community spirit."

Hot Weather Hitting You?

Hot weather getting you down? We were feeling the heat, too, until we discovered that there is one place on campus where the temperature is so low that on walking through the door you feel as if you were entering another world.

The Rendezvous Room in the basement of Graham Memorial is the place where you can enjoy good music, dance, grab a bite to eat and best of all, be pleasantly cool.

While other students have been sweating out this hot spell and wishing they had never heard of summer, Arnold Wilson, head of the Rendezvous Room has stayed cool and comfortable in the popular room of the student union building.

"I wish more people knew how cool the Rendezvous Room is," he said. "We stay down here from the middle of the afternoon until late at night and never feel the heat."

Palmer Tops Tar Heel Ace In Medal Play

Ward Shoots 74 After Hot Round

Scattered returns from the rain-scattered NCAA golf championship tournament at Ames, Iowa, placed Tar Heel ace Harvie Ward third in the medal play after two days of qualifying.

Arnold Palmer, Southern Conference champion from Wake Forest, captured medal honors when he put together a 70 and a 71 for a 141. Ward shot a hot 69 on Monday to tie the competitive record for the rugged course, but the Carolinian had a three-over-par 74 on Tuesday and lost his chance to be medalist, finishing two strokes behind Palmer.

Fred Wampler of Purdue, co-champion of the Big Ten, was runner-up with a 142 total for the two days' play.

First reports on team play indicate that the Tar Heel linksmen still have a chance for the team title. Golfers representing Carolina in addition to Ward are: Frank Brooks, Bob Cox, Roy McKenzie, and Jack Brantly.

Sixty-six colleges and universitys are represented in the tourney, held on the Iowa State College course. Match play has been postponed several days because of the bad weather.

Illness, Upset Costly

Carolina's invasion of the Lone Star State in quest of the NCAA tennis title repelled and all hope for a Tar Heel team victory was wiped out last Wednesday when top-seeded Victor Seixas was upset in a quarter-finals match and Clark Taylor, also of Carolina, was forced to default in the middle of a match because of illness.

Gene Garrett of U.C.L.A. turned the trick against Seixas, stopping the Tar Heel star in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3. Seixas reached the fourth round by virtue of two one-sided victories and a bye.

Tar Heel Clark Taylor qualified for the fourth round in the same manner as his teammate Seixas, but the Carolina netter, who had been ill since the start of the tournament, was unable to continue his quarter-finals match and was forced to withdraw in favor of Buddy Behrens of Rollins College after each had won a set.

Seixas and Clark joined forces in the doubles play, but managed to get no further than the quarter-finals before being eliminated from the tourney.

Jim Brink and Fred Fisher of the University of Washington captured the doubles title, and Jack Tuero of Tulane took the singles crown.

Speaking before a Fourth of July gathering on the Guilford Courthouse battlefield Monday, Senator Frank P. Graham said that America's heritage is to give hope to the world. The State's junior Senator was the principal speaker at the first formal Independence Day celebration to be held in Guilford County since World War II.

Graham, former president of the University, listed four principals which must be followed in order to preserve the heritage of freedom won on such battlefields as Guilford Courthose. He also paid tribute to the patriots who fought on the battleground. He declared "May peace come at last through staunch, helpful American reassurance of the self-recovery and security of free peoples."

Senator Graham returned to Washington immediately after the Guilford celebration. He will return later this week to take part in the Watauga County centennial in Boone.

On Honor Code

It has recently been brought to my attention that an indifferent attitude toward the Honor Code has been adopted by many students during our summer school session. Although the Councils have tried several cases, this unhealthy attitude toward the Honor System has permitted other violations to go unchecked.

Under our governmental system here, there is no provision made for proctors to patrol classes during quizzes and exams. Each student is pledged to uphold his honor and see that his neighbor does the same. This factor is important in our Student Government at Carolina, a government which is operated and maintained entirely by the students themselves; a government relying for its success upon individual cooperation.

Summer school is not the place for a relaxing of our Carolina standards; on the contrary, it is a time to double our efforts to show visitors how a successful student government may be operated. This will necessitate 100% cooperation from students both old and new.

A partial fault may lie in the incomplete orientation program during registration week. However, steps have been taken to correct this situation and with final examinatons approaching, every student should concentrate on doing his part to uphold the system which has long been a pride of the University.

Interdormitory Council Names Special Summer Committees

At its meeting Monday night, the Interdormitory Council appointed a Summer Jndiciary Council, a new committee to work on aspects of the social room problem, and worked out a plan to handle dorm social fees funds.

A plan to expedite the handling of the 50 cent dorm social fee was worked out at Monday nights meeting. The fee will go into effect in the Fall Quarter.

A three-man committee composed of Lon Braxton, chairman, Bill Rogers and Ernie Martin, to work with the University Veterans Association to discuss possible use of the Veterans Club on a part time basis for dorm resident entertainment was appointed by IDC president Pete Gerns. At next Monday's meeting of the Council, the group will discuss a proposed plan to make the Council Judiciary Board the original court of jurisdiction in cases arising under the social rules. The plan would require a constitutional amendment.

Two Groups Act On Epps Matter

Two committees organized on the isssue of admitting Negro students to graduate schools of the University planned meetings in Graham Memorial next week for the purpose of electing permanent officers and deciding their stands on the question.

The first group, "The Non-Partisan Committee for Harold Epps," was formed several weeks ago to discuss methods of helping Epps, a student at North Carolina College in Durham, enter the University Law School.

The second group, which is officially un-named but met Tuesday night of this week as the "true non-partisan" committee on the question, was formed last Thursday night by a small group of students who walked out of the original committee's open meeting.

The "Non-Partisan Committee" will meet on Thursday night at 8 o'clock in Graham Memorial, while the more recent organization will convene on Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, also in the student union building.

The Epps case is being supported by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, according to Negro attorney C. O. Pearson of Durham.

Harvie Ward Wins NCAA Golf Title; Albans Places Third In Decathlon

Bill Albans, Carolina's freshman track sensation, captured third place in the National Decathlon championships at Tulare, California, last week.

Olympic champion Bob Mathias, a hometown boy, successfully defended the title he took last year by racking up 7,556 points in the two-day meet. Irving Mondschein of N.Y.U. was in the runner-up spot with a total of 7,044 points. Albans was in third place by virtue of a 6,715 point score.

Floyd (Chunk) Simmons of Charlotte, former Carolina and Olympic star, was fourth in the event with 6,483 points.

The championship meet is composed of ten strenuous events, both track and field, with all those competing awarded points on the basis of their performances.

The big Tar Heel star took first place in the 100-meter dash, the broad jump, the 100-meter high hurdles, and tied with Mondschein for top spot in the high jump.

In winning, Mathias won only three events, but he was able to make a good showing in all of the events and managed to amass enough points for the title.

Simmons was unable to take a single first place, but his point total was enough to put him in fifth place. The Charlotte trackster managed to outscore Albans in the weight and distance running events.

After the first day of competition, Albans stood a good chance to overtake Mathias and Mondschein, but the final night he made poor showings in the last three events—the javlin, discus, and 1500-meter run—and lost his chance to dethrone the Olympic champion.

Albans collected his largest number of points in winning the 100-meter high hurdles in the good time of 14.8 seconds.

He reeled off the 100-meter event in 10.8 seconds and followed with a broad jump of 24' 3½" to take that event. In the high jump he leaped a distance of 6'-3¼" for a first-place tie with Mondschein.

The summaries for the two Tar Heels are as follows:

100-meter dash—Albans (1) 10.8, 902 points; Simmons (12) 11.5, 710 points.

Broad jump—Albans (1) 23' 3½", 815 points; Simons (7) 21' 8", 700 points.

Highjump—Albans (tie for 1st) 6' 3½", 922 points; Simmons (11) 5' 8½", 716 points.

400-meter dash—Simmons (10) 53.5, 698 points; Albans (12) 54.3, 685 points.

Shot put—Simmons (4) 41' 5", 679 points; Albans (8) 38' 4", 592 points.

100-meter high hurdles—Albans (1) 14.8, 964; Simmons 15.5, 929 points.

Pole vault—Albans (5) 11' 6", 696 points; Simmons (15) 11', 640 points.

Javelin throw—Simmons (2) 175' 5 3-8", 641 points; Albans (7) 144' 5 1-8", 481 points.

1500-meter run—Simmons (15) 5.26.4, 267 points; Albans (17) 5:41.5, 207 points.

Discuss throw—Simmons (8) 117' 3 1-8", 590 points; Albans (12) 106' 5¾", 501 points.

Football Tickets

According to the latest word from the Woollen Gymnasium ticket office, there is still a limited supply of season football tickets on sale to the general public.

Applications are still being accepted for the Notre Dame and Duke games, as well as several of next fall's home games. Student tickets for the Notre Dame tilt at New York's Yankee Stadium will go on sale September 26. A special card section will be reserved for Tar Heel studetns.

Intramural Events Enter Final Week Of First Session

The local Intramural program entered its final stages this week, with the horseshoe championships decided, the tennis tournament slated to end in the next few days, and regular softball competition closing out today.

Red Gerringer and F. S. English met in the finals of the horseshoe tourney, with Gerringer emerging as the winner of the campus singles title.

Final playoffs to determine the campus softball champions will start on Monday, with the top teams in each of the three leagues taking part in a single elimination series.

The league leaders in all three circuits are still unbeaten. The Mangum nine rules the roost in League 1. The dormitory boys have compiled a record of five wins and no losses and stand a good chance of going all the way with an untarnished record.

The potent Pi Kappa Alpha team is out in front of the pack in the league 2 race with a 5 and 0 record, while the Sigma Nu nine is in second place with four wins coupled with one defeat.

The Phi Gams and the Zetes have been waging a battle royal for top honors in the third of the three loops, with the Zeta Psi aggregation gaining the upper hand when a spirited Sigma Chi outfit dumped the Fijis, 9-8, on Monday. The league title will probably be decided by this afternoon's games between the unbeaten Zeta team and the once-beaten Phi Gams.

A representative of each of the top three teams should be on hand this afternoon at 5:30 in room 311, Woollen Gym to discuss plans and make draws for next week's playoffs.

SPORTS SHORTS

BOBBY WEANT, hard hitting blocking back on Carolina's varsity football teams for the past three years, has accepted a position as head coach at Kannapolis' Cannon High School. . . . ED LAMB, right fielder on this spring's varsity nine, and KENNY BLACK, former Tar Heel outfielder, are playing for Elizabeth City in the fast semi-pro Albemarle League. . . . Another Carolina baseballer, SID VARNEY, is batting in the cleanup position for Goldsboro of the class D Coastal Plain League. . . . Chapel Hill's American Legion baseball team is in a deadlock with Durham for top place in the Area 1, League 1 standings. The locals, who are coached by Bill Grice, have a 6-3 record. . . . NEWTON H. HENRY, who was assistant coach at Chapel Hill High last year has been named head football coach at Thomasville High School. . . . Tar Heel fans have been quick in catching on to Tar Heel publisher ORVILLE CAMPBELL'S latest tune. "All The Way, Choo Choo." Talented Hank Beebe, a Sigma Chi, contributed the music for the number, which describes the talents of one Charles Justice on the gridiron. Recording is by the Sigma Chi sextette. . . . More coaching notes: BILL CRUTCHFIELD, an assistant coach on last year's Carolina football team, has been named head football and basketball mentor at Atlantic Christian College in Wilson. Named to assist Crutchfield in the fall and winter sports is BOB REYNOLDS, reserve blocking back on the 1948 Tar Heel grid machine.

Harvie Ward is the new National Intercollegiate Golf champion.

Ward won the title last Sunday afternoon at Ames, Ia. when he defeated Morris Williams of Texas, 5 and 4 in the 36 hole finals match after the pair had completed the first 18 holes all even.

At the start of the afternoon round, Williams went two holes up in the first three before Ward grabbed three in a row to lead 1-up. After that, the Texan tied the match once more only to have Ward take the lead with a birdie on the 26th, and then add four more holes in a row to close the match out 5 and 4 on the 32nd hole.

Williams' putting went all to pieces at the end under the pressure of the never-easing Ward, who played through the finals as if he were playing for pleasure. Ward's previous tournament experience and all-round steady play was the difference.

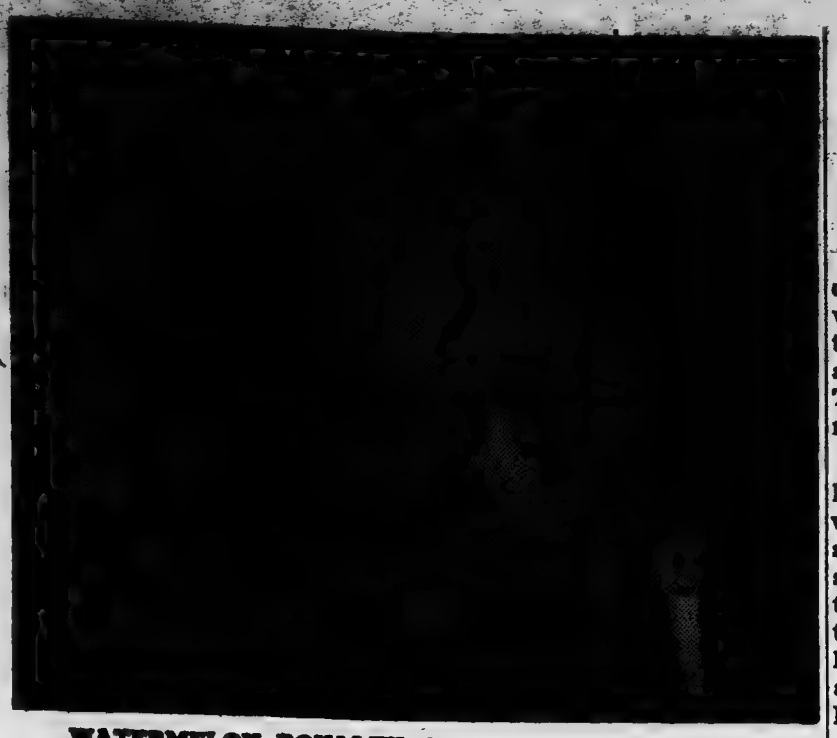
Ward became the second Tar Heel ever to win a National Championship. Jack Milne won the other in 1947 when he darkhorsed it through a Michigan snow storm to win the National Collegiate Cross Country title.

Ward started the match to the title after finishing third in the two qualifying rounds. He took an easy win on Wednesday, added a double victory on Thursday, and then defeated LSU's Gardner Dickinson, last year's co-medalist, to move to the semi-finals.

In the round of four, Ward met and soundly trounced, 4 and 3, Tommy Veech of Notre Dame, who had previously eliminated Arnold Palmer of Wake Forest the medalist. That paved the way for the finals with Williams.

Ward was by far the leading light of a rather talentless tournament. Most experts placed him by himself among the college players.

The other Tar Heel who made the championship flight, Roy McKenzie, was a first round victim of Veech, who dumped the Winston Salemite, 5 and 4, with a two-under-par round.



Among the other Tar Heels, Bob Cox missed the championship group by one stroke, firing a 76 for two day's work with Fred Brooks carding 158, and Jack Brantley finishing somewhere in the 160's. That left the Tar Heels out of the money for the team title which went to North Texas State.

Ward had his toughest match in the third round against Tex Winniger of Oklahoma A&M, who carried the Tarboro lad to the 18th green before Ward won out 2-up.

Bob Seligman Scores In AAU Tournament

Bob Seligman, chief weight man on Carolina's 1949 track team, took second place in the Junior division discus throw in the National AAU championship meet held last week at Fresno, California, and went on to place seventh in the finals of the Senior competition in the same meet.

The Tar Heel trackman threw a toss of 155 feet in the Junior event but he slipped to 135 feet in the Senior competition. Seligman is the Southern Conference champion in both the discus and the shot put. He was named as the outstanding member of this year's track squad.

WATERMELON ROYALTY, in the person of Peggie Leigh Sapp, senior from Raleigh, and Dean Ernest Mackie, are here being crowned by harmonica-playing Chancellor Robert B. House. The ceremony took place at the Watermelon Festival Saturday night. The event was sponsored by the Summer Activities Council.

'Androcles And Lion' Opens For Two-Night Outdoor Run

"Androcles and the Lion," a comedy by George Bernard Shaw, will be the first summer presentation of the Carolina Playmakers and will hold sway in the Forest Theater Thursday and Friday nights of this week at 8:30.

The cast has been holding rehearsals six and seven nights a week through the first summer session to prepare for the production, spending many nights fighting the recent Chapel Hill rain. But they reportedly have enjoyed rehearsals even under the most adverse conditions due to the laughs in the comedy which they say amuse them no matter how often they hear them.

The cast of "Androcles" is one which is well-acquainted with theater work. Several members have taught dramatics at other schools or directed plays professionally or semi-professionally. Some have been radio announcers and three have done newspaper work.

The most amusing character in the play is considered to be the lion, played by Joe Stockdale of Chapel Hill, who stands six feet plus with his mane on. The title role calls for no speaking lines, although Stockdale is called upon to do quite a bit of growling and roaring. Most of his acting is pantomime, however.

Fraternity Grades Dip Below Men's Average

The scholastic average of fraternity men dropped below the all-men's average for the spring quarter, a report from the Dean of Students' office revealed yesterday.

With A equaling 1.00, B 2.00, C 3.00, D 4.00, E 5.00, F 6.00, and A (absent excused) 6.00, the all fraternity average was 3.001 and the all-men's average was 2.9514. The leading fraternity was Alpha Epsilon Pi with a 2.2908 average.

The five campus sororities came next in line, with Pi Beta Phi second, followed by Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Gamma Delta and Alpha Delta Pi. The next fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon, with Pi Lambda Phi, Delta Psi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, and Chi Phi in eight through 11th place.

Zeta Beta Tau came in 12th, followedby Chi Psi, Sigma Nu, Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Chi, Lambda Chi Alpha, Alpha Tau Omega, Pi Kappa Phi, Tau Epsilon Phi, Phi Delta Theta, Kappa Alpha, Beta, Theta Pi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and Pi Kappa Alpha.

Bringing up the rear were Kappa Sigma, Zeta Psi and Phi Kappa Sigma, which brought the low extreme down to a 3.4608 average.

The fraternity averages were computed on the basis of rosters of membership submitted by the fraternities and sororities. Both active members and pledges are included.

For the Friday cornfed affair, Arnold Wilson, of Greenwood Dance Team fame, will do the calling. Getting underway at 8:30, the dance will last until 10:30. Music will be by record.

Title Needed For New Book By Professor

Prize Is Offered By W. S. Newman

Would you like to write the title for a new book? Here's your chance to see your original title in print and to win 25 dollars.

Dr. William S. Newman, pianist and professor in the Music Department, has written a book on piano playing which is scheduled for publication by Harper and Brothers in January. Although the book is finished, Dr. Newman still has not been able to submit an acceptable title for it.

With the deadline only two weeks away, Dr. Newman is offering a prize of 25 dollars to the person who submits a title that can and will be used.

Ideas for titles have been turned in to the author by the dozen, but so far none of them has proved acceptable to the publishers.

Suggested titles should convey the idea that the book promotes efficiency and good musicianship. Titles may be turned in to Dr. Newman in 209 Hill Hall.

Graham Speaks At Centennial

Senator Frank P. Graham, speaking at the Watuaga County Centennial in Boone last Friday, asserted that it would be tragic for the present Congress not to pass a federal aid to education bill.

He added an appeal for passage of the bill as a tribute to Dr. B. B. Doughtery, president of Appalachian Teachers College at Boone. He praised the president's efforts in getting equalized education in North Carolina.

The Senator especially urged the passage of the Senate bill, a modification of a house subcommittee measure.

'Invasion From Mars' to End; New Show to Begin Tuesday

"Invasion from Mars," the Morehead Planetarium show which has been viewed by more than 11,000 visitors in the past three weeks, will be presented for the last times this week, at 8:30 every evening and at 3 o'clock Saturday and Sunday, Dr. Roy K. Marshall, director of the Morehead Building, announced yesterday. On Tuesday, July 19, the program will change to "Pictures in the Sky."

"As our states are named divisions of our country, the constellations are named areas of the sky," Dr. Marshall commented on the new show. "Ancient races and tribes long dead and all but forgotten put their heroes and the creatures of the field and the air among the stars, by naming areas for the lion, for the eagle and for Orion and Hercules. Heroines are there, as well, and Andromeda plays her part well as the damsel in distress, to be rescued from the sea monster by the hero Perseus.

Colossal Dud

The student opposition committee to Harold Epps, North Carolina College Negro who wishes to enter the University Law School, turned out to be a colossal dud Tuesday night when only two of its members showed up for a called meeting—Temporary Chairman Bob Dunnegan of Winston-Salem and Publicity Chairman Bob Hart of Snow Hill.

Also present at the three-minute meeting were:

1. One non-student who said he was against Epps.
2. Three reporters.
3. Four members of the "Non-Partisan Committee for Harold Epps," which will meet Friday night at 8 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

Extra Plumbing Is Useful

Girls In C Dorm 'Just Love It' There

By Glenn Harden

The girls who have been living in Kenan, McIver, Smith, and "C" dormitories are going to have to move out and into other dorms for the second six weeks, due to the usual dropping off in registration between terms.

Nobody seems to mind, however, except for those of the 151 girls in "C" who will remain for the second term. They just love it over there.

Miss Helen B. Stuart, hostess, explained that it was just "so lovely and convenient to everything." Miss Doucette Cherbonnier, science teacher from New Orleans, agreed, saying that it was so handy to the pool, the tennis courts, Lenoir, the Monogram Club and the men's dormitories. Apparently the men in "A" and "B" dorms have contributed to the fun over in "C", as they have serenaded the girls several times, and "stand on the walks."

The girls in "C" have been most resourceful. "When we got there it looked like a warehouse," Miss Cherbonnier explained, "but Miss Stuart helped us fix it up. After the carpeted floors, soft lamps, and phones-in-every-room at Wisconsin, where I spent my undergraduate days, "C's" concrete floors were depressing."

The lack of bathtubs turned out to an insoluble problem, but they don't mind, they said bravely, "C" being a new dorm, "the plumbing is most satisfactory, really," one of the girls explained. "Some of it was shocking at first, but we soon got used to that."

Asked if they had found any use for the extra plumbing, the girls said only that they were handy for propping their feet on, ("a perfect height") when they were shaving their legs, unlike the resourceful girls of Graham and Aycock last summer, who used them for rinsing, and giving illegal pets water in.

The girls in "C" have managed three socials, one a breakfast "with not a hot-plate to our names," a hot dog roast behind the dorm, and a tea dance in Graham Memorial for the girls and their dates.

They like it, and they don't want to move out!

All students who are interested in working on the newspaper during the second session are invited to a TH staff meeting on Monday, July 18, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. All old staff members are requested to be present at that meeting in Graham Memorial at the same time.

A Matter of Sincerity

The University has been getting a lot of bad publicity lately. The cause of it has been two groups, one pro and one con, organized on the question of whether Negro graduate students should be admitted to Carolina.

The con group smeared the name of the University all across the state last week when it attacked the pro group as having a Communist element in it. But that organization apparently died Tuesday evening, fortunately, when only two of its regular members showed up for a called meeting.

"The Non-Partisan Committee for Harold Epps," which meets Friday evening, may have good intentions, but anything it does at this time can only give the University bad publicity throughout the state, particularly if it allows a red element to participate in its activities.

In addition, if the group is sincere in its desire to help the Negro student Epps enter the University, it must realize that it is also hurting him by the publicity it receives. The wisest thing for the pro-Epps group to do, if it is sincere, is to disband, and let the matter take its natural course through the courts of the land.

Not So Dull, After All

Most students here for the first summer session had one thing on their minds when they began classes: "What a dull summer this is going to be!'

But it wasn't such a dull first session after all, and the credit for keeping it lively goes to the Y-directed Summer Activities Council and Graham Memorial. Bob Williams of the Council, Director Bob Watson of Graham Memorial, and many others should receive the whole-hearted thanks of the campus for the many activities they sponsored such as the square dances, round dances, miscellaneous entertainment, and the tremendously successful First Annual Carolina Watermelon Festival held last Saturday evening.

Chapin Is New Professor

The appointment of F. Stuart Chapin, Jr., of Greensboro, to the position of associate professor in the Department of City and Regional Planning was announced here this week by Chancellor Robert B. House.

While at MIT he served as research assistant in the Department of City and Regional Planning.

For a number of years he was associated with the Tennessee Valley Authority as community planner and in the summer of 1947 he went to Greensboro as director of city planning.

The UVA will present a series of weekly programs featuring campus entertainers and a quiz show.

At the meeting of the UVA Monday night, Vestal Taylor was chosen to head the organization for the second session in the absence of Charlie Foley, President. Taylor will be assisted by Mark Barker, who will be in charge of entertainment. The other officers and board members will return to serve during the second session.

Pi Kappa Alpha Tops Mangum For Campus Softball Crown

Pi Kappa Alpha's unbeaten softball team became the new campus Intramurals champions Tuesday afternoon when they shut out Mangum dormitory, 3-0, in the finals of the championship play off series.

With the crowning of the softball winners, the Intramural program for the first summer school session came to a close, competition having been held in four sports during the first half of the summer. The mural department, headed by Coach Walter Rabb and Gales Perry, plans to carry on the same type of program during the second session.

The PiKA nine had things pretty much its way in the championship tilt, with Casper Lamb hurling two-hit ball for the winners. Mangum pitcher Callaha turned in a nice job on the mound giving up only five hits, but five errors by his teammates proved to be costly.

The PiKAs, champions of League 2, drew a bye in the first round of the three-team playoffs, while Mangum outlasted a strong Zeta Psi nine in a 13-inning duel to take a 6-4 win and advance to the finals.

Heath Alexander made a clean sweep of honors in the tennis open division, winning the singles title and combining with Fenno McGinty for the open doubles championship. The novice singles and doubles winners were decided Wednesday afternoon.

Bob Stockton and Marshall Spears of the law school captured the horseshoe doubles crown, while Red Gerringer came out on top in the singles division.

In the bait casting contest Coach Walter Rabb was the winner, with Fletcher McLane taking the runner-up position.

Franz E. Ross, director of the local fencing club, has announced that the organization will discontinue its meetings until Monday, July 25, when the fencers will resume their custom of meeting twice a week, on Mondays and Wednesdays.

Seixas, Taylor Win

Victor Seixas of Tar Heel tennis fame broke into the win column again over the weekend when he combined forces with Herb Flam of Los Angeles to win the Colorado Open tennis doubles championship.

Seixas and Flam defeated Fred Kovaleski of Detroit and William and Mary and Sam Match of San Francisco, 6-3, 8-10, 6-2, 6-2, in the final match for the title. Kovaleski previously topped the Carolina star, 6-4, 6-3, in the quarterfinals of the singles tourney.

Another Carolina netter, Clark Taylor, teamed up with Mrs. R. L. Jones of New Haven, Conn., for the mixed doubles crown. They defeated Wilma Smith and Art Larsen, 3-6, 6-0, 6-2, in the final round.

Harvie Ward Back On Tourney Trail After Nationals

Harvie Ward was in town last week, wearing a National Championship smile.

The Tarboro Tartar was sporting a sun tan along with his newest golf honor—the Intercollegiate golf title, the former something he had picked up after a week at Nags' Head with the latter the result of a week in Ames, Iowa.

Ward confessed he hadn't touched a club in a week, not since the NCAA tournament. But the next day, he remarked, it was back to the tournaments. What he was going back to was the Carolina Amateurs which is being played this week in Fayetteville.

After that, Ward will fly to Knoxville to join teammate Bob Cox for play in the Colonial Invitation there.

Then comes qualifying time for the National Amateur with Ward attempting to make the grade in Carolinas' qualifying at the Mimosa Course in Morganton. From there the road leads to Oak Hill at Buffalo and National Am honors.

Ward remarked the collegiate field hadn't been as fast this year as it was last. His putting game was not at its peak for the tournament, though he admitted to be hitting the ball well and as usual, not taking the game too seriously.

That seemed to be the secret to winning golf played the Ward way.

Varney Named On All-American Baseball Outfit

Another Tar Heel has gained All-American honors. The latest Carolina representative to receive national recognition is slugging Sid Varney, who was picked for the second string catcher's berth on the first All-American baseball team selected this week by the American Association of College Baseball Coaches.

Varney was one of the leading hitters in the Big Four last spring, and was slated to co-captain next year's nine before he signed a professional contract with Greenville of the Coastal Plain League.

The Tar Heel catcher also made a name for himself as a starting guard on Carolina's powerful grid machines of the past three seasons, using up his eligibility in that sport last year.

Wake Forest's NCAA runner-up club put two infielders, Gene Hooks and Charlie Teague, on the first team, and Deac hurler Dick Vander Clute made the second team of the all-star aggregation with Varney.

Polio Hits Two Times In Orange

Father of Victim Is UNC Employe; Both 2 Years Old

In reporting the appearance of two cases of polio in Orange County, Dr. O. David Garvin, district health officer, asked citizens of this area to maintain a calm and sensible attitude toward the outbreak and, at the same time take the necessary precautions against the spread of the disease.

James Dixon, 2-year-old son of University employe Clarence Dixon of Chapel Hill, Route 2, and Judith Strowd, 2, daughter of E. N. Strowd of Chapel Hill, are the two cases reported. Both are undergoing treatment at Watts Hospital in Durham and it is reported that neither of the children are crippled, and that no complications have appeared in either case.

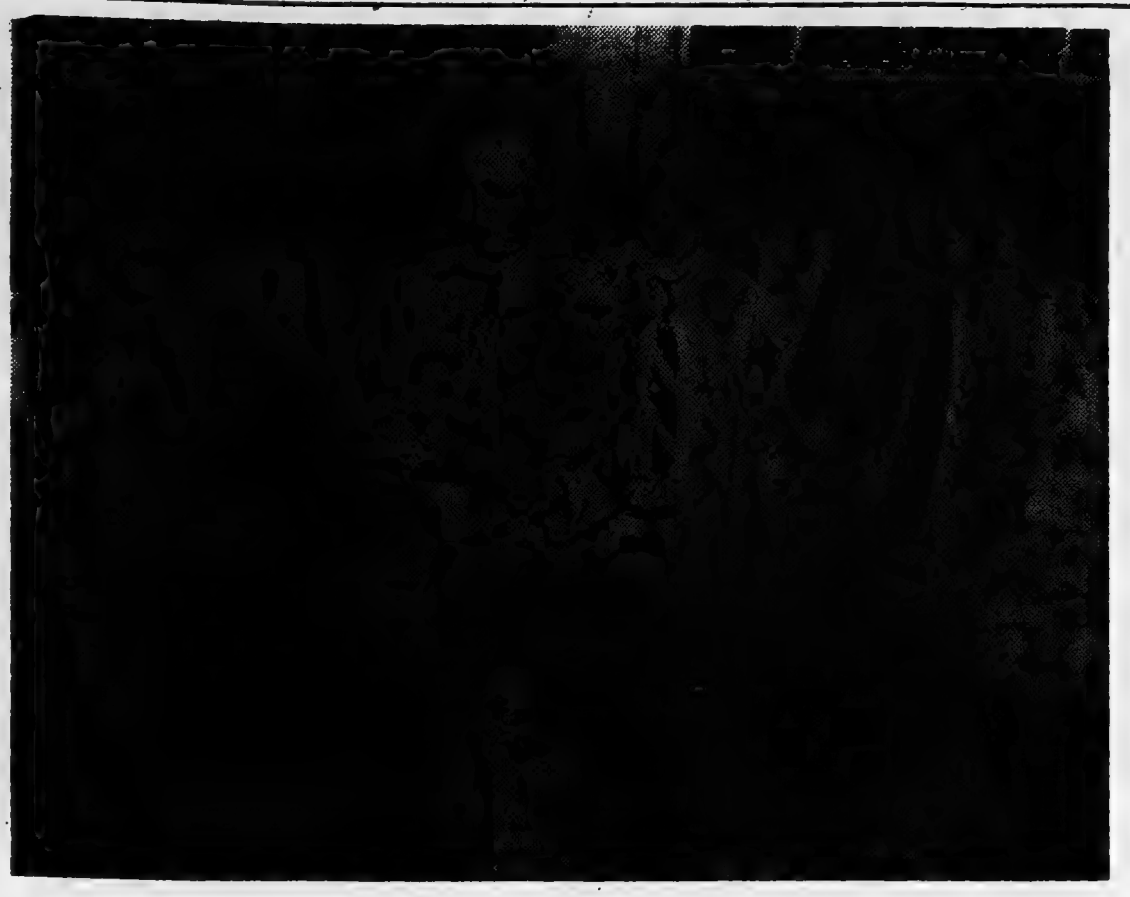
Garvin said that the outbreak "was not unexpected," but added that in both cases the attack was so mild that had the old type diagnosis been used, the illnesses would probably not have been recognized for what they were. "In the past," he stated, "a diagnosis for polio had to await paralysis."

During the month of June, 1948, 295 cases were discovered in North Carolina, but for the same month this year only nine have been reported. So far this year Durham, Chatham, Caswell and Person Counties have had no known cases of polio. The other county bordering on Orange—Alamance—has reported a single case.

Last year's totals for the entire state showed that the number of polio occurances declined after July.

Dr. Garvin requested that citizens of the county avoid chills and fatigue, keep clean, and stay away from polluted water. He also pointed out that the danger of picking up polio was increased by traveling.

Experimental Plays Scheduled Thursday



An experimental bill of three original plays will be presented in the Playmaker Theater starting at 7:30 on Thursday evening this week. The three plays which will be given are "False To Any Man" by Bill Hardy; "The Prisoner" by Alec W. Finlayson; and "Turkey In The Thirties" by Joe Stockdale. As has been the custom in the past there will be no admission charge for the experimental productions.

The experimental productions are under the general supervision of Kai Jurgenson. Dan Hughes and Ed Fitzpatrick are handling the lighting. An audience discussion of the three plays will take place following the presentation of the third play of the evening.

Enrollment

The enrollment for the second session of summer school is approximately 3,400 students, Summer Sessions Director Guy Phillips' office announced Wednesday.

The total enrollment for second session last summer was 3,502. During the first session this summer, 4,313 students were enrolled.

DR. GREGORY L. PAINE, English professor who recently retired after 25 years of teaching here, is shown above as he was honored at a dinner party at the home of Dr. Raymond Adams when he was presented with a special volume of a story by James Fenimore Coper which was published in Dr. Paine's honor with funds raised by his students and collegues. Pictured above are, left to right, Dr. George F. Horner, Dr. Clifford P. Lyons, Dr. Paine, Dr. George Coffman, Dr. Adams, and Chancellor R. B. House. The square dance will be Friday night in the Y court. The festivities will begin at 8:30 and everyone is urged to attend, Arnold Wilson will do the calling.

"Music Under the Stars' has been scheduled for 7:30 Sunday night in front of Graham Memorial, so bring your blankets and your best girls.

The Rendezvous Room floor show is Saturday evening.

Photos Being Featured In Display At Library

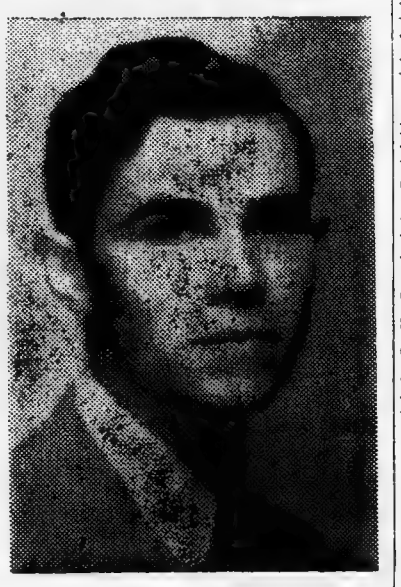
The Library is exhibiting until Monday the 150 news, sports and feature photographs selected as best-of-show in the sixth annual "News Pictures of the Year" competition.

The competition, which is jointly sponsored by the Encyclopedia Britannica Book of the Year and the University of Missouri School of Journalism, is believed to be the largest and most inclusive of its kind, and serves as a forum wherein news photographers of the world evaluate their year's work, and honor and reward the best examples of it.

The pictures on display are included in the annual book of the Missouri-Britannica competition, "The Great Pictures — 1949."

Featured in the exhibition are the top-prize winners in the sixth annual competition which was judged in five categories: picture portfolies; picture sequences; news, sports and feature photographs.

Highest award in the show, and the title of "News Photographer of the year," went to Barney Cowherd of the Courier-Journal and Louisville Times.



Willie Page, Dover Farmboy, Granted Daniels Scholarship

Willie E. Page, Jr., of Dover, has been awarded the first Josephus Daniels Scholarship, established by the late distinguished editor and publisher and former Secretary of the Navy and Ambassador to Mexico, a member of the University class of 1885.

The award under each scholarship provides $2,000 covering a four-year tenure, "subject to maintenance of high standing as a student and as a citizen in the University." Payments of $500 are to be made annually.

Young Page, whose selection was based on financial need, high scholastic rank, character, qualities of leadership, extra-curricular achievements, and promise of future distinction, graduated from the Grainger High School in Kinston last June with an excellent record.

French Award Is Given Here By Instructor

A scholarship valued at $150 a year has been endowed by Edward T. Draper-Savage, an instructor in French at the University. The scholarship, which is to be administered by the French House, is a memorial to the professor's mother, Effie Draper-Savage.

In a letter to Hugo Giduz, director of the French House, Mr. Draper-Savage said that it is his desire that the scholarship be given to "that student who, in the opinion of a committee named by you, will have shown, at the completion of the course, an outstanding interest in France, her culture and civilization, and a corresponding ability and prom- French spoken language, as well ise in his, or her, mastery of the as of French literature."

The first award of the scholarship was made to Johnny L. Young, a graduate student from Salisbury. Young received the award at the annual French House dinner celebrating Bastille Day. Guest speaker for the occasion was Jean Pierre Benard, first secretary of the French Embassy in Washington.

Botto Runs SG Board This Term

Appointments Go To Sanford, Allen For Two Boards

Larry Botto of Brandenton, Fla., took over the reins of student government at the beginning of the second session of summer school as acting president of the student body.

Botto succeeds John Sanders of Four Oaks, who held the post during the first half of the summer. Bill Mackie of Chapel Hill, now on a Navy cruise, was elected president last spring to hold office for a year, but could not be in school this summer.

Other appointments announced were Patricia Denning Sanford, appointed to the Government and Appeal Board, and Betty Allen, who fills a vacancy on the Women's Honor Council. The new officials were approved by the Government and Appeal Board, headed by the acting president.

Orientation of 22 new men students entering in the second session was conducted under the direction of Charles McRae, who discussed student government, the Honor and Campus Codes, and the Carolina way of life with the new men. The six men who were entering college for the first time were given special discussion sessions.

At a summary meeting, the students were welcomed by Botto and were given information on the Honor and Campus Codes by Men's Honor Council Chairman Roy Holsten. All the new students signed the Code pledges.

Orientation of new coeds was chiefly handled at the dormitory level in house meetings. The Codes and the House Privileges Board Visiting Agreement was explained in those meetings.

A final orientation meeting was held Tuesday night. Dean of Men Bill Friday, Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael, Women's Council Chairman Gayle Hancock, and Botto spoke at the meeting.

Grail Will Conduct Ring Sale Tuesday

Class rings will be on sale in the YMCA Building lobby next Tuesday afternoon, from 2 until 4 o'clock, under the sponsorship of the Grail, men's honorary organization.

Grail member Herb Yates said that a Grail member would be on duty between those hours to take orders from any student wishing to buy a ring.

Trimmed Down

GREENSBORO, July 27—The special committee of the Greater University Board of Trustees met here and trimmed down a 170-name list of candidates for the presidency of the University.

Chairman Victor S. Bryant of Durham refused to comment on how many candidates were stricken from the list. He said, however, it probably will be "many weeks" before the committee narrows the field down to the final recommendation, which will be presented to the full Board of Trustees.

Music to Our Ears

Senator Frank Porter Graham got to his feet in the Senate last week and was recognized by Vice-President Barkley. He cleared his throat and said, "This is the first time I have opened my mouth in the Senate except to answer the roll call." And then Frank Graham launched into his maiden speech on the floor of the upper house, a speech which Republican Senator Tobey of New Hampshire called "one of the finest addresses I have been privileged to hear on the floor."

Dr. Frank told the Senate in no uncertain terms that the Atlantic Pact, which was passed by an overwhelming vote the next day, does not undermine the United Nations.

Turning to the failure of hopes for peace, Dr. Frank told his Senate colleagues that Communist dictatorship has organized "monstrous aggressions and subversions against the freedom and dignity of the peoples of both the east and west." The junior senator from North Carolina and former president of the Greater University accused the Soviet Union of crushing civil liberties, obstructing the United Nations, liquidating opposition, and holding "more millions of dissenters, political prisoners and laborers in concentration camps and in enforced bondage in 1949 than there were slaves in the Southern states in 1861."

If Dr. Frank continues to take such inspiring stands and makes his views known not only to the Senate but to the people of North Carolina, he cannot help but be retained in his Senate seat when elections roll around next year.

'Professional Agitators'

"Professional agitators" was the label Governor Kerr Scott recently tacked on a group of people who call themselves the "Daniels Defense Committee" and have been stirring up a commotion over a trial in Greenville in which two Negroes were sentenced to die for the murder of a white taxicab driver. The label, as far as we can find out, is quite appropriate.

If any persons in Chapel Hill have been foolish enough to get mixed up in what is obviously a red-front committee whose sole purpose is to cause trouble as "professional agitators," then let us give them solemn warning: We know what the "Daniels Defense Committee" is; nobody is being fooled by their "we-stand-for-justice" attitude. They stand for nothing but trouble in North Carolina.

DR. A. T. MILLER of the University Medical School told the Chapel Hill Rotary Club the other day that most people don't drink enough water, even when they quench their thirst. Since this is a college town, obvious conclusions might be drawn from that remark, but Dr. Miller did not specify just what people do drink a lot of.

ONE OF THE BEST remarks we heard in class all summer turned up in Dr. Cheek's English class right at the end of last session. Dr. Cheek told his students that all they needed to bring for the exam was "a quiz book, pencil, and above all a goodly amount of intelligence." The proverbial voice from the back of the room cracked, "Does that come on the GI Bill?"

Note to the Teachers

By Bill Buchan

Summer school at the University is an excellent opportunity for hundreds of teachers in North Carolina to find out the true score about Chapel Hill, the communists (with a little "c"), et cetra, et cetra.

Frankly, good people, we ain't as bad as folks and some news stories may make you think we are. Here is your chance to find out for sure. Since you have been here (if you were here the first session), you've discovered that the reds aren't as strong as some of our far-right citizens think they are. For instance, in the Pro-Epps gang, an effort to "March on the Governor," proposed by Marxist-Leninist comrade Bill Robertson was voted out unanimously, or almost. And too, the efforts of the Anti-Epps gang (which just might be composed of far-rights whom we fear here as much as Hans and his buddies) have been an encouraging flop.

Stick around children, and find out what goes on in this supposedly explosive town of Chapel Hill. Find out for yourselves what the average student thinks about the situation. (His opinion is never played up for the public because he usually doesn't discuss it except in the nearest beer joint. But his opinion is the one that counts.) He is the one, ladies and gentlemen, who discounts the stories and rumors, mostly rumors, in his hometown about communist-infested Chapel Hill.

Get out on your own, now that you are here, and find out what the score really is. Then, when you go back to your classrooms and your towns, you can give an intelligent answer about the "problem" of Chapel Hill. It's about time someone did, and you're just the people to do it.

Texas Rumor Mill:

Rainey Next President Of UNC?

By Mark Batterson
Associate Editor, The Summer Texan

AUSTIN, Texas, July 27—Rumor says that Homer P. Rainey, ex-president of the University of Texas, is being strongly considered for the presidency of the University of North Carolina.

Rumors are as common as shirt sales these days, but when you go into this one, which as all good rumors should, comes from a pretty good source, it sounds more and more plausible.

The Tar Heel school can use a president; it hasn't had a permanent one since Dr. Frank Porter Graham got a surprise nod to the U. S. Senate last April, and colleges always like to have that sort of thing squared away by the time frost starts gathering on the pumpkins and the fall term begins.

University presidents like Dr. Graham, one of the most famous of the South's liberal leaders, aren't always easy to find. Sometimes you have to travel as far as Missouri, where as it happens, Dr. Rainey is president of Stephens College.

The University of North Carolina is one of the most liberal state institutions in the confines of Dixieland. While he was president of North Carolina, for instance, Dr. Graham served on President Harry Truman's Commission on Civil Rights, and his work was applauded by his school's Board of Trustees. It was partly because of this work that Governor Kerr Scott appointed him to the Senate.

So since the Board of Trustees was apparently satisfied with their liberal president, it follows that they will want a successor who is liberal, a sound administrator, and who will add some glitter to the school's name.

It also follows that Dr. Rainey can do this and more. He was only 42 when he became president here, which makes him a relatively young 52 now.

If anyone thinks that being fired by the University Board of Regents hurt Dr. Rainey academically, he's mistaken. If it had, he wouldn't have been appointed to head a college like Stephens, another liberal institution famous for its progressive education. And when 5,000 students, the American Association of University Professors, plus a large number of faculty members and ex-students, protest against the firing of a president, you can hardly say that he leaves his post in disgrace.

Dr. Rainey was never under fire here at the University for his capabilities as an administrator, but only for the ideas he presented. No one can deny the title of leader to a man who managed to poll 350,000 votes for governor in a state like Texas, where the word "liberal" is often mistaken for a three-letter primary color.

If Dr. Rainey's ideas agree with those wanted at the University of North Carolina, he would probably be one of the best choices their Board of Trustees could make. From what we've seen and heard, his ideas apparently fit into this category.

Anyway, we'll probably know within the next few weeks.

Big Mural Program Planned Seixas On Comeback Trail

Glamour guy Vic Seixas, after suffering in the throes of a semi-serious slump for a number of weeks, has donned glasses and returned to the ranks of the nation's top tennis stars.

Seixas slumped badly toward the end of the recent collegiate season, dropping his Southern Conference singles championship to lightly-regarded Fred Kovaleski of William and Mary.

The gremlins had the handsome Philly racqueteer again when he journeyed to Texas during the latter part of June to participate in the NCAA tourney. Entering the meet as odds-on favorite to cop the singles crown, Seixas again bowed to the up-Seixas bowed out in the quarter-finals.

Specs Big Help

It was soon after this, however, that the big guy began working out on the courts with the aid of specs. They turned the trick for him and his game zoomed like a thermometer on a July day.

Then came his big test in the National Clay Courts Tennis Tourney at Chicago. Vic entered the tourney seeded third behind Pancho Gonzales and Frankie Parker, the top two net stars in the nation, and blasted his way into the semi-finals to live up to his ranking.

Vic eased past Dick Kilner, Chicago, Tom Molloy, New Orleans, and Jack Sunderland, Indianapolis, in the early rounds and then gained revenge by whipping Kovaleski in the quarter-finals. Moving into the semi-final round, the ex-Carolina captain bowed to red-hot Gonzales who went on to take the title from Frankie Parker, five-time National champ.

Captures Doubles

Seixas and Sam Match of Los Angeles teamed to knock off Gonzales and Hugh Stewart, Pasadena, in the doubles finals in five hectic sets.

Returning to his native Pennsylvania, Seixas turned on the steam in the annual Pennsylvania State Men's Lawn Tennis Championships to defeat Calhoun Dickson, Tampa, Fla., in the first round. Then, playing against Jack Tuero, National Collegiate champion from Tulane, he blasted his way into the finals with an easy two-set victory.

Gonzales again stood in Seixas' way to the crown, however, and lost little time in exerting his jinx over the lanky Tar Heel alumnus to win the title.

Rumors that versatile BILL ALBANS, Carolina's all-round freshman track star, is planning to withdraw from Chapelina, get married, and head for the University of California are being denied by Tar Heel athletic officials. Electricians Win

Chapel Hill's Electric Construction Company softball team successfully defended its North Central District championship by stopping the Deaconeers of Wake Forest, 8-1, in the finals of the district playoffs in Durham Tuesday night.

Led by Gordon (Choo) Reagen, who pitched five-hit ball, the locals capitalized on some bad defensive play by the Deaconeers and some timely hitting for five runs in the first inning, after the losers had scored their only run.

Tuesday night's victory insured the Electricians of a spot in the state tournament to be held in Canton next month.

Tar Heel Ace Wins in CGA, Loses to Cox

After winning the Carolinas Golf Association tournament at Fayetteville last week without too much trouble, Tar Heel golfer Harvie Ward Jr. was upset by Tar Heel golfer Bob Cox, 5 and 4, in the quarterfinals of the Memphis, Tenn., Colonial Country Club's big amateur tournament Saturday.

Cox, who is a teammate of Ward's on the Carolina links team, accounted for the major surprise of the Memphis tourney by ousting the favored Ward, who recently won the National Inter-Collegiate golf crown.

However, Harvie came through as expected in the CGA meet in Fayetteville, trouncing Malcolm McLean of Davidson, 7 and 6, in the finals.

The Tarboro linksman had his toughest battle in the opening round of the CGA tourney, before topping R. A. Harris of Wake Forest, 1-up, on the nineteenth hole. Then, in the next two rounds, the Carolina ace had easy going, stopping Carlton Dixon of Raleigh, 5 and 4, and Harry Welch of Salisbury, 3 and 2.

In the semi-finals, Ward disposed of P. J. Boatwright of Spartinsburg, S. C., 4 and 3. Boatwright was 4-up on the 21st hole, Ward rallied to take the match on the 33rd.

McLean, Ward's opponent in the final round, reached that spot by a streak of startling upsets, including a victory over Avery Beck of Raleigh.

Ward heads the list of outstanding amateurs from the two Carolinas expected to enter qualifying play for the National Amateur golf tournament at Morganton on August 16. The qualifiers will advance to the finals beginning August 29 at Pittsford, N.Y.

UNC Soccer Schedule Lists Ten Matches

An ambitious, ten-match varsity soccer schedule for Carolina's 1949 team has been released by Athletic Director R. A. Fetzer, with Coach Marvin Allen's booters slated to open their season against Navy, at Annapolis, on October 12.

Last year's Tar Heel team had a record of seven victories, two ties, and one loss.

Intramurals

Coach Walter Rabb and Gales Perry of Carolina's Intramural department are completing plans for an extensive Intramural program for those students fortunate enough to be attending the second session of summer school.

Softball, tennis, horseshoes, and bait casting have already been scheduled, with the details of a golf pitching contest to be announced later.

Today is the last day softball teams may be entered in mural competition, with a meeting of softball managers scheduled for tonight at 7:45 in room 304, Woollen Gym. A number of dormitory and fraternity teams are expected to take part in the race for campus honors. The PiKA nine took the crown in the first session, winning out over Mangum Dormitory and Zeta Psi fraternity in the championship playoffs.

Entries in the horseshoe tournament close on Monday, August 1, with play beginning the following Wednesday. Both doubles and singles divisions will be held.

Tennis entries will close on August 1, also, with play starting on Thursday. Singles and doubles play will be held in both open and novice divisions.

A bait casting contest is on tab for Thursday, August 18, in Kessing Pool, with everyone eligible to compete.

Although plans for the golf pitching contest have not been announced, it should attract a great deal of interest. It is the only one of this session's sports that was not offered last session.

The fencing club is meeting at its regular time—7:30—on Mondays and Wednesdays in Woollen gym, with all interested persons, whether experienced or not invited to attend.

Last, but not least, the Intramural office and Graham Memorial are co-sponsoring dancing classes Monday and Wednesday nights from 7:30-9:30 in Woollen Gym. The classes are free and are open to everyone.

Coaching School Now In Session

The 23rd annual University of North Carolina coaching school got under way Monday, with about 100 high school and college coaches from a number of states registering for the week-long program of football, basketball, baseball, and track taught by Carolina's experienced coaching staff.

Basketball Coach Tom Scott, director of this year's school, is ably assisted by Coaches Carl Snavely, Bunn Hearn, Walter Rabb, Dale Ranson, and others on the Tar Heel coaching staff.

Football held the spotlight for the first three days, with Coach Snavely conducting two classes daily in that sport. Baseball Coaches Bunn Hearn and Walter Rabb took over Monday afternoon for a session on baseball.

A barbecue was held at Brady's Monday night, and the entertainment was continued Tuesday with a banquet at the Carolina Inn.

Basketball will feature the discussions today and tomorrow, with Tom Scott in charge of the classes, Track, athletic injuries, movies, and equipment have also been the subjects of lectures during the school.

The grand prize winner does not have to be a University student in order to collect the Tar Heel bonus; the $1,000 cash award will be given by this newspaper to any person who is one of its readers, it was pointed out.

Plans for the building, to adjoin the University Medical School, were drawn up by the architectural firms of Northrup and O'Brien of Winston-Salem and Schmidt, Garden and Erickson of Chicago. Bids will be received at Gerrard Hall on the afternoon of September 2. Work is expected to begin as soon as contracts are signed. The building will permit expansion of the Med School from a two-year to a four-year school as provided by the General Assembly.

Report Released By Men's Council

Chairman Roy Holsten Announces Report On Sample Cases Tried During Summer

Roy Holsten, chairman of the Men's Honor Council, Wednesday released a report on several sample cases handled by the Council this summer, along with a warning that the Honor System and the student government courts are in full operation during the summer term.

Only three of the council cases tired since June were included in the brief report, all of which were tried by the Men's Council. No summer reports have been released yet from the Women's Honor Council or the Student Government Appeal Board, headed by Acting President Larry Botto this session, and John Sanders last session.

The sample cases follow:

Case I

CHARGE: Suspected violation of the Honor Code. Professor turned in papers of two men sitting next to each other, on suspicion of collaboration.

TRIAL: First defendant denied having given or received aid during the quiz in question. Stated that it was possible for the other defendant to have seen his paper, but he did not think that was the case. The second defendant admitted having copied from the first defendant without his knowledge. Stated that he saw the paper out of the corner of his eye and obtained information without thinking about it.

VERDICT: First defendant, not guilty; second defendant, guilty.

SENTENCE: The first defendant was exonerated of all charges. The second defendant was suspended indefinitely with a minimum of one quarter with the recommendation that he be shown consideration upon application for readmission.

Case 2

CHARGE: Suspected violation of the Campus Code. Turned in by a member of the Council on suspicion of having aided a woman student in staying out of her dormitory during the night.

TRIAL: Defendant stated that upon arriving at the dorm late, the woman student expressed fear of the consequences of coming in late and wanted to remain out. Defendant stated that he did not force her to go in, but that he realized at the time that he should have.

VERDICT: Guilty.

SENTENCE: The Council severly reprimanded the defendant for his actions, which it was felt did not live up to those of a Carolina gentleman. The defendant was warned that any future action of the sort would result in severe punishment.

Case 3

CHARGE: Suspected violation of the Honor Code. Two defendants turned in by professor for possible collaboration on quiz.

TRIAL: The defendants, testifying separately, denied collaboration. They stated that they were from the same town, roomed together, studied the same notes, and generally studied the course together. Testified that it was possible to make the same mistakes on quiz papers because their information came from the same source. When the Council individually asked them questions given on the quiz (questions that had been missed and/or answered correctly by both on the quiz) each defendant answered questions exactly as he had on the quiz, with no discrepancies.

VERDICT: Not guilty.

Before the summer is over, the Tar Heel plans to run more reports from the councils, to keep the student body informed on the actions of the judiciary.

Melon Slicing, Dances Slated For Weekend

Square Dance Set On Friday Evening

A watermelon slicing, two dances and the music of the Rendezvous Room's Town Talk Trio are on this weekend's entertainment agenda.

The watermelon slicing, sponsored by the Y Summer Activities Council with the help of Graham Memorial, will start at 8:15 Friday evening in the Y Court, and will be followed immediately by a square dance at 8:30. Arnold Wilson will do the calling and Ed Norwood's band will provide the music.

On Saturday evening at 8 o'clock a dance will be held in the main lounge of Graham Memorial sponsored by graduate women. It is open to the entire campus. The Town Talk Trio will be down in the Rendezvous Room for dancing also on Saturday night.

Ehringhaus Won Honors At Carolina

Former Governor J.C.B. Ehringhaus, who died of a heart attack in Raleigh Sunday night, was an honor student and a strong participant in extracurricular activities when he was a student at the University.

Ehringhaus, who received his A.B. in 1901 and his L.L.B. in 1903, served as editor of the Tar Heel during his senior year. He was a member of the Philanthropic Assembly, Order of Gimghoul, and Delta Kappa Epsilon social fraternity.

His academic achievements placed him in Phi Beta Kappa, and he was graduated with cum laude honors.

New Brick Sidewalks Are Being Constructed

A new campus brick sidewalk extending from Franklin Street to Cameron Avenue rushed toward completion this week, and workmen prepared to start work on a second scheduled to run from the Morehead Planetarium to Battle-Vance-Pettigrew Dormitory.

The walk under construction begins at Graham Memorial on Franklin Stree, heads up past the Planetarium and Alumni Building, and ends at Cameron Avenue on the west side of Old East Dormitory.

The second walk will stretch from the Morehead Building across to BVP, also hitting Franklin Street at its end. J. S. Bennett, Director of Operations, said the walks are the fifth and sixth to be built this year.

Laid to Rest Just One Year Ago:

Dan The Dog Was Tradition

By Chuck Hauser

One year ago this week, a small funeral was held in the shady backyard of the house which stands at 412 Cameron Avenue. No friends were present, and no notice appeared in the obituary columns of the state newspapers.

But within the week everyone in Chapel Hill, in the state of North Carolina, and even farther knew that an old and trusted friend of the students had been laid away to rest. Once the word got out, the tragic news spread like wildfire—Dan the Dog, listed by the American Kennel Club as Bowler Boy's Danny, was dead, age 11 years.

The thousands upon thousands of students who knew Dan and had known him through the years didn't even know that he was a registered, pedigreed English setter. All they knew was that for years he had been king of the Chapel Hill dog colony, and had won undisputed right to attend any and all classes taught in the University and to participate in every sport offered.

He could be seen every day in a classroom sleeping on the back row, lying under a table down at Harry's, or running well ahead of Coach Dale Ranson's cross-country team in its daily practices. Dale himself once said that Dan was one of the fastest runners he had on the squad.

Even though Dan's home was the campus, he wasn't always a stay-at-home dog. Included in his travels was a four-month jaunt which ended in Charleston, S.C.

Dan became a University landmark in his time, and he is missed now just as he was when he first died, and just as he will always be as long as any of his many thousands of Tar Heel friends live on.

BOWLER BOY'S DANNY, better known as Dan the Dog, was laid to rest in Chapel Hill just one year ago this week.

Morehead Show Displays Bullets, Bombs of Space

The new Morehead Planetarium show, "Bullets and Bombs from Space," began Tuesday in the first of many showings at 8:30 each night and at 3 o'clock on Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Each year, in the second week in August, an unusual number of meteors or "shooting stars" can be seen streaking across the sky, Dr. Roy K. Marshall, director of the Planetarium, said in explaining the new show.

"These are the Perseid meteors, so-called because they appear to radiate from a point in the area of the sky called Perseus," he said. "The August meteors," Dr. Marshall continued, "are too small to survive their swift fiery flight through our atmosphere, but occasionally there are bodies of stone or iron which reach the earth's surface."

A special showing of meteorites for display during this show is being planned for an exhibit hall in the Morehead Building.

Registration

All students who wish to preregister for the fall quarter must do so next Monday or Tuesday, the registration office announced Wednesday.

All students must see their deans or advisers during those two days to get green forms filled out. No green forms will be taken by the registration office after those dates.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I can't help but comment on your editorial in the last Tar Heel regarding the Daniels Defense Committee. The article seemed to show primarily that this Committee ". . . is obviously a red-front committee whose sole purpose is to cause trouble as 'professional agitators'. . ." I agree that the Committee is somewhat agitating and that there are probably some Communists working in it. (1) But are these two facts condemnable? And are they the most important considerations? Is it more important to judge a group by whether it agitates and by who is in it, or, by what it is working for? How can you be fair in saying its sole purpose is to cause trouble, when the inside of the leaflet they put out (except for the last short paragraph) is devoted to a fairly objective story of the case, leaving little doubt that the Daniels cousins were framed? (2) Should such a case be ignored? If not, could the situation be rectified without any agitation? (3) Should Communists be persecuted for participating in such a cause, or, should the Committee be damned if Communists choose to participate?

Isn't the purpose of criticism to improve? If so, wouldn't well-balanced and just criticism be best?

Charles W. Dubs

(Ed. note: (1) Communist Hans Freistadt says that any Communist in North Carolina who is not in the Committee "is not a very good Communist."

(2) Anyone who would like to see a copy of the "objective" leaflet may do so at the Tar Heel offices in Graham Memorial.

(3) The case was appealed as soon as the verdict was handed down, the execution was stayed and the defendants were guaranteed a new trial, all without any help from the Committee.)

Doin' What Comes Natcherly:

Squirrels Set Up Shop In Phillips

By Bill Johnson

The small furry creatures known as squirrels that make a pastime of scampering hither, thither and yon about the University campus have an uncanny knack of breaking into the news just when everything else that a newspaperman would write about would be either dead, dull, or disappointing.

Usually the little animals have mistaken a live wire for a tender and appetizing morsel, thus affecting a blackout in one or more dormitories or office buildings, or they have chewed their way through some giant oak.

Most of them are content to lead a typical squirrel's life—one jump ahead of the nearest dog and as far as possible away from those two-legged members of the animal kingdom who carry books and throw rocks at them. A few, however, lead sedentary lives, collecting leaves, building nests and rearing their young.—and therein lies this story.

Several weeks ago Joseph W. Straley, a professor in the University Physics Department, entered his laboratory on the second floor of Phillips Hall and noticed that the English ivy that grows on the outside of the building was protruding through a window in rather large quantities.

Investigation showed that a pair of squirrels were pulling it in and depositing it in a cabinet near the window. When Straley opened the seldom-used cabinet he found that the small animals had recently completed a nest composed of ivy, scraps of paper and other bits of material that had been found around the lab.

The ingenius pair had even gone so far as to strip the protective covering from several pieces of laboratory glassware to add to the comfort of their new living quarters.

Curiosity got the best of Straley and he left the nest undisturbed for several days. One day last week he took another casual look into the cabinet and the mystery of the invading squirrels was solved. Instead of two there were five squirrels, the three additions having arrived during the night. According to Straley the infants were quite pink and seemingly well cared for by their parents.

The following day, Straley found the nest empty and had decided that the little family had returned to nature until he opened another cabinet, further from the window, and the two parents scooted past him. Another investigation revealed that a second nest had been constructed, perhaps in an effort to escape the admiring public.

Straley said that the new nest was unfortunately located in the midst of some important equipment and it was necessary for him to move the nest.

The next day all five of the animals had departed and a search of the surrounding roofs and trees failed to locate them. When asked if he knew why the family had moved out of the comfortable home in Phillips Hall, Straley could only answer that perhaps the squirrels, like everyone else, had found the indoors too hot.

Softball, Horsehoes, Tennis Feature Summer Mural Play

With local softballers setting the pace, the Intramural program for the second session of summer school is set to begin in earnest. Horseshoe slingers took the courts for the first time last night, and entrants in the tennis tourney will meet their first-round opponents this afternoon.

Sixteen teams divided into three leagues, are taking part in the battle for campus softball honors, The top nine in each of the leagues will engage in a "post-season" playoff series, with the winner being awarded the campus crown.

Play got under way Monday, with twelve of the teams seeing action. Steele Dormitory got off to a big start with a 25-0 win over the Grass Root nine, while the defending champion Pi Kappa Alpha aggregation was awarded a 7-0 forfeit victory over the Sig Eps.

A-Dorm was forced to rally for three runs in the eighth inning before edging the Lambda Chi outfit, 8-7, in a sea-saw encounter, and the Ags took another close tilt, topping Ruffin Dorm, 9-7. The strong town team had little trouble in posting a 10-0 victory over A-Dorm 2.

Jupiter Pluvius was the deciding factor in two games, halting the Graham-Sigma Chi tilt after 2½ innings of play with Graham out in front, 4-3, and washing out the game between the Phi Delts and Sigma Nus in the fourth frame. The Chi Delts held a 10-2 advantage when the contest was postponed.

Everyone entered in the tennis tourney should be on hand at the varsity courts this afternoon at 4 o'clock for a meeting with mural officials.

Singles and doubles competition will be held in both the open and the novice divisions for the campus championship.

Horseshoe play, which began last night, also includes singles and doubles divisions.

A golf pitching contest, something that hasn't been tried before this year, will offer a challenge to all local golfers on Thursday and Friday, August 11-12.

Franz E. Ross of the mathematics department is offering instruction in fencing to all interested persons, whether beginners or otherwise, at Monday and Wednesday night meetings of the fencing club in Woollen Gym.

The Intramural department and Graham Memorial are co-sponsoring free dancing classes every Monday and Wenesday night in Woollen. The classes are open to everyone, "stag or drag."

A bait-casting contest, slated for August 18, will top off the summer mural program.

Seixas Wins

Victor Seixas, ex-Carolina tennis star, advanced to the second round of the Eastern grass court tennis championships at Orange, New Jersey, Monday, by defeating Charles Masterson of Hicksville, N. Y., 7-9, 6-4, 6-2.

Seixas, who is third-seeded, has turned in several sterling performances in recent tournaments, losing out to National Champion Pancho Gonzales in the semi-finals of the National Clay Court tourney and again in the finals of the Pennsylvania Championship tournament.

Albans Scores For Americans Against Finland

Bill Albans, Carolina's much-heralded track star, shifted his many talents to the international scene last week, competing in two meets between American , and Scandinavian athletes, one in Oslo, Norway, and the other in Helinski, Finland.

Albans, who finished third in the American Decathlon earlier in the summer, was sixth in the fast competition against top Scandinavin stars in the "Little Olympics" held at Oslo. American champion Bob Mathias captured first place in the grueling event. The American team defeated the Scandinavin squad, 238½ points to 224½ points.

In the first day of the duel meet with Finland, the Tar Heel star managed to make a better showing, taking second in the high hurdles with a time of 15 seconds, and capturing fourth place in the broad jump with a leap of 22 feet, 9 16 inch.

Dick Ault of Missouri nosed out Albans in the highs, winning in 14.8 seconds. Herb Douglas, another American, jumped 24 feet, 2 3.8 inches to win the broad jump.

SPORTS SHORTS

CHARLIE JUSTICE, Carolina's All-American cover boy has done it again. The latest cover to be honored with his likeness is that of the annual Pic Magazine football review which hit the newsstands this week. . . . Coach TOM SCOTT, Tar Heel basketball mentor in charge of last week's coaching school, has received much praise because of the way he organized and ran the clinic. Football Coach CARL SNAVELY, who led the discussions on gridiron topics, has taken part in ten such schools this summer. . . . Kenan Stadium was the scene of the shooting of a football movie for two days last week. The production was sponsored by the Southern Football Officials' Association and dealt mostly with the mechanics of officiating. . . . HEATH ALEXANDEER, former Carolina tennis player, was a finalist in the Carolinas closed tennis tournament in Hartsville, S. C., last week. . . . The Electric Construction Company softball team of Chapel Hill, led by ART WEINER, CHARLIE THORNE, and GORDON (CHOO) REGEAN, will represent the North Central District in the State softball championship tournament in Canton. The tourney, a double elimination affair, begins on August 16. . . . . LEN SZAFARYN, Carolina's great tackle, has signed a professional contract with the Washington Redskins. He will play in the annual Chicago Tribune all-star game against the Philadelphia Eagles in August.

Married Students Urged To Get Ducats

Carolina ticket officials have urged that all married students planning to purchase season football tickets for their wives do so at once.

The season tickets entitle the wives of students to sit with their husbands in the student section at all home games. They may be obtained at the ticket office in Woollen Gym.

Applications are still being accepted from the general public for ducats for the Tar Heels' 1949 games.

Dr. Roy Marshall Says Spectacle In Sky May Be Observed Thursday

By Dr. Roy K. Marshall
Director, Morehead Planetarium

The "Tears of St. Lawrence" are beginning to fall again, as they do each year at about this time, building up to a climax which will be reached Thursday night, the day after the Feast of St. Lawrence, around midnight and after.

Technically, they are known as the Perseid meteors, but the picturesque name assigned by the Irish peasants who noted the shower of shooting stars on or near the day of the saint is likely to be appealing to many people.

A so-called "shooting" or "falling" star is not really a star at all. The average meteor is likely to be an object no larger than the small pebble that gets into your shoe so easily. It is traveling along in its path around the sun when, suddenly, it collides with the earth's atmosphere.

Its speed in its own path is anything between 19 and 25 miles per second and, if it meets the earth head-on, its speed through the atmosphere is initially anything between 37 and 43 miles per second. If it is traveling along in the same direction as the earth, its speed as it nears the earth's surface will be of the order of only five or six miles per second.

It is this high speed that causes the meteor to glow. The object itself is usually called a meteoroid. It is composed of stone or iron or a mixture of both, yet at the high speed of passage through the air it is heated to incandescence, along with a large mass of air surrounding it, and we see the brilliant streak of light among the stars.

Meteors can be seen on any clear night, especially if there is no bright moon in the sky to spread its light about. The average throughout the year is about 10 meteors per hour for a single observer. There come times, however, when there are many more meteors than this, and we then say that a meteor shower is in progress.

Each year, on August 11 or 12, we have such a shower, but this is only the maximum time; there are some meteors of this shower to be seen even in mid-July. We call these particular shower meteors Perseids, because they appear to radiate from a spot in the middle of the constellation of Perseus, which lies in the northeastern sky after mid-night.

The meteoroids of the shower are traveling around the sun, all in about the same path. We cross that stream in mid-August and, as we do so, many of the meteoroids enter our atmosphere and destroy themselves. The maximum number of meteors of the Perseid shower is not likely to exceed about one per minute, at about 3 a.m. on August 12.

Mysterious Bathrobed Thief Loots Dorms Here, At Duke

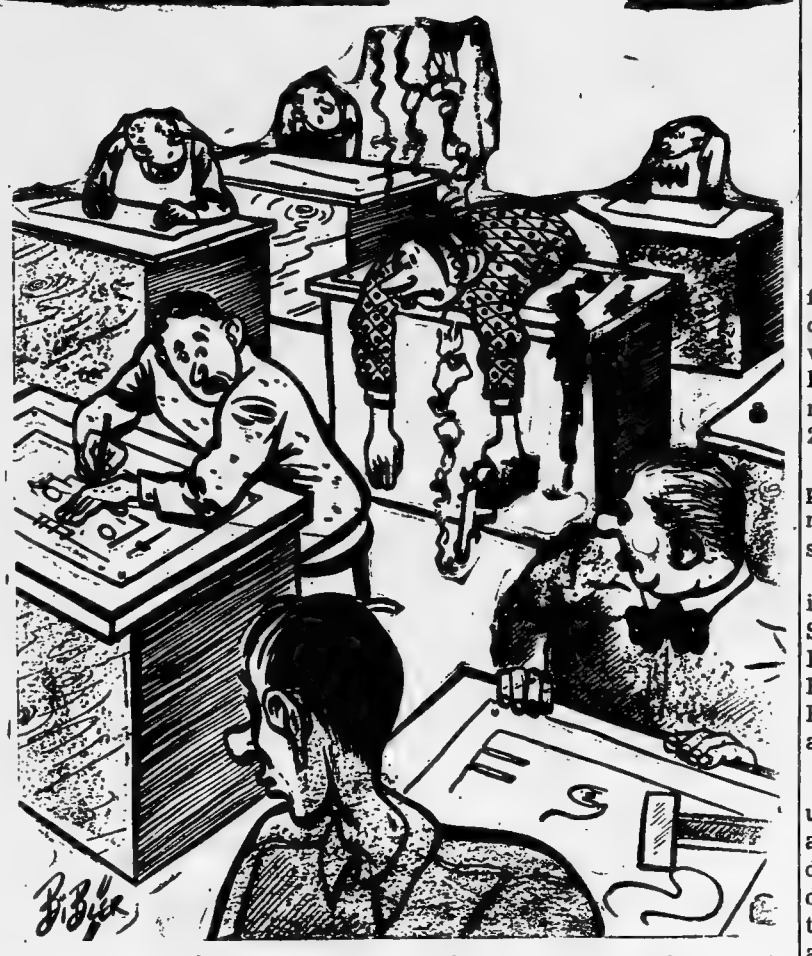
Light-Fingered Wallet-Filcher Gets $375 in Cash From Manley, Grimes

Chapel Hill police reported Wednesday they were looking for a mysterious "bathrobed figure with a towel around his neck" who took advantage of the fact that many students had just cashed their veterans' checks to steal $375 from men's dormitories here and $64 in a simllar robbery at Duke University.

Local officers said they were cooperating with Durham police in an effort to track down the thief who is suspected of committing both robberies. Other colleges and schools in this area have been warned against the light-fingered night-hawk.

Pete Gerns, president of the Interdormitory Council, said that at least 21 students in Manley and Grimes Dormitories had lost money to the intruder, who used a tiny pen-sized flashlight and some fast talking to gain his ends. He only entered rooms in which students were sleeping with their doors open, and stole nothing but cash, leaving watches and other valuables untouched. As much as $78 was taken from a single student.

One student reported that he awoke during the night and remembered drowsily noticing a finger of light flashing in the room, but dismissed it as nothing. His wallet was missing in the morning. Chief W. T. Sloan said that one of the thief's habits was to steal the entire wallet instead of just lifting the cash, but not even any empty wallets have been discovered or reported so far.



Another student told police he saw a stranger, dressed in bathrobe and with a towel thrown about his neck, wandering through the upper halls of the dorm. He questioned him, and was told the man was looking for "L. K. Parkinson," a name not listed in the Student Directory. The dorm resident referred him to the first-floor room roster.

Last Saturday night, the day following the local thefts, students at Duke reported a total loss of $64 and said a man "around 30 years old" and dressed in the same manner as the Chapel Hill "stranger" had been seen wandering through the halls of the looted dormitory.

Melodrama Is Being Readied For Showing

Playmakers Slate Play Aug. 19, 20

Rehearsals are now underway for "Night Must Fall," a melodrama by Emlyn Williams, which will be presented by the Carolina Playmakers in the Playmaker Theater here August 19-20.

Harry Davis is directing the play, which will be the final major production of the summer season by the Playmakers.

Included in the cast are William MacIlwinnen, Fayetteville; Sally Scott, Claremont, Calif.; Bill Hardy, Durham; Jane and Bern Barrow, Lincoln University, Pa.; Louise Lamont, Chapel Hill, and Dorothy Berry, Durham.

"Night Must Fall" is an unusual play which is very popular among little theater and college dramatic groups. There is a great deal of mystery and suspense in the play, but the author has managed to insert many lively scenes of humor to give the audience a respite from the tense atmosphere of the piece.

Tickets are on sale in Swain Hall and at Ledbetter-Pickard's.

Cancer Course Is Being Held Here This Week

A short course in cancer diagnosis and treatment and other subjects pertaining to cancer is being conducted Monday through Friday by the University School of Public Health for the benefit of their graduate students and other interested persons.

Attending the symposium will be doctors from Bowman Gray, Duke, and the University medical schools in addition to representatives from the state Board of Health. Other practicing physicians from throughout the state have been invited and are expected to take part in the program.

Oxford Boy Awarded Fraternity Scholarship

Archibald Taylor Fort, 18-year-old graduate of Oxford High School, has been named winner of the $2,000 Andrew Bershak Interfraternity Council Scholarship, it was announced by Dean Dudley D. Carroll, chairman of the Scholarship Committee.

This year's award marked the second time that the Bershak scholarship has been presented to a University freshman. The recipient will receive annual grants of $500 covering a four-year tenure. The scholarship is made possible through contributions from members of the various social fraternities and is presented by the Interfraternity Council.

Fort, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. H. Fort of Raleigh street, Oxford, won the Bershak award on the basis of his scholastic record, extracurricular activities, character, and financial need. He plans to work for an A.B. degree in a field that will prepare him for duties as a city manager.

While attending high school in Oxford, Fort played football for three years, basketball for four years, was a member of the Beta Club, Athletic Association.

Number of Special Shows Are Being Held During This Month

A number of special shows are being presented at the Morehead Planetarium this month, Dr. Roy K. Marshall announced Wednesday.

Delegates to the Women's Farm and Home Week programs at State College in Raleigh were entertained Wednesday at special demonstrations at 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. The group came to Chapel Hill by special buses from Raleigh.

Delegates to the Institute for Teachers of Mathematics at Duke University August 8-19 will see a special show at 5:30 p.m. next Tuesday.

The Carolina Food Dealers' convention in Durham will feature on its program a Planetarium show at 3:30 August 22, and members of the North and South Carolina Kiwanis Clubs who will convene here the latter part of the month will attend shows on August 28 and 29.

Through July, the total paid attendnce at the Planetarium was approximately 40,000, Dr. Marshall said. Around August 21, he estimated, the 50,000th ticket will be sold. It will also be the 17th anniversary of Dr. Marshall's first Planetarium show in Chicago, and also his birthday.

Highlighting the weekend will be a round dance in the Y Court Saturday night at 8:30.

The dance, being sponsored by Graham Memorial, will feature the music of Wally Andrews and his orchestra.

Summer Session Chorus Set For Concert in Hill Aug. 22

The Summer Session Chorus will be heard in concert on Monday evening, August 22, at 8:30 in Hill Hall. Among the works to be performed will be the well-known cantata "Sleepers Wake," by Bach. Martha Hall, Carl Perry, and Eugene Stryker will have solo roles.

A feature of especial interest will be the first performance in Chapel Hill of three "Fuguing Tunes," by the early American composer, Billings. These lively, catchy melodies were sung in the churches during Revolutionary times and by the soldiers themselves. They represent some of the earliest native American music.

The program will also include a short chorus from the Gluck opera "Orpheus," the mighty "Halleluja" from Beethoven's "Mount of Olives," and two modern settings of texts from "Alice in Wonderland."

The concert is free and open to all. Tom Nichols and Richard Rancourt will play the piano and organ accompaniments. The chorus is under the direction of Edgar vom Lehn.

Looking over the

Carolina Front

with Chuck Hauser

THE UNIVERSITY MADE THE FRONT PAGES of state newspapers again this week with the "news" that prospective members of the UNC faculty are being asked, in the regular hiring questionaire, whether they are, or ever have been, affiliated with the Communist Party. The story originated with a Durham Herald reporter who telephoned Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., to ask him if such a question were being asked.

Now we ask you, izzat news? It seems to us that back on May 24, 1949, the Board of Trustees voted to leave the matter of "Communism-on-the-campus" up to the University administration, and unanimously agreed not to institute a Chapel Hill witch-hunt. At that meeting Mr. Carmichael told the Trustees that "We will satisfy ourselves as far as is humanly possible to determine" that future employes would not be Communists or have any affiliation

So it seems obvious that the first step is merely asking prospective faculty members if they are or have been. The administration doesn't stop there, certainly; "as far as is humanly possible" covers a wide range. But if investigation proves that the person was lying when he answered "no" to the question, the University can fire him in a rush for being a liar.

The most ludicrous aspect of the whole matter was the fact that the Durham Herald reporter proceeded to call up Communist Hans Freistadt after he spoke to the Controller and asked him (probably in his best "the-press-would-like-a-statement" tone of voice) if he would comment on the situation. Comrade Hans bristled his crew cut and piped, "I consider the questions a violation of academic freedom. They are inconsistent with the 1940 statement of principles of the American Association of Professors."

Does Freistadt think that Russia, the country he says he admires so much, permits academic freedom on the campuses of the Soviet Union? If he is as smart as he is supposed to be in the physics laboratory, he must realize that the very nature of a country run under a Communist dictatorship necessarily prohibits academic freedom, freedom of speech, and freedom of assembly. (The reds throw in prohibition of freedom of religion on the side).

And while we're on the subject of red fascism, we're reminded of the story of the American military attache in Moscow who was being taken on a tour of the city. His Russian escorts led him down into a beautifully constructed subway which he complimented highly, but he was puzzled over the fact that no trains were running.

"This is a fine piece of work," he said, "but why aren't there any trains running?"

The Russians glared at him and snapped back:

"And what about the lynchings in the South?!"

Grid Season Rapidly Approaching; Golf Pitching Tops Week's Murals

With the second summer school session at the halfway mark, the big Intramural news of the week concerns the big golf pitching tournament today and tomorrow and the approaching softball playoffs, scheduled to begin on Monday between the top two teams in each of the three leagues.

The golf pitching contest is the first to be held this summer and a large number of local golfers are expected to enter competition. Anyone may enter the contest, and all that is required of the entrant is that he or she be on hand either today or tomorrow between the hours of three and six, with a club and five or six golf balls.

Hot battles are being waged for the top positions in all three of the softball leagues. In the League 1 pennant fight, the Ags and A-Dorm 1 both have perfect, 3-0 records.

In League two the PiKA and Town nines are out in front with each team claiming two wins and no defeats. Dick Veasey has turned in a near perfect pitching record for the Town outfit, hurling two one-hit shutouts to keep his team in the running. The first was a 10-0 victory over A.Dorm 2 and the second a 14-0 whitewashing of the Sig Eps.

However, the PiKA nine, champions of the first session's playoffs, can be counted on to put up a strong defense of teir campus title.

In League 3, Steele Dormitory has had things pretty much its own way and rules the roost with an unbeaten, 3-0 record. TEP is in the runner-up spot with a 1-1 record, while the Chi Delts, who were forced to postpone their first three contests because of rain or conflicts, might possible rise up and challenge the league leaders.

Tennis play is proceeding according to schedule, as is the horseshoe tourney. Winners of Monday night's opening orund horseshoe singles session were Doug Cooper and Crowder of Manley Dormitory, defending champion Red Gerringer, and McDonald of Battle Dorm.

A bait casting contest similar to the one held last session is on tab for Thursday, August 18.

Ruffin Sideline

Dalton Ruffin, outstanding sophomore candidate for the varsity football blocking back position this fall, might be unable to play at all this season because of an aggravated old back injury, it was learned from team trainers and physicians last wek.

The 210-pound prep school and freshman star from Fort Lauderdale, Fla. was converted from a tackle to the blocking back position by the Tar Heel coaching staff in the hope that he would be able to help out lettermen Eddie Knox and Paul Rizzo at that position this fall. He was expected to see plenty of action during the season.

Choo Choo Song May Be Recorded By Tex Beneke

"All The Way, Choo Choo," the popular song describing the talents of Charlie Justice, has a chance to gain national popularity if Tar Heel fans will rally to its support and write to disc jockey Kurt Webster at Station WBT, Charlotte, before Saturday, according to its lyricist, Tar Heel publisher Orville Campbell.

Webster, better known to his many listeners as the "Night Mayor," stated last Staurday night on his program that he would be glad to forward all letters concerning the recording of the tune to Tex Beneke, nationally famous band leader.

The song was first recorded by the Sigma Chi sextet. The music is by Hank Beebe, talented Carolina music major. Several disc jockeys in the state, including Webster, have been playing the tune nightly since its debut several weeks ago.

Campbell has expressed hope that several thousand letters will reach Webster by Saturday.

VA Representative To Be Here Monday

Veterans' Adviser F. C. Shepherd said Wednesday that a representative from the Veterans Administration would be in 315 South Building on Monday to talk to students who have not received any checks for June or July. The hours are 10 to 1 o'clock and 2 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

King Football is preparing reign supreme again. With baseball on the way out and the first official football practice schedule to begin in less than three weeks Tar Heel fans are once more turning to the great gridiron sport that has done so much to keep Carolina on the national sports map in recent years.

Head Coach Carl Snavely, one of the top men responsible for Carolina's great teams of the past three seasons, last week issued invitations to 58 members of last year's varsity and freshman squads, asking them to be on hand when pre-season drills begin on September 1.

Spearheaded by All-American tailback Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice, said by many to be the greatest triple-threat back in Southern Conference history, and by All-American end Art Weiner, the 1949 squad will include nine lettermen from last year's Sugar Bowl outfit.

Justice, who will be donning a Carolina uniform for the last time this season, will be depended upon more than ever to take the brunt of the Tar Heel attack. The little tailback who led Carolina through three glorious years that saw the Tar Heels send two teams to the Sugar Bowl and capture the nation's spotlight time and again, will carry the hopes of Carolina fans from Yankee Stadium to Baton Rouge, in what will undoubtedly be one of the hardest campaigns ever undertaken by a Tar Heel team.

Must Fill Holes

However, there will be gaping holes in the line and numerous spots in the backfield that must be filled by those untried sophomores—29 in number—who are returning from the 1948 unbeaten freshman squad to cast their lot with their varsity mates.

Gone are such powerhouses as Len Szafaryn, Ted Hazelwood, Chan Highsmith, Sid Varney, Bob Mitten, and others long feared by opposing linemen and backs alike. And gone is Hammering Hosea Rodgers, "Mr. Inside" of 1948.

In fact, there will be no lettermen tackles and only one lettermen guard—Bill Wardle—available come Sept. 1. But fouch 200-pound sophomore guard Joe Dudeck should be capable of holding down one of those slots, while Bill Kuhn, Julian King, Buford Lewis, and Egbert Williams, all sophomores topping the 200-pound mark, are expected to help solve the tackle shortage for Line Coach Marvin Bass.

In addition to Art Weiner, the Tar Heels have several other capable flankers, with Ken Powell and place-kicking Bob Cox leading the list. Also in line for plenty of action are Ed Washington, Ed Bilpuch, and sophomore Bill O'Brien.

Fullback Needed

In the backfield the big question mark at present is the fullback position, vacated by Hosea Rodgers. Reserves Joe Gurtis and Billy Hayes, and two sophomores, Dick Wiess and George Verchuck, are in the running for that spot. Johnny Clements is the number one candidate for the wingback position, but Fred Sherman, who showed a great promise before being sidelined with a knee injury early last season, is also making a bid for the first string berth

George Pegram To Play At Square Dance, UVA

George Pegram, self-styled champion banjo picker of North Carolina, will be the headliner at two campus festivities this weekend, entertaining at the Y Court square dance Friday night and at the University Veterans Association Clubhouse on Saturday evening.

The square dance will get underway at 8:30, and will be sponsored by the Summer Activities Council. Arnold Wilson will do the calling. In case of rain, the dance will be moved to the Rendezvous Room in Graham Memorial.

In addition to Pegram's show at the UVA Clubhouse Saturday, pianist Bob McDonald will entertain Friday evening, along with the UVA quiz show which will give away five prizes and a giant jackpot.

Acting President Vestal Taylor said that the food counter will be reopened, selling short orders, sandwiches, and soft drinks. Dancing is in order at all times.

Travel Agency To Provide Cheap Rates To New York

Students whose football season finances are not in the best of health, GI's who can't seem to make that monthly check stretch, and economy-minded people in general are offered a chance to attend the Carolina-Notre Dame football game in New York this fall for a mere drop in the bucket.

The Graham Memorial Travel Agency announced Wednesday that $25 will pay for a round-trip ticket to New York and one night's lodging. Meals, football ticket, and entertainment will be the only additional expenses.

Reclining seat busses will leave Chapel Hill at 6 o'clock in the afternoon on Friday, Nov. 11, and will arrive in New York at 8 o'clock in the morning, Saturday, Nov. 12. Hotel accommodations for room with bath (two persons to a room) will be arranged for Saturday night.

Busses will leave New York at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, Sunday, Nov. 13, and will arrive in Chapel Hill at 7 o'clock in the morning, Monday, Nov. 14.

This makes it possible for a large number of students to give the team moral support and also gives those who have never seen the "Big Town" a chance to look it over. Students interested are urged to make plans as soon as possible.

For detialed information call 9882, or visit personally the Graham Memorial Travel Agency, located on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

The Carolina-Notre Dame weekend this fall is expected to rival last year's Washington weekend, when the Tar Heels beat the University of Maryland, 49-20. The local football fans who took the nation's capital by storm received nearly as much publicity in the newspapers as the football teams.

New York may be a lot bigger than Washington, but most loyal Tar Heels are willing to make a try at leaving a mark on the eastern metropolis, at any rate.

Card Detective Michael MacDougall To Give Free Show Thursday Night

An evening of interesting entertainment open to the campus is in store Thursday at 8:30 in Memorial Hall when Michael MacDougall, eminent card detective, will be presented under the auspices of Graham Memorial.

MacDougall appeared here last summer and proved very popular with all who saw his performance. He is being sponsored by the Summer Activities Council.

A slender, dapper man with the most innocent of expressions and a pair of incredibly dexterious hands, MacDougall is engaged in a most odd profession. He exposes card sharps, crooked dice games, and a variety of cheats.

A radio lecturer and writer on crooked gambling, he usually leaves his audiences gasping. He has been called in by Uncle Sam on investigations, made talks over the radio, and written about gambling for such magazines as Esquire, Liberty, and Cosmopolitan.

He has written several authoritative books including "Gamblers Don't Gamble," "Danger in the Cards," "Card Mastery," and "Dice and Cards."

Playmaker Melodrama Slated Friday, Saturday

Highlighting the weekend entertainment bill will be the presentation of "Night Must Fall" by the Carolina Playmakers Friday and Saturday evenings in the Playmaker Theater. Curtain time is 8:30 and all seats are reserved. Tickets may be obtained at the Playmaker business office in Swain Hall or at Ledbetter-Pickards.

Thursday night last minute problems and changes will be ironed out at dress rehearsal. According to Director Harry Davis, the play is in fine shape and it is expected that few changes will have to be made at dress rehearsal. The cast has been familiar with the stage setting since the first of the week and the only thing new will be makeup and some costumes.

Davis has very cleverly utilized both cockney and the more cultured English dialects without either one being forced. The members of the cast have adapted themselves to the idividual characters assigned to them with a naturalness which is pleasing.

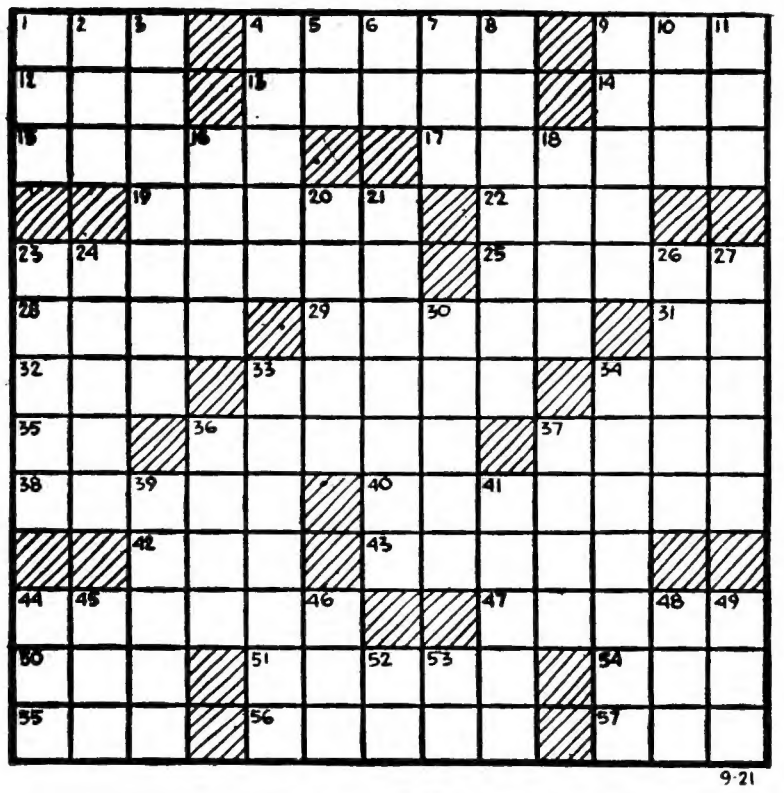
New York, Here We Come

Graham Memorial has come through again to prove to the campus that a student union can be of service to the students. The union's Travel Agency, begun many moons ago by Director Bob Watson, announced this week that round-trip passage to next fall's Carolina-Notre Dame game in New York, plus lodging for one night, will be available to students for only $25.



We don't know what you think, but right offhand, we'd say that is a darned good bargain. The travel accomodation will be buses with reclining coach seats, scheduled to make the long haul in only 14 hours. The buses will leave Chapel Hill at 6 o'clock Friday evening and arrive in New York at 8 o'clock the next morning. Football fans will have the morning free in New York, see the game at Yankee Stadium, and be able to spend Saturday night and practically all day Sunday in the Big City doing just any little old thing they desire. The return trip will take off at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and will wind up in Chapel Hill an hour before 8 o'clock classes Monday morning.

The weekend promises to be a good one, and thanks to Graham Memorial, even those of us who are low on finances will be able to attend the Big Game.

Good Riddance to Tradition

Every time you turn around these days, you're liable to stumble over a new brick walk somewhere. The Buildings Department seems to be doing a fine job in giving more and more tradition-filled campus walks that "new look."

One of these days sometime in the future, it is our hope that all the walks at the University will be brick-paved, and all the jokes about traditional quicksand will be long buried.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

POLITICS SEEMS to be rearing its head on campus again, even though this is summer. The Campus Party, according to Chairman Vestal C. Taylor, will gather together at 7:30 Thursday evening in Roland Parker Lounge No. 1 in Graham Memorial to discuss policy for the opening of the fall quarter.

Taylor says all members enrolled for the second session are expected to be present at the meeting. If we may inject a personal remark at this point, it's good to see something political going on for a change.

AND SPEAKING of politics, Communist Hans Freistadt says there will be a meeting of the Karl Marx Study Society, of which he is chairman, at 8 o'clock Thursday, in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial. Bait Casting, Softball Top Week's Mural Slate

A bait casting tournament and softball playoffs hold the spotlight as the 1949 summer Intramural program enters its final week. The bait casting contest is scheduled for tonight at 6 o'clock at Kessing Pool adjacent to Woollen Gym, while the campus softball championship will be decided Monday afternoon.

Big Turnout

A total of 789 individuals took part in the Carolina Intramural program during the first session of summer school, according to information recently released by the Intramural department.

Softball competition headed the list of activities, with 360 students participating in the competition for campus honors. Second only to softball was the tennis tournament, in which 158 were entered. The dancing class, co-sponsored by the mural department and Graham Memorial, ranked third in popularity, with 150 taking part.

The horseshoe tourney attracted 70 contestants, while 30 attended the fencing classes and 21 entered the bait casting contest.

The bait casting tourney is the second to be held this summer. Coach Walter Rabb captured first-place honors in the first one, held during the first session of summer school. Anyone can participate in the contest, with prizes being awarded to the three highest scorers.

All that is required of the entrant is that he be on hand at 6 o'clock tonight at the pool. Everyone should use his own rod and reel if possible; however, a few will be available at the pool.

Hot Competition

The single elimination softball playoffs that began Monday climaxed a session of hot competition in all three of the mural loops. In Leagues I and III, three teams were deadlocked for the number one spot, and in League II, the winner was not decided until the final game.

In League II, the Town team, only unbeaten outfit in any of the leagues, took top place with a 4-0 record. The Pi Kappa Alpha nine, winners of the first session title, earned a spot in the playoffs with three wins and one loss. The Town aggregation clinched first place by stopping the PiKAs, 3-2, in an extra-inning battle, with Dick Veasey tossing a three-hitter for the winners.

Tie For First

Sigma Chi, the Ags, and A-Dorm 1 ended in a first-place tie in League I. All three teams won four games and dropped one. In League III the Steele, Chi Delt, and TEP outfits gained berths in the playoffs, ending in a three-way deadlock for first place with 3-1 records.

On Monday, the Sigma Chi nine advanced to the semi-finals of the championship series by edging the Ags, 5-2. They will meet the winner of the Town-Chi Delt tilt at 4 o'clock this afternoon on Intramural Field.

The strong A-Dorm team gained the semi-final round by eliminating the PiKA nine, 10-7. The A-Dormers will take on the winner of the TEP-Steele tussel this afternoon at 4. The final contest between today's victors for the campus crown will take place Monday afternoon at 4 on Intramural Field.

SPORTS SHORTS

Third-seeded VICTOR SEIXAS reached the semi-final round before being eliminated in the Casino Invitational Grass Courts Tennis Tournament at Newport, R. I., last week....LEN SZAFARYN, one of Carolina's top tackles for the past three seasons and now with the professional Washington Redskins, has been converted to a guard by the Captal City coaches because his 225 pounds is considered too heavy for the tackle position in pro football....According to one Washington sports writer, CHARLIE JUSTICE is headed for the Redskins after he finishes his fourth and final season of kicking, passing, and carrying the pigskin for Carolina this fall.... COLLIER HILL and BILL BUTLER, members of Chapel Hill High School's undefeated 1948 grad team, played for the Eastern team in the first annual East-West high school All-Star football game in Greensboro Friday night. Hill, who started at left half, scored the final touchdown as the Easterners chalked up a 20-7 victory....BILL GRICE, local high school mentor, was on the coaching staff of the Eastern eleven....Also on hand for the All-Star proceedings was IVA-LEE Hill, brother of Collier and star guard on last year's championship basketball team. The local cager took part in the East-West basketball tilt Wednesday night....JACK COOKE, 185-pound fullback for the Westerners, is slated to enter Carolina this fall. A product of Winston-Salem's Hanes High, Cooke averaged 6.7 yards in 12 trips with the pigskin Friday night.... Carolina's athletic department has announced that no more applications will be accepted for tickets for the Tar Heel-Notre Dame football game in New York's Yankee Stadium on November 12. A special card section will be reserved for Carolina students near the center of the field....Ducats are still available for the rest of Carolina's games. ...Chapel Hill's strong swimming team captured team honors in the Southern AAU swimming meet in Wilson last weekend.... BILL (EARTHQUAKE) SMITH, star tackle on Carolina's 1946-47 grid teams, may play with the Charlotte Clippers professional outfit this fall.

Local Fencing Club Meetings Cancelled

Franz E. Ross, University faculty member in charge of Carolina's recently-organized fencing club, announced this week that the club will suspend further activity until the fall quarter, when the sport will be included in the physical education program for the first time.

Ross, who was largely responsible for the organization and success of the fencing club last spring, expressed hope that the local club might be able to engage teams from nearby schools in regular matches before the end of the year. Several Southern schools have shown interest in scheduling matches with the Tar Heel fencers.

The club, sponsored by the Intramural department, met twice weekly during the first session of summer school, and will continue these meetings as soon as possible after the opening of the fall term.

Court Suits Are Planned For Negroes

Lawyer Releases Plans of NAACP

One or more suits to admit Negro students to graduate schools of the University will be filed in Federal Court in Greensboro before the end of this month, Durham Negro attorney C. O. Pearson announced this week.

Pearson, who represents the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the NAACP will sponsor the suits, one of which will involve Harold Epps of Asheville, graduate of the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham. Epps was one of the Negroes who picketed the General Assembly last spring, demanding a library building for the Durham school.

A student group formed on campus this summer called the "Non-Partisan Committee for Harold Epps" was organized to push Epps' admission to the UNC Law School, but became inactive at Pearson's request.

Other Negro students who have applied to the University, according to Pearson, are Joseph Parker and Thomas Hubbard of Durham, for the Medical School; and Thomas E. Malone, also of Durham, for the Graduate School.

Dean Henry Brandis of the Law School said that Epps' application had been received last spring, but turned down. He said former Dean R. H. Wettach told Epps his application was refused because there were facilities for Negro law students at North Carolina College.

The offices of the Medical and Graduate Schools reported they had no information or applications concerning either Parker, Hubbard or Malone.

Veep Unofficially Backs Former UNC President

The news from Washington on junior North Carolina Senator Frank Porter Graham has been flying fast and thick during the past week, highlighted by the report that Vice-President Alben Barkley has unofficially endorsed Dr. Frank for re-election to his seat in 1950.

DR. FRANK P. GRAHAM

Barkley told a group of Lumberton business men visiting in Washington that "We are very fond....no, we are infatuated with your good senator from North Carolina. We don't want to get into any local contests, but we do hope you send Graham back up here."

Dr. Graham himself expressed his views to the press on the House-approved displaced persons bill which faces the Senate Judiciary Committee, of which he is a member. The bill would allow 339,000 persons to come into the country in three years in place of the approximately 205,000 in two years under present law.

The bill would also remove some restrictions which President Truman has said slow up action and discriminate against Catholics and Jews. Graham said he was definitely for the bill, and would vote that way when it comes before the committee.

The former University president spoke this week from Washington on a radio program which was broadcast throughout the state to initiate a $250,000 fund campaign as a memorial to the late Negro educator Dr. James E. Shepard. Gov. Kerr Scott and other state officials spoke on the program from Raleigh.

Dr. Shepard was president of the North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham. Dr. Graham said about him, "Even in death he serves the college he loved so well," speaking of the memorial fund drive for the school.

On the lighter side, news came from Manteo on the Outer Banks that Dr. Frank and Paul Green, James Street and Betty Smith from the Chapel Hill writers' colony would appear as guest artists in the "Lost Colony" pageant on Roanoke Island. The Senator will play the role of Capt. Armadas in the historical drama, as a part of the Kay Kyser-instituted program of Celebrity Nights.

Graham Gets Big Ovation At Nag's Head

Carmichael, Scott Also Attend Meet

By Roy Parker, Jr.

NAG'S HEAD—With a distinguished person-studded audience rising to pay homage with a thundering ovation, Senator Frank Porter Graham addressed the ninth Greater University Day alumni luncheon here at the Carolinian Hotel last week.

Senator Graham, former president of the Greater University, praised the teamwork that had made it "one of the nation's greatest universities of the people." He called on the people of the state to get behind Gov. Kerr Scott's program of "commonwealth building" and through teamwork continue the "new beginnings that will work for the greater health, abundance and glory of the people of North Carolina."

Dr. Frank continued his talk with a serious discussion of the University building program and made several remarks on the "Lost Colony" state historical pageant on Roanoke Island.

Other state officials and notables who gave talks and attended th celebration were Governor Scott, Greater University Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., alumnus Kay Kyser and wife (Gorgeous) Georgia Carroll, Dr. Sam Selden, director of the Outer Banks drama and head of the University Dramatic Arts Department, and many others.

Professor Here

"Old Professor" Kay Kyser was back in town this week, leaving smiling faces and jokes in his path everywhere he went.

The famous North Carolina band leader, who has been vacationing on the Outer Banks and working on plans for improving "The Lost Colony" historical pageant on Roanoke Island said the "Colony" was doing fine this year.

Water, Not Fire

No it wasn't a fire which hit the Steele Dormitory basement book store last week--that fire hose stretched for 50 feet or so to a hydrant in front of Saunders was part of the equipment an emergency crew was using to stop water damage in the building.

H. R. Ritchie, manager of the Book Exchange, explained that water from the recent heavy rains was seeping into the bookstore and causing considerable damage, and the hose was being used to pump water through a clogged-up drain which was thought to be the seat of the trouble.

"We're using the hose with the hope that we may force any obstruction, such as paper cups or other trash, through the clogged drain," Ritchie said. "If this doesn't work students may have to wear hip boots in order to buy supplies."

Old Well Has Shining Coat Of New Paint

The most famous of all campus landmarks received a shiny new coat of paint this week.

The Old Well, white and gleaming again, was ready to fall proudly under the gaze of incoming freshmen and homecoming football alumni in the fall.

The present well is not the original one which stood in the center of the campus. The first well was ordered torn down in 1897 by University President Edwin A. Alderman, who described it as "squalid and ramshackle". Alderman wanted a new edifice of "marked dignity and beauty."

The "new" well, when it was constructed soon after, was described by the President as "a sort of sixth cousin to a Greek shrine, or third cousin of the Temple of Versailles."

So without any fear of being embarrassed by a shabby well which was rapidly approaching the state of the original well when President Alderman ordered it razed, you can tell your friends again in the fall to "Meet me at the Old Well."

Language Confusion

Swalin Conducting in Shorts Might Detract From Dignity

The honor of the state of North Carolina and more besides was at stake in Mexico City last week, and it all hinged around a dress suit and the dignified person of Dr. Benjamin Swalin of Chapel Hill, director of the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra.

Dr. Swalin was conducting a Mexico City Symphony concert, and all arrangements were made in Spanish by mail. The conductor didn't have any trouble translating the letters, with the aid of the University Spanish Department, but there seemed still to be a little confusion on the language side.

Dr. Swalin was horrified when he arrived in Mexico City prepared to give the concert in white tie and tails only to find that it was to be held in the morning, and Mexican custom demanded a cutaway with striped trousers.

The Mexican officials said "full dress" in their letters, and the obvious conclusion was that that meant formal evening tails. At any rate, Mrs. Swalin dispatched the necessary clothes by express, and was assured that they would reach Mexico City in time to prevent Dr. Swalin from having to conduct in his shorts.

Three Units Are Slated By Trustees

Commerce School To Get Buildings

The University Board of Trustees Building Committee announced Wednesday that it had voted unanimously to establish not one, but three separate buildings for the enlarged School of Commerce.

Although administrative officials of the Commerce School had recommended a single building, the committee voted for the three-edifice plan to conform to the general campus expansion and architectural program, which calls for three buildings across the mall from, and similar to, Manning, Murphey and Saunders Halls. The expansion plan was set up when the new building program began in the early 1920's.

The possibility that the three separate buildings might hinder the efficient operating of the School of Commerce was carefully investigated, and all facts obtained gave the green light to the proposal. Officials said this week that they hope plans for the buildings will be ready for contractors sometime this fall.

The big headache connected with the building program now faces the campus Safety Committee, a student organization which must find some place to park all the cars which the commerce buildings will displace from their present space behind Memorial Hall and the YMCA Building.

Gerns Reports Recent Actions Of Dorm Council

President Pete Gerns of the Interdormitory Council reported Wednesday on recent action of the dormitory governing group, and hit a cheery note by pointing out that the council was still working on its plans to provide social rooms for A, B, C, and Whitehead in the fall.

The Judicial Board of the organization reported that it had completed writing its penal code, providing for suspension and probation of dorm residents found guilty of violation of dormitory social rules. Chairman Ken Black gave a report on two cases recently tried, both of which resulted in sentences of indefinite suspension.

In other action, the council made a strong recommendation to the Safety Committee that stoplights be installed at Woollen Gymnasium and at the triangle near the Med School, and defeated a motion favoring compulsory fingerprinting of students, a suggestion which arose after the recent wave of dormitory and fraternity house thefts.

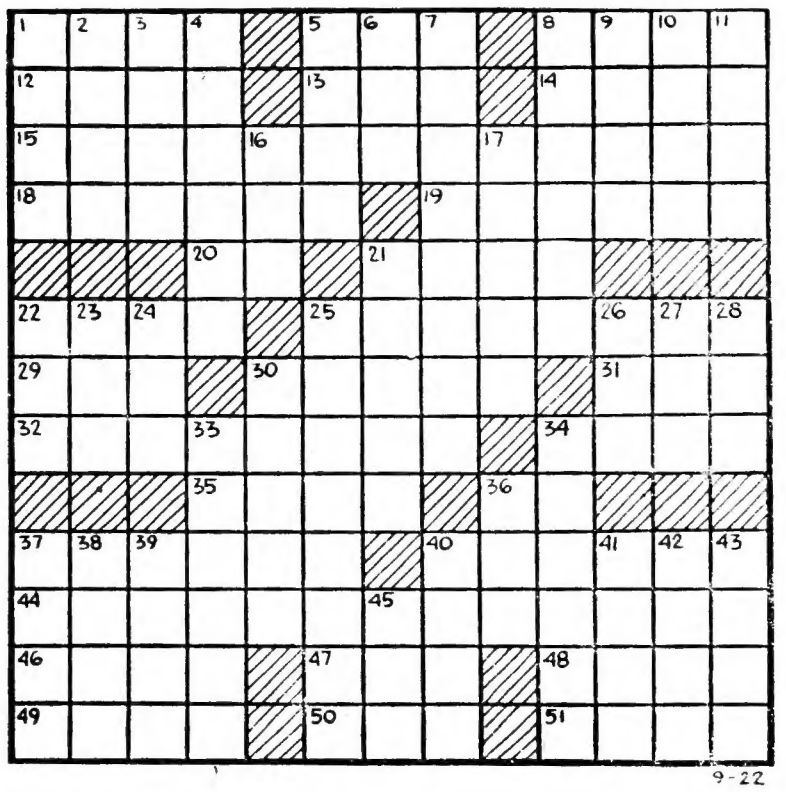
Looking over the

Carolina Front



with Chuck Hauser

NOW THAT THE SUMMER IS ALMOST OVER; that is, now that the Chapel Hill part of the summer is almost over, we can look back over its parties and its work, and look forward to football season and loads of fun in the fall at Carolina.

We've had a lot of visitors with us this summer, and we hope thay will take with them a lot of fond memories when they leave us. We also hope they will take the following bits of knowledge, which they should have discovered for themselves in the course of the summer: (1) Chapel Hill is noe a hotbed of Communism; (2) Nobody who knows anything about Senator Frank Porter Graham has anything but the greatest admiration for him as one of the finest, most Christian gentleman alive in the world today; (3) Even Hans Freistadt, our single admitted Red, hasn't stirred up any Bolshevick revolts that we've heard about.

AND SPEAKING OF COMRADE FREISTADT reminds us that we would like to tell everyone who would like to get his methods and manners of evading questions he doesn't want to answer down in black and white, to buy a copy of the latest American Mercury Magazine. It contains word for word a television program in Washington on which Freistadt appeared, "Meet the Press." It makes interesting reading.

By the way, last week's academic freedom meeting turned up an interesting statement on the Reds quoted by Time from The Communist Magazine, May, 1937: Communist teachers must take advantage of their positions without exposing themselves to give their students working-class education. They must be thoroughly grounded in Marxism-Leninism, inject it into their teaching at the least risk of exposure and at the same time conduct struggles around the schools in a truly Bolshevick manner." Maybe that makes Freistadt a pretty lousy Red. . . .

Work Is Done On Orientation For Fall Term

Y Will Sponsor Freshman Camp

Orientation plans for fall quarter freshmen were rapidly taking shape this past week.

Orientation Committee Chairman Al Lowenstein breezed through town for a three-day stay to put some polish on fall plans and tie in loose ends of the program set up last spring. Then Lowenstein, with other student government leaders, took off for the National Students Association Congress in Urbana, Ill.

The YMCA, meanwhile, announced its plans for the first real function of the fall quarter for new students. The Y is sponsoring a pre-school freshman camp at Camp New Hope, approximately 10 miles from Chapel Hill, in Orange County.

The camp is conducted to help freshmen begin the necessary adjustment between high school and college life. Members of the administration, faculty, and student body spend time getting acquainted with the new students and acquainting them with things of interest about the University, campus tradition, and like matters.

According to Assistant Dean of Students Bill Friday, the freshman camp "is one of the finest parts of our overall orientation program. It affords an unharried opportunity to get acquainted with the significant phases of campus life and a good chance to meet informally with new classmates, teachers, and administration."

Graham Memorial Plans to Publish Freshman Booklet

A handbook, outlining the activities of Graham Memorial, University student union building, is being prepraed and will be distributed to all freshmen in the fall, Bob Watson, acting director of the building, said this week.

James Rathburn, newly appointed director of Graham Memorial, will take over his duties on September 15, Watson said. Watson, however, will continue as assistant director for the fall quarter. He has been acting director since June, 1948.

Graham Memorial will serve as headquarters for receptions for freshmen during Orientation Week, Watson added. The building will be open the entire week.

During the first part of September, the building will be closed for furniture repairs. "Fixtures are in the process of being repaired," Watson said. "Furniture is being recovered, rugs are being refurnished, and parts of the building are being recleaned."

Sper Wins AAU Crown; Ward In Amateur Event

Norman Sper became the second University of North Carolina athlete in less than two months and the third in history to win a national championship when he captured the National AAU 10 meter platform diving title at Los Angeles, Cal., last Friday. Meanwhile Harvie Ward, who became the second Tar Heel to gain national honors by winning the National Intercollegiate golf title in July, continued his great play on the links, leading all qualifiers from the two Carolinas for the National Amateur Golf Tournament in Rochester, N.Y., which starts Monday.

Sper, one of the stars on Carolina's strong swimming team last year, barely nosed out Joaquin Capilla of Mexico for the top spot in the star-studded field.

The Tar Heel tankman scored 129.25 points to 128.92 points by Capilla. Harlan of Ohio State finished third with 121.88 points.

In addition to his spot on the local swimming team, Sper has been re-elected as head cheer leader. It was he who introduced card stunts to the Carolina cheering section last fall.

Ward, North-South winner in 1948 and NCAA golf champion, will be out to add another feather to his cap when he takes part in the National Amateur tourney in Rochester next week. Most of the nation's top amateur linksmen will be on hand for the big event.

The modest Carolina golfer earned a berth in the tournament by turning in a four-under-par 72-68--140 at the Mimosa Country Club course in Morganton last week to lead the six qualifiers from the two Carolinas.

Other Southern Conference golfers who qualified are Arnold Palmer of Wake Forest and Art Wall of Duke.

Steele Nine Cops Campus Softball Title

Steele Dormitory captured the second session campus softball championship Tuesday afternoon by edging the strong Chi Delt nine, 3-2, in the final playoff tilt of the single elimination series.

With the game tied up at two-all after four innings of play, the Steelers tallied the winning marker in the bottom of the fifth when Loyd connected with a round-tripper with the bases empty.

The winners collected single runs in the second, third, and fifth frames for the victory, with the Chi Delts crossing the plate in the third and fourth innings.

Although they had the bases loaded twice, the Chi Delt aggregation found Steele hurler Stagg hard to touch in the pinches, and they left ten runners stranded on the base paths during the tilt. Siefier turned in a creditable job on the mound for the losers.

Here is the lineup of the new champions: rf-Loyd, 2b-Wehrhahn, c-Odom, 1b-Wilkerson, ss-Wilson, 3b-Mann, cf-Storey, lf-Parrish, p-Stagg.

Following is the Chi Delt lineup: 2b-Terrell, cf-Clements, 3b-Gerard lf-Rockkolts, ss-Cherry, c-Fish, rf-Edwards, 1b-McLoud p-Siefiert.

Justice Runs, Passes For 3,954 Yard Total

Charlie Justice, Carolina's great All-American triple-threater, has done just about everything but lead the Carolina band in his three years as a Tar Heel gridder, according to figures recently released by Jake Wade, sports publicist for the University.

The Ashville Ambler has netted 3,954 yards passing and running, and has punted for an overall average of 41.7 yards. He has a three-year rushing average of 5.3 yards and has completed 48.2 per cent of his passes during that time.

Justice hasn't missed a one of the 32 games since he entered Carolina in 1946 and has scored 31 touchdowns for 186 points, leading the Southern Conference in scoring two of his three years.
